

3 1761 05647985 0

~~6684prcl~~
M TVLLI CICERONIS

PRO C RABIRIO

[PERDVELLIONIS REO]

ORATIO AD QVIRITES

With Notes Introduction and Appendices

BY

W E HEITLAND MA

Fellow and Lecturer of St John's College Cambridge

EDITED FOR THE SYNDICS OF THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

London: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, 17, PATERNOSTER ROW.

Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL, AND CO.

Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS.

1882

[All Rights reserved]

PA 6281
K2
1882

Cambridge:
PRINTED BY C. J. CLAY AND SON,
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

1897
- 1110 1100

TO BENJAMIN HALL KENNEDY THIS LITTLE BOOK IS DEDICATED IN TOKEN OF AN OLD PUPIL'S AFFECTION AND GRATITUDE.

ADVERTISEMENT.

IN publishing an edition of a speech of Cicero where the text bears so small a proportion to the whole work as is here the case, I feel bound to explain my reasons for producing it in such a state.

I was driven to choose between two courses, either to issue merely a text with explanatory notes, or to attempt to grapple with all the many difficulties that environ the subject. The former of these would be useless, and no middle course seemed profitable. I have therefore made the ambitious attempt to find some sound solution of all the difficulties: but I am well aware that in so doing I have undertaken an enterprise beyond my powers.

The speech is unique, and involves constitutional and legal questions of the first importance to students of Roman history, which have for the most part to be answered by painful examination of meagre and sometimes conflicting evidence. In the collection of this, and in the consultation of the lengthy and often ill-arranged treatises of modern writers on the subject, I have found the volume of matter increase upon me daily: and have at last been compelled to leave off with the knowledge that some parts of my work are in a painfully crude state. And this probably applies far more widely than I am aware.

The study of this speech and of the interesting questions connected therewith will be especially useful to students concerned with the history of the iudicia publica, to understand which some knowledge of the earlier iudicia populi is required. And addressing myself as I do to elder students I have throughout assumed that nobody will read the book who has not a fair acquaintance with the outlines of Roman history and constitutional antiquities. I have therefore made free use of technical language, which is necessary if one is to discuss intricate and obscure questions within a reasonable compass.

The merits of the speech are plain to any that will consider the position of affairs at the time of its delivery. Party hatred, fostered by desperate men, was ready to break out into violence at any moment; and the impeachment and defence of Rabirius were ominous of the coming storm. I have in my notes on the speech striven to call attention to the clever audacity of the speaker, of which there are many notable instances.

In the endeavour to make my meaning clearer I have used an elaborate system of grouping, by which I hope the questions treated in the Introduction and appendices may be kept from mutually obscuring and interfering with one another. I have made a practice of giving either by way of reference or in full quotation the authorities for the statements upon which my conclusions are based. This is a very tedious business; and many a time have I wished that I could afford to say with Madvig 'überhaupt habe ich alles weggelassen, was nur zum Prunk der Gelehrsamkeit gehört'. But of course I could not do this, and can only hope that I have not overloaded the book with irrelevant matter.

To Mr J S Reid of Gonville and Caius College I owe and hereby render my heartiest thanks. He read the whole book through in proof and sent me most valuable notes and suggestions, of which I have made free use. To him I owe many improvements in the notes and in the readings and orthography of the text, which I have in some instances acknowledged by name. Several portions of the Introduction have been recast or amended in accordance with his suggestions. I cannot enter into further details where the debt is so great.

The text is in the main that of Baiter and Kayser's edition (Leipsic 1862), but I have not accepted all the emendations admitted by Kayser. In all cases of importance I have given my reasons in a note.

From the numerous works consulted I select a few for particular mention Lange, Römische Alterthümer, vol I ed 3 (1876), vol II ed 2 (1867), vol III ed 2 (1876).

Zumpt, das Criminalrecht der Römischen Republik, vol I parts 1 and 2 (1865), vol II part 1 (1868) part 2 (1869).

Zumpt, der Criminalprocess der Römischen Republik (1871), [used in appendix C].

Rein, das Criminalrecht der Römer von Romulus bis auf Justinianus (1844).

Mommsen, Römisches Staatsrecht ed 2, vol I (1876) vol II (1877).

Huschke, die Multa und das Sacramentum (1874), chiefly appendix II on the trial of Rabirius.

Becker [and Marquardt], Handbuch der Römischen Alterthümer, part II (1844) part III (1851).

Madvig, die Verfassung und Verwaltung des Römischen Staates, vol I (1881) vol II (1882).

Clark, Early Roman Law (1872).

Wordsworth, Fragments and Specimens of Early Latin (1874).

The above are generally cited by name only in the Introduction and appendix. In the notes to the speech 'Madvig' denotes his grammar (Eng trans ed 4), and 'Mommson' his history (Eng trans, library ed in 4 vols). Except in names of books I have been sparing in the use of abbreviations: indeed scitum = senatusconsultum is the only one worth mentioning.

W E HEITLAND

ST JOHN'S COLLEGE

CAMBRIDGE

Oct 5 1882.

INTRODUCTION

CONTENTS. Passages from ancient writers (a—v).

A. (a) perduellis, (b) perduellio.

B. Duumviral procedure (details a—g).

C. iudicia populi

(a) in iure and in iudicio (general), (b) action's tribuniciae, (c) in iure and in iudicio (special), (d—f) the course of a public criminal trial, (g, h) difficulties and hindrances, (i) outlawry of absent, (k) withdrawal of accuser, (l) choice of procedure, (m) multae interrogatio, (n) iudicare and iudicium, (o) general meaning of the term perduellio, (p) crimen maiestatis, (q) its effect on perduellio.

D. Register of important cases of perduellio.

E. Case of Rabirius

(a) the charge, (b) its object, (c) the question at issue and procedure employed, (d) accuser and accused, (e) party struggles and the trial, (f) the real difficulty the occasion of the speech—evidence (i) external (ii) internal.

F. Abstract of the speech, with Huschke's remarks.

I begin by quoting a number of passages of ancient writers from which our information on this subject is principally derived.

(a) Cicero pro Milone § 36 (of Clodius) *diem mihi, credo, dixerat; multam irrogarat*¹; *actionem perduellionis intenderat*¹.

¹ These two forms of process are alternative, according to Huschke p 146. See below C (n). But if we rather take the form of the sentence to be a climax, then we must admit that Cicero refers to a fine-process as an actio perduellionis.

This would of course serve to establish the conclusions arrived at in appendix K. But I do not feel so sure of this interpretation as to venture to employ the passage for this purpose.

(β) Cicero de domo sua §§ 45—6 nam cum tam moderata iudicia populi sint a maioribus constituta, primum ut ne poena capitis cum pecunia coniungatur, deinde ne improdicta die quis accusetur, ut ter ante magistratus accuset intermissa die quam multam irroget aut iudicet, quarta sit accusatio trinum mundi- num prodicta die, quo die iudicium sit futurum, tum multa etiam ad placandum atque ad misericordiam reis concessa sint, deinde exorabilis populus, facilis suffragatio pro salute, denique etiam si qua res illum diem aut auspiciis aut excusatione sustulit, tota causa iudiciumque sublatum sit:—hacc cum ita sint in re³ ubi crimen est ubi accusator ubi testes, quid indignius quam qui neque adesse sit iussus neque citatus neque accusatus, de eius capite liberis fortunis omnibus conductos et sicarios et egentis et perditos suffragium ferre et eam legem putare?

(γ) Cicero de legibus III § 36 uno in genere relinqui videbatur vocis suffragium, quod ipse Cassius exceperat, perduellionis: dedit huic quoque iudicio C Caelius tabellam doluitque quoad vixit se, ut opprimeret C Popilium, nocuisse rei publicae.

(δ) Livy I 26 §§ 5—9 atrox visum id facinus patribus plebi- que, sed recens meritum facto obstabat. tamen raptus in ius ad regem. rex, ne ipse tam tristis ingrati- que ad vulgus iudicii ac secundum iudicium supplicii auctor esset, concilio populi advocato duumviros, inquit, qui Horatio perduellionem iudicent secundum legem facio. lex horrendi carminis erat: duumviri perduellio- nem iudicent; si a duumviris provocarit, provocatione certato; si vincent, caput obnubito; infelici arbori reste suspendito; ver- berato vel intra pomerium vel extra pomerium. hac lege duum- viri creati, qui se absolvere non rebantur ea lege ne innoxium quidem posse, cum condemnassent, tum alter ex eis, Publi Horati, tibi perduellionem iudico, inquit. lictor, conliga manus. accesser- rat lictor inicibatque laqueum. tum Horatius auctore Tullo, clemente legis interprete, provoco, inquit. ita de provocatione certatum ad populum est. moti homines sunt in eo iudicio maxime P Horatio patre proclamante se filiam iure caesam

³ Madvig (adversaria II p 317) re- marks that this should have been in ca re ubi crimen sit. He therefore emends

in reo ubi crimen est. To reus is op- posed qui neque, etc. He also reads putari for putare below.

*iudicare; ni ita esset, patrio iure in filium animadversurum fuisse*³.

(e) Livy II 41 § 11 (case of Sp Cassius) invenio apud quosdam, idque propius fidem est, a quaestoribus Caesone Fabio et L Valerio diem dictam perduellionis, damnatumque populi iudicio, dirutas publice aedes.

(§) Livy VI 20 § 12 (of Manlius) sunt qui per duumviros qui de perduellione anquirent creatos auctores sint damnatum. tribuni de saxo Tarpeio deiecerunt.

(η) Schol Bob (Orelli p 337, case of P Claudius Pulcher) hic consul apud Drapanam adversus auspicia Poenis classe conflictit. ea pugna Romanorum naves perierunt cxx. ob id factum dies ei dicta perduellionis a Pullio et Fundanio tribunis plebis. cum comitia eius rei fierent et centuriae introducerentur, tempestas turbida coorta est: vitium intercessit. postea tribuni plebis intercesserunt ne idem homines in eodem magistratu perduellionis bis eundem accusarent. itaque actione mutata isdem accusantibus multa inrogata: populus cum damnavit aeris gravis cxx millibus.

(θ) Livy XXVI 3 §§ 5—12 (case of Cn Fulvius) bis est accusatus pecuniaque anquisitum: tertio testibus datis, cum, praeterquam quod omnibus probris onerabatur, iurati permulti dicerent fugae pavorisque initium a praetore ortum, ab eo desertos milites, cum haud vanum timorem ducis crederent, terga dedisse; tanta ira accensa est, ut capite anquirendum contio succlamaret. de eo quoque novum certamen ortum: nam cum bis pecunia anquisisset, tertio capitis se anquirere diceret, tribuni plebis appellati collegae negarunt se in mora esse, quo minus, quod ei

³ For this important case see Clark, Early Roman Law §§ 11—16. I am reminded by Mr Reid that the words vel intra pomerium vel extra pomerium would not be necessary until the ius provocationis was definitely established. Their introduction here is therefore an anachronism. And if we are meant to understand that the duumvirs had really no power to acquit (but see Clark § 13), this also smacks of the Republican period, when the duumvirs simply condemned the accused, and their sentence was merely introductory to the real trial.

more maiorum permissum esset, seu legibus seu moribus mallet, anquireret, quoad vel capitis vel pecuniae iudicasset⁴ privato. tum Sempronius perduellionis se iudicare Cn Fulvio dixit, diemque comitiis ab C Calpurnio praetore urbis petit. inde alia spes ab reo temptata est, si adesse in iudicio Q Fulvius frater posset, florens tum et fama rerum gestarum et propinqua spe Capuae potiundae. id cum per litteras miserabiliter pro fratris capite scriptas petisset Fulvius, negassentque patres e re publica esse abscedi a Capua, postquam dies comitiorum aderat, Cn Fulvius exsulatum Tarquinius abiit. id ei iustum exsilium esse scivit plebs.

(1) Livy XLIII 16 §§ 10—16 (case of the two censors) Ti Gracchi primum bona consecravit, quod in multa pignoribusque eius, qui tribunum appellasset, intercessioni non parendo, se in ordinem coegisset; C Claudio diem dixit, quod contionem ab se avocasset; et utrique censori perduellionem se iudicare pronuntiavit, diemque comitiis a C Sulpicio praetore urbano petiit. non recusantibus censoribus quominus primo quoque tempore iudicium de se populus faceret, in ante diem octavum et septimum Kal Octobres comitiis perduellionis dicta dies. censores extemplo in atrium Libertatis escenderunt, et ibi signatis tabellis publicis clausoque tabulario et dimissis servis publicis negarunt se prius quicquam publici negotii gesturos, quam iudicium populi de se factum esset. prior Claudius causam dixit; et cum ex duodecim centuriis equitum octo censorem condemnassent multaeque aliae primae classis, extemplo principes civitatis in conspectu populi anulis aureis positis vestem mutarunt, ut supplices plebem circumirent. maxime tamen sententiam vertisse dicitur Ti Gracchus, quod cum clamor undique plebis esset periculum Graccho non esse, conceptis verbis iuravit, si collega damnatus esset, non exspectato de se iudicio comitem exsilii eius futurum. adeo tamen ad extremum spei venit reus, ut octo centuriae ad damnationem defuerint. absoluto Claudio tribunus plebis negavit se Gracchum morari.

⁴ In this passage capitis answers to legibus, pecuniae to moribus. Thus there are here (as Huschke pp 145—6 remarks) two things based on custom, (a) the tribune's right of choice, (b) the fine procedure itself.

(κ) Livy XXV 4 §§ 7—11 (case of the fraudulent contractor M Postumius Pyrgensis, who had been accused for peculatus, with fine-penalty in view, before the tribes but had caused his friends to use violence so as to prevent a vote being taken) haec cum ab optimo quoque pro atrocitate rei iacta essent, vimque eam contra rem publicam et pernicioso exemplo factam senatus decreset, confestim Carvili tribuni plebis ommissa multae certatione rei capitalis diem Postumio dixerunt, ac ni vades daret, prendi a viatore atque in carcerem duci iusserunt. Postumius vadibus datis non adfuit. tribuni plebem rogaverunt, plebesque ita scivit, si M Postumius ante kal Maias non prodisset, citatusque eo die non respondisset neque excusatus esset, videri eum in exilio esse; bonaque eius venire, ipsi aqua et igni placere interdici. singulis deinde eorum, qui turbae ac tumultus concitatores fuerant, rei capitalis diem dicere ac vades poscere coeperunt. primo non dantis, deinde etiam eos qui dare possent in carcerem coiciebant; cuius rei periculum vitantes plerique in exilium abierunt.

(λ) Cicero de legibus III § 6 cum magistratus iudicassit irrogassitve, per populum multae poenae^b certatio esto. And § 10 omnes magistratus auspiciū iudiciūque habento. And § 27 deinceps igitur omnibus magistratibus auspicia et iudicia dantur: iudicia, ut esset populi potestas ad quam provocaretur; auspicia, ut multos inutiles comitiatus probabiles impedirent morae: saepe enim populi impetum iniustum auspiciis di immortales represserunt.

(μ) Cicero II in Verrem I §§ 12—14 ex hoc quoque evaserit: proficiscar eo, quo me iam pridem vocat populus Romanus: de iure enim libertatis et civitatis suum putat esse iudiciū et recte putat. confringat iste sane vi sua consilia senatoria, quaestiones omnium perrumpat, evolet ex vestra severitate: mihi credite, artioribus apud populum Romanum laqueis tenebitur. • • •
• • • • • credent omnes quinque et triginta tribus • • • • • hanc ego

^b Mommsen I p 156 prefers to read poenae multae.

^c This refers to the centuries, which.

since they had been brought into direct correspondence with the tribes, are constantly spoken of in this sort of way.

causam cum agam beneficio populi Romani de loco superiore, non vereor ne aut istum vis ulla ex populi Romani suffragiis eripere aut a me ullum munus aedilitatis amplius aut gratius populo Romano esse possit.

(ν) Dionysius VIII 80 (some wanted to put Sp Cassius' children to death, but the senate interposed: hence the still preserved custom) ἀφεῖσθαι τιμωρίας ἀπάσης τοὺς παῖδας ὧν ἂν οἱ πατέρες ἀδικήσωσιν, εἴν τε τυράννων ὄντες υἱοὶ τύχωσιν, εἴν τε πατροκτόνων, εἴν τε προδοτῶν, ὃ μέγιστόν ἐστι παρ' ἐκείνοις ἀδίκημα⁷.

A

(a) The word perduellis originally meant 'enemy'. This is proved, not only by its derivation from duellum and the prefix per which stamped it with an unfavourable¹ sense found also in perfidus periurus perdere perire perperam etc, but also by the testimony of antiquity² and the many surviving traces³ of ancient usage. But as the word hostis lost its original wide meaning 'stranger' and came to mean no more than 'enemy'; so by a like narrowing perduellis came to mean only 'internal enemy', a traitor or enemy to his own country. The offence committed by such a person is perduellio, a term closely corresponding to our 'high treason'.

⁷ I must remark that, even if with Huschke p 181 we see in these three crimes respectively perduellio parricidium and proditio—and I grant it probable—, still there is nothing to shew that, regarded as offences against the state, they could not all be brought under the general notion of perduellio. I cannot see the marked distinction between this and proditio, asserted by Lange t 384. That we do not hear of cases of proditio coming before the centuries is (as he admits t 426) owing to such offences being dealt with in the field under the plenary imperium of the general. Add that Cic de orat II § 164 and Tac ann I 72 bring proditio under the head of maiestas. See below C (o).

¹ See Curtius, Grundzüge § 346, who compares Sk para, Gk παρά, Goth fair, OHG fer, NHG ver [as in verbrechen, verrath, verrath &c]. He calls it the 'Gebrauch in malam partem'.

² Collected by Rein Crim p 465, Clark § 16, Muller's Festus p 102 note.

³ See for instance Cic de off III § 107. Plaut Pseud 583, Liv XXV 12 § 10, Tac ann XIV 29.

(b) It is impossible to give any more precise definition of perduellio by specifying any class or classes of actions to which alone that term could strictly speaking be applied. I cannot find that the ancients themselves had any such definition; nor is such to be looked for⁴ in the infancy of jurisprudence. At the same time it is to be observed that the word needed no further definition. We hear of a law of perduellio existing in the regal period; but it seems to have dealt only with the procedure to be followed and the punishment to be inflicted on the guilty. The truth is that in a trial for perduellio the question raised was not so much a question of fact as of intent or effect. If the people hold that a citizen has by some course of action harmed or imperilled the state, they find him guilty of perduellio: if not, they acquit him. Thus, by being the ultimate judge of the quality⁵ of the action, the sovereign people is the guardian of its own safety and honour.

It is only by holding fast this conception of perduellio that we can understand how it was that such a variety of offences were able to be brought under it. We hear of many forms of treason directly political, both within the city, as attempts to kill injure or impede in execution of duty the officers of the state, misuse of magisterial powers, aiming at monarchy⁶, and indeed conspiracies in general; also without the city, as treasonable assistance of or correspondence with an enemy: and of others not directly political but either military, as cases of cowardice neglect or other misconduct in the field; or religious, as neglect of auspices etc; or such injuries as are inflicted upon the state by violence used by a fraudulent contractor to defeat the ends of justice: a strange though not exhaustive list of offences, which had only this one point⁷ in common, that they were held to outrage the majesty and endanger the security of Rome.

⁴ See Maine's Ancient Law c 9 (p 316), c 10 (p 372). The change in legal conceptions is from general to special. It seems that there was no definition of Treason in the old English law.

⁵ See Maine's Ancient Law c 10,

Sheldon Amos' Science of Law c 10 (p 237).

⁶ adfectatio regni. See passage (v) quoted above.

⁷ With this view Madvig II p 274 essentially agrees.

B

We have now to consider the courts before which cases of perduellio were brought, and the procedure employed. The earliest case recorded—that of Horatius—is said to have been tried by duumviri. We hear of such in one account of the condemnation of Manlius, and we know that Rabirius was brought before such a commission. The following points in connexion with them deserve mention.

(a) They were probably an extraordinary¹ commission, not a standing court of justice. Indeed it is inconceivable that they could have been the latter in the time of the kings.

(b) We do not know that the king was obliged to appoint them. I am inclined to think with Lange² that he was not; but that, if he for any reason shrank from exercising in any case the plenary jurisdiction which he had in virtue of his imperium, he could and did appoint such commissioners, from whose sentence there was an appeal to the people in their curies, while from that of the king himself there was none.

(c) What was the form which the appointment denoted by the word 'facio' took, is not certain. It may have been that of direct nomination by the king. But it is perhaps more probable³ that the king announced his intention of laying the case before commissioners, who were then by his permission chosen by the curies. This would agree with the story that Manlius was condemned through (per = through the intervention or agency of) duumvirs duly elected (creati) to conduct the enquiry; and also with Cicero's objection (§ 12) to the nomination of the two who tried Rabirius as legally null.

(d) It is not certain⁴ why they were two in number.

¹ Mommsen Röm Staatsrecht II p 598, Clark § 12.

² Lange I 383—5, 405. Mommsen II p 599.

³ I cannot make out exactly Lange's opinion. Madvig II p 303 seems to agree, and Zumpt I i p 92 and Clark § 12 certainly do. In any case, as Mommsen II p 599 points out, the Republican magistrates lost the power of nomination unless specially empowered by a vote of the comitia.

⁴ Lange I 383. Mommsen II p 601. Huschke p 200 notes a dualism gone of Lange regards them as representatives of the Ramnes and Tities, which would agree well with his theory of the Alban origin of the Luceres. On this point I will not offer an opinion: but I readily admit that they do not afford an instance of anticipation of the collegiate system of the Republic in the Regal period.

(e) It seems that jurisdiction was exercised, or at least sentence pronounced, by one⁵ only: and that they cast lots to determine on whom the duty should fall.

(f) That the duumviral procedure lived on into the Republican age seems probable, though the traces of it are slight and scattered. Huschke points out that we very often hear of two tribunes accusing, and suggests that perhaps they acted as duumvirs. Lange⁶ thinks that the quaestors in the case of Sp Cassius may have done so.

(g) In any case we know that the trial by duumvirs became obsolete⁷ long before the time of Cicero. It is clear that this antiquated form of trial was revived simply as a convenient means of securing a triumph for the so-called 'popular' party by impugning through the condemnation of Rabirius the validity of the scutum ultimum. It is worth noting that we have distinct mention of duumviri perduellionis only in the three cases of Horatius Manlius and Rabirius.

two acting the other consenting) in early times. He thinks that there were regularly two accusers in iudicia populi (perhaps under the official title of duumviri) and thus explains duorum virorum iudicium in Cic orator § 156, no other court of two being known to us. See also Lange II 534. The case of duoviri aedi dedicandae offers an interesting parallel. Two were chosen, one carried out the dedication.

⁵ Lange I 383, III 241, Mommsen II p 601. Hence Livy I 26 § 7 tum alter ex eis, Suet Julius 12 sorte iudex in reum ductus. Huschke remarks that the mention of one quaestor by Cic de republ II § 60 in the case of Sp Cassius, while Liv II 41 and Dionys VIII 77 speak of two, is probably to be explained in the same way. I cannot agree with Zumpt I 2 p 393 and Madvig II p 304 that the two who tried Rabirius were chosen by lot out of a large number. The lot was not likely to fall on the two Caesars.

⁶ Lange I 384, Mommsen II p 601.

⁷ See Lange I 385, II 525, III 241, Madvig II p 304.

C

But by far the greater number of the trials for perduellio with which we are acquainted occurred in the Republican period, and the procedure was of a very different kind from the above. At the risk of seeming tedious I venture to append a sketch of this procedure, without some account of which it is impossible to understand the case of Rabirius and indeed many others also. The matter of this chapter (C) is mainly taken from or written with reference to Zumpt's Criminalrecht, where the subject is dealt with more at length than in any of the other works I have been able to consult.

(a) It is well known that Roman jurisprudence from very early times distinguished the two stages of a civil action (1) the definition of the legal question involved, known as the proceeding in iure, being conducted before the magistrate, and (2) the decision of this question, known as the proceeding in iudicio, being conducted before the competent court, whether held by the magistrate himself or by some iudex to whom he referred the matter. But it seems that this principle of division was recognized in criminal¹ actions also, and that they also began with in ius vocatio; thus Horatius was we are told raptus in ius ad regem. We shall presently see that the procedure of the criminal trials before the people (iudicia populi) falls into these divisions.

(b) The accusers² must be magistrates: as a matter of fact they were almost always the quaestores in the period before the Twelve Tables; after that date generally tribuni plebis, now and then their subordinates the aediles. At the

¹ Zumpt i. 2 pp 168—70.

² See Zumpt i. 2 pp 242—3, Mommsen ii p 290, Lange i 385—9. The aediles seem to have been originally to the tribunes much what the quaestors were to the consuls, see also Mommsen ii pp 466—7. Perhaps the aediles could only accuse in fine-processes, Huschke p 198, Lange ii § 14, and the cases taken up by them seem to have been chiefly those that came under some definite statute. For the quaestors see note on Introd D (2). Mommsen ii pp 302, 600, thinks they were only competent to deal with murder and other common non-political offences.

iudicium or trial proper a magistrate cum imperio had to preside: hence such were excluded from appearing as accusers. It should be observed that the popular jurisdiction as we find it under the Republic was no doubt developed³ out of the provocatio or right of appeal against the exercise of the magistrate's imperium or coercitio. Indeed the iudicia populi in cases of no political bearing⁴—what Zumpt calls the 'ordinary' procedure—always rested directly on this right of the citizen to appeal. The appeal lay to the people in their centuries. We shall see that in trials of political import (such as perduellio) the connexion with the right of appeal was less⁵ direct. With the later action of the comitia tributa and their competence to pass sentence in certain cases we have for the present nothing to do. But it is well to take notice of their action⁶ in the period before the Twelve Tables, because it was out of the struggles connected therewith that the later power of the tribunes as accusers was developed. It was constantly maintained by the patricians that the plebs and its magistrates⁷ had no jurisdiction over patricians. But they were not able to make their contention good except so far as to require that before a tribune brought a patrician to the bar of the assembled plebs he must have obtained permission from the senate in the form of a *scutum*⁸ to that effect. Gradually it

³ See Zumpt I 2 pp 175, 205, Mommsen II pp 289—90.

⁴ Huschke pp 147—156 points out that (so far as we know) the ordinary procedure always applied to both orders alike. He ingeniously traces the extraordinary procedure up to the compacts between the patricians and plebeians. These were at first practically two states, and the mutual jurisdiction really rests on deditio of the offender according to a sort of international law. See the demand in Livy III 53 § 5. For the compacts called leges sacratae, which protected the tribunes, see III 55 with Weissenborn's notes.

⁵ See below (c).

⁶ Zumpt I 2 pp 245, 249—50, 268—9.

⁷ The tribunes were practically magistratus populi Romani since 448 B.C. Lange I 827—8.

⁸ Zumpt I 1 pp 261, 266—79, and 2 p 275. Though I have thought it best to give this view in the text, I feel bound to add that the evidence adduced in its favour consists of dubious and sometimes forced interpretations of passages which supply no direct proof. That such a scutum should have been necessary is not a priori very probable; though it may have been customary, as in the case of legislation in the later times of the Republic. Doubtless there were now and then offenders whom even the senate desired to punish.

became impossible to refuse this, and so the patricians lost their chief motive for resisting the extension of the tribunician powers in this direction. Hence it is that, when once the legislative power of the tribes becomes coordinate with that of the centuries, we find the tribunes acting as accusers in capital trials before the latter body⁹ without any opposition from the patricians. No doubt these last reflected that it was better to be brought before the centuries than the tribes, it being so much more difficult to secure a condemnation.

(c) We now pass on to consider the division of a criminal trial before the people (iudicium populi) into the proceeding in iure and that in iudicio. The view of Zumpt¹⁰ is that the in iure division is found under three forms for different purposes or at different dates. There are (1) the scitum of the early Republic, doubtless not granted without careful inquiry, (2) the preliminary proceeding before the magistrate in cases of 'ordinary' or non-political trials, (3) the proceeding before the magistrate and the hearings before the people down to the end of the third hearing, the procedure employed in the 'extraordinary' trials, those of political import. It is with the details of these 'extraordinary' trials that we are concerned here. Now the view of Zumpt is open to this objection. The three hearings referred to were conducted before the whole body of citizens assembled in contio, and these citizens are also the ultimate judges in the case: besides witnesses are produced on all three occasions. This is very unlike what we know of other proceedings in iure, and it is perhaps safer in the grievous dearth of evidence to hold that the first appearance of the accused before the accusing magistrate is the true in iure proceeding in such cases. Then the first three hearings will count as parts of the proceeding in

⁹ Mommsen II p 390, Lange II §14, Zumpt I 2 pp 242-6. In any case some distinction of periods should be made. The full legislative coordination of centuries and tribes may be best dated from 387 BC (lex Hortensia, Lange II §39), and by that time the tribunes had already become a regular instrument of senatorial government and the distinction between patricians and plebeians had ceased to have much practical importance.

¹⁰ Zumpt I 2 pp 169-70, 239, 245, 249, 250, 268-9.

iudicio together with the fourth or final hearing. I proceed to consider the proceedings in one of these public criminal trials, without attempting to decide whether Zumpt's distinction between 'ordinary' and 'extraordinary' trials be valid or not: for I am convinced that it is not of much practical importance for our present purpose.

(d) First, the supposed offender was ordered to appear (adesse iussus) before the tribune, who declared his intention of bringing him to trial and fixed a day for the first hearing of the case to take place (diei dictio). This act¹¹ made the man technically reus. If the tribune chose, he might name the current day and proceed at once with the first hearing. This was as follows. The tribune called the people together to an informal meeting (contio) in some public place, generally the forum. He presided himself: and the reus or privatus was now publicly summoned by the voice of the herald to appear before the people (citatus) and called upon to make his defence (causam dicere iussus). Speeches were made on both sides and witnesses produced (testes dare or proferre). Perhaps¹² the penalty was named by the accuser. When the tribune saw fit, he declared the hearing adjourned¹³ to another day (diem prodixit) which he named. He then bound over the accused to appear at the time named, usually by finding sureties (vades dare)¹⁴ for his appearance: but if the case was a very serious one he imprisoned him during the interval rather than leave him at large on any terms. When the day for the second hearing arrived, proceedings began again with the citatio and continued till the tribune as before announced the productio diei. In like manner the third hearing was conducted, but the position of affairs at its close was essentially different. It was no longer¹⁵ in the power of the tribune to ¹¹ Zumpt I 2 p 301. See Cic de domo § 83 cui dies dicta numquam est, qui reus non fuit, qui numquam sum a tribuno plebis citatus.

¹² See Livy xxvi 3.

¹³ When Clodius accused Milo in n c 56 the first hearing was on Feb 2, the second on Feb 6, the third on Feb 17. The fourth was on May 7. See Cic ad Q fratrem II 3 §§ 1, 2, 5 § 4, Zumpt I 2 p 249.

¹⁴ Livy III 13, Zumpt I 2 p 278, Lange II 508—9. See note 29 below.

¹⁵ Zumpt I 2 pp 240—1, 271, 325—6.

adjourn the further hearing of the case to a day fixed by himself. The day was already fixed by the consul or (according to later practice) the *praetor*¹⁶ urbanus, from whom the accuser had in the first instance to ask for the appointment of a day for holding a meeting of the comitia centuriata, to give the final decision. And a certain interval¹⁷ had to be left between this day of formal assembly and the end of the informal procedure in contiones. Another difference was that from this time forth the people had before them the definite issue¹⁸ upon which they would be required to pass judgment. At the end of the third hearing the accuser was in a position to judge of the feeling of the people, and so to draw up his indictment as to have the best chance of procuring the condemnation of the accused. This he did, and posted it up in the forum for all to see during a space of three market days (trinum nundinum), the statutable interval which had to elapse before the formal comitia could be held for the final decision.

(c) It is well to pause here and consider¹⁹ what was the effect of the proceedings up to this point. The three hearings, each taking up one day and being separated by intervals of uncertain length (intermissa die)²⁰, are loosely spoken of as prima secunda tertia accusatio. But in truth they are merely parts of the one enquiry (anquisitio) which terminated in the fourth or final hearing and a vote of the ¹⁶ Livy xxvi 3 § 9, xlili 16 § 11, Antias apud Gell vi (vii) 9 § 9 tribunus plebi perduellionem ei diem dixit et comitiis diem a M. Marcio praetore peposuit, Zumpt i 2 pp 240—2, 326, Mommsen i p 192. It seems that the praetor could not refuse.

¹⁷ The trinundinum. But originally and properly the interval was in case of the comitia centuriata the iusti xxx dies derived from the practice used in declaration of war. The trinundinum may have been introduced after the reform of the centuries. See Zumpt i 2 pp 249—50, Lange ii 509, 668. The markets fell on every ninth day. Thus it will be seen that by the Roman method of reckoning a period of 17 days at least must elapse before the voting took place. After the lex Hortensia (note 35 below) it was customary to hold the comitia on the dies comitalis next after the third nundinae.

¹⁸ Zumpt i 2 pp 258—62, Lange ii 509.

¹⁹ See generally Zumpt i 2 pp 269—70, Lange ii 509.

²⁰ dies = 'a certain time' not defined. It seems to have been never less than a day. See Zumpt i 2 p 249, Lange ii 509.

comitia centuriata. They are merely contiones in which no vote is taken and consequently no decision arrived at. But the interest of the people has been excited and has shewn itself so that both accuser and accused can tell what are the vital points in their case, on what passions they will be able most effectually to work. Besides there is now a formal indictment drawn up and made known to every one. But there is strictly speaking no iudicium as yet: true, the tribune has, by determining to press the charge, given a sort of iudicium of his own; but this, until confirmed by a vote of the centuries, is of no force or validity. There is therefore nothing²¹ against which the accused should appeal: no iudicium, no provocatio. Hence we do not hear of appeals in these cases: before the fourth hearing there is nothing to appeal against, and from the fourth hearing itself there is no appeal. It is final, and to it alone are the expressions accusatio and certatio properly applied.

(f) When the day of the fourth hearing²² was now come, the consul or praetor gave orders early in the morning for the people to be duly summoned to a meeting (conventionem = contionem), and the accused received a further summons both through the herald (praeco) and through the horn-blower (cornicen), who blew a blast before his door. His presence was now necessary, as we shall see below. The people poured out of the city to a spot named, generally a part of the campus Martius. The presiding magistrate took his seat, the accuser appeared, the accused was called and answered to his name. Both sides were now well prepared and backed up by their friends. The charge was read out, and thereupon followed the speeches for the prosecution and defence and the witnesses in support of either. When all this had been got through, the presiding magistrate gave orders for the centuries to be formed, [in the period after the reform of the comitia centuriata lots were cast to determine which of them should vote first (praerogativa)] and the voting began. Votes were originally given openly by word of mouth, but the ballot²³ was introduced in the second century B.C. If a majority of centuries pronounced the accused guilty of the charge preferred against him, the president declared the result and handed over the prisoner²⁴ to the accuser for execution of the sentence. If a majority acquitted him, he was ipso facto a free man in possession of all his former rights. As the vote was in effect a simple Aye or No, there could be no other sentence passed on him than that proposed by the accuser.

²¹ Zumpt 1 2 p 270. He means or ought to mean that the appeal against the formal iudicium of the accuser was always made or assumed, and in the first three hearings there was no iudicium at all. Had there been such, there could have been no appeal from it. See below (n).

²² For the matter of this section see Zumpt 1 2 pp 262 foll, Varro ling Lat vi §§ 90—2 (included in Wordsworth p 367), Lange II 509.

(g) If all went smoothly as I have described, the procedure though clumsy to the last degree had at all events done its work. But there could be no security for this, and indeed the wonder is that it ever worked at all—at least so as to procure a condemnation. The truth is, it could not work unless there was a strong popular feeling against the accused and unless the whole college of tribunes were unanimous or at least indifferent. Thus the less security for justice the greater likelihood of conviction. Before we go on to consider in detail the various hindrances to a successful completion of the proceedings it will be well to call attention to two important points; first, that all had to be got through²⁵ in the one day before sundown, second, that old custom resting on religious scruples²⁶ forbade the accusation of the same person a second time on the same capital charge by the same magistrate.

²³ See note on suffragiis § 5 of the speech.

²⁴ See Livy vi 20 § 12, Zumpt i 2 p 336 (compare 170). This is the after-procedure in iure, for which in the trials under quaestiones perpetuae see Zumpt's Criminalprocess pp 372—411.

²⁵ Becker Röm Alt ii 3 p 113, Lange ii 366, Zumpt i 2 p 266. But it would take less time to vote on one simple judicial issue than at the election of several officers out of a number of candidates. Lange ii 492. It should be remembered that originally all suits whatever had to be gone through in a day.

²⁶ See Introd E. (f) § 1 note, and passage (7) at head of Introduction, Zumpt i 2 p 265.

(h) The hindrances²⁷ just referred to were in general as follows :

(1) The intercessio of a tribune. This might of course be employed to stop proceedings at any stage. But it was not customary to employ it at the preliminary hearings. This means of protection for the accused was probably not very often employed, and was anyhow too capricious in its action to be of any certain use in furtherance of justice.

(2) An obstructive policy on the part of the accused and his supporters. This would for the most part take the form of an effort to 'talk out the motion' (dicendo diem eximere or consumere etc). It is to be remembered that there was a long day's work to be got through in any case. The assembly of the centuries for voting was preceded by the fourth contio, and was even by itself a most clumsy apparatus at all times.

(3) Unfavourable auspices, obnuntiatio, and the occurrence of any phenomena regarded as ominous. It is unnecessary to dwell at any length on this familiar subject.

(4) The removal of the red flag, whether as a bona fide warning of an enemy's approach or as a dodge in the interest of the accused. See appendix I.

(5) The absence of the accused on some good ground (e.g. excusatio morbi). It seems that it rested with the accusing tribune²⁸ to decide whether an excuse was valid or not, his decision not being final unless approved by the consent or silence of his colleagues.

So many chances had even the guiltiest criminal of escaping punishment without acquittal.

(i) Another case remains to be dealt with, that of a man who went into voluntary exile²⁹ at some time during the fourth hearing. There could be no doubt as to his motive for so doing, and accordingly such an act was held tantamount to a confession of guilt. But it was not now possible for the comitia centuriata to pass sentence of death upon him in his absence. He was not however allowed to escape scot-free by absconding. The tribune adopted another course. He called together the comitia tributa, where he moved for a decree in absence³⁰ against the criminal. This was outlawry³¹, generally accompanied by confiscation of goods. It seems that this proceeding was possible because the sentence thus passed, though in effect capitis, was regarded not as a iudicium in the strict sense but only as a public recognition³² of a state of fact. A correct view of this proceeding is most important, particularly to readers of Livy, for many of the cases in which sentence was passed on men who were clearly perduelles are only to be understood by bearing it in mind; and the accounts of such trials are not seldom inaccurate owing to the misconceptions of the writer, and from their meagreness generally obscure.

²⁷ For the matter of this section generally see Zumpt I 2 pp 264-6, 271, 274-5, Lange II 557-60, 566.

²⁸ Zumpt I 2 p 271.

²⁹ Zumpt I 2 pp 279-80 thinks that, when Polyb VI 14 says that a man might escape even at the last moment by going into exile, he is not consider-

(k) It should be remarked that, according to Roman custom, the withdrawal³³ of the accuser at any stage of the trial from the further prosecution of the charge necessarily brought the trial to an end: And it does not appear that he was obliged to proceed (as described in the last paragraph) against one who absconded.

(l) It may be well to mention here the opinion of Zumpt³⁴

ing the case of men detained in prison as the worst offenders would be. If he did not appear at one or more of the preliminary hearings, there was time to have him fetched. But from Livy III 13 it would seem that such imprisonment had practically gone out of use since the trial of Caeso Quinctius in BC 461. See however XXV 4. In the very exceptional case of Pleminius the excited state of public feeling accounts for the imprisonment.

³⁰ See Wharton's Law Lexicon under 'absence'.

³¹ Livy XXV 4, XXVI 3, Zumpt I 2 pp 280—2 and 352—3 for case of Saturninus against Metellus.

³² Zumpt I 2 p 281.

³³ Zumpt I 2 pp 277—8.

³⁴ Zumpt I 2 pp 272—3. He dates this right from the rise of the tribunician capital procedure after the XII tables. But it seems to have rested on usage (Liv XXVI 3) and so Huschke p 146 objects to this date. The decision of the people could only be given on the issue subjected to it: hence the tribunes could make the penalty more or less severe, as to the accuser's power of choosing in what court he would press for the final decision, and consequently what penalty he would propose to inflict. His view is this. Two periods in the history of the procedure may be traced. In the earlier we find the connexion between the three preliminary hearings and the fourth or final one still distant and loose: in the later they are brought into close connexion. In the earlier period the tribune could after the three hearings decide for himself whether he would aim at procuring a capital sentence from the centuries or content himself with moving for the infliction of a fine (multae irrogatio) in the assembly of the tribes. If he chose the former, he must apply to the consul or practor urbanus to name some *dies comitalis*³⁵ for the purpose; if the latter, he could (unless his own colleagues interfered) make all the necessary arrangements himself. In the later period he was obliged³⁶ to choose from the outset the course he meant to pursue. The date of this change is uncertain; its effect, and perhaps the object of its promoters, was to make capital trials more difficult and so more rare.

(m) I have referred above to the practice of the tribunes in the period before the Twelve Tables, of bringing offenders before the assembly of tribes, and pointed out that in the case of patrician offenders it was perhaps necessary to procure the consent of the senate. But it seems that this attempt to secure for the tribes a capital jurisdiction³⁷ coordinate with that of the centuries was foiled by the legislation of the decemvirs. There remained the power of inflicting fines, and this milder form of penalty sufficed³⁸ for many—perhaps see Lange II 668—9 and case of Mene-nius in Liv II 52 § 5, perhaps even remit it after condemnation, Liv III 58 § 10.

³⁵ Originally meetings of the plebs and comitia tributa were held on nundinae, but since the lex Hortensia of 287 BC the tribes like the centuries conformed to the patrician calendar and avoided nundinae. Zumpt I 2 pp 203, 250, Lange II 439—41.

³⁶ Huschke p 146 seems to think that this limitation never did exist, arguing from the alternatives mentioned in Cic pro Mil § 36. See also ibid p 525.

³⁷ Whether a sentence passed by the tribes ever came to entail an effect upon caput, is another matter. See appendix K.

³⁸ Lange II 539 well remarks that one great defect in the development of the Roman criminal law arose from the fact that the division of the jurisdiction

most—public offenders, and was recommended by the greater ease with which a conviction could be obtained. The procedure was the same as that described above, so far as the three hearings and following interval were concerned: but the fourth hearing took the simple form of a motion in the comitia tributa for the infliction of a fine on the accused. It was a rogatio of the ordinary legislative kind: the accuser was said irrogare multam.

(u) In connexion with these two forms of trial it will be well to speak²⁹ of the word iudicare, which in some passages seems to bear a remarkable sense. The passages are quoted at the head of the Introduction, so that they need only be referred to here. First come Cicero's words in de domo § 45 ut ter ante.....quam multam irroget aut iudicet. The two expressions are clearly coordinate, and the former means 'moving for the infliction of a fine' (before the tribes): surely then iudicet refers to the process before the centuries: but what is the iudicium implied? In de legibus III § 6 we have multae corresponding to irrogassit and poenae to iudicassit. [If the expressions in pro Milone § 36 be really alternatives, this passage would be very important here, but see note on passage (2) at head]. In Livy I 26 § 7 we find tibi perduellionem iudico, in XLIII 16 § 11 utrique censori perduellionem se iudicare. But in Livy XXVI 3 §§ 8, 9 we have vel capitis vel pecuniae iudicasset and perduellionis se iudicare Cn Fulvio. Here we have iudicare used in speaking of the fine and the capital penalty alike. Nor is this unnatural, if we regard all the jurisdiction of the comitia as based on the right of appeal, and the appeal as necessarily preceded by a iudicium of some kind, from which the appeal is made. This view is borne out by Cicero de legibus III § 10 where the power of iudicium is of centuries and tribes rested on a difference not in the offences proper to each but in the penalties. Hence the accuser (in political cases at least) looked first to making sure of the penalty and then brought the charge under some head of the criminal law.

²⁹ In dealing with this question I have received most help from Mr Reid. After long consideration I have found myself unable to follow the ingenious speculations of Zumpt t 2 pp 184—7, 248, 260, 330—4. See Lange II § 38.

assigned to all magistrates, while in § 27 this power is explained to be the basis of provocatio. Indeed this right of appeal must necessarily have rested on something that was technically and historically a iudicium, however insignificant and formal it might be. And the more firmly provocatio was established, the more formal the iudicium became. Not only would the iudicium of an accuser be necessarily a condemnation, but without condemnation there would be no appeal. Hence Cicero (pro Rab § 12) complains that the sentence of the duumvirs was practically no iudicium at all. [And it seems that the later Romans were led, by their regarding it as a mere formality themselves, to fancy that in the regal period acquittal by the duumvirs was even barred by statute, see note on passage (δ) at head]. Hence it will be seen that even in a fine-process there is technically a iudicium to begin with, though practically of no effect in itself, but only rendered effectual by a final⁴⁰ confirmatory vote of the tribes given on the question raised by the appeal. That we do not find the expression poenam capitale irrogare in use is to be explained by the phrases employed in the first stage of capital and fine processes respectively—perduellionem tibi iudico, multam tibi dico,—where it is seen at once that iudicare was most strictly used in referring to the capital process before the centuries. That it could well be used in referring to the fine process before the tribes I have shewn above: the newer word irrogare seems to have been regularly confined to the second stage of the process before the tribes.

(o) I feel bound also to add that Zumpt strongly holds⁴¹ the opinion that since the Twelve Tables perduellio bore the general sense of an offence⁴² worthy of death. This view, which was also that of Sigonius, he supports by a number of arguments of which the following are the most important. We see that in the cases of P Claudius Pulcher and Cn Fulvius the perduellio is of a very general nature; indeed in ⁴⁰ See appendix K.

⁴¹ Zumpt 1 2 pp 330—2.

⁴² Thus in the earlier case of Kaeso Quinctius Dionysius x § 5 says εὐδοκίαν αὐτὸν ἐνδὲ δίκην ἀδικήματος δημοσίου, θανάτου τιμωσάμενος τὴν δίκην. But in 48 he uses ἀδίκημα δημοσίου of the offence in a fine-process.

the latter case Livy makes it = capital offence. These cases it is true are of a military⁴³ nature: but that of the two censors is not, nor can it be explained as perduellio on any other assumption than that given above. Again the use of indicare as opposed to multam irrogare seems to group the capital trials together and to correspond to the expression in which the word perduellio occurs. I wish I felt more satisfied as to the completeness of the proof of this; as it is, I can only say that with one limitation—applying it only to the cases of a political nature⁴⁴ dealt with by the 'extraordinary' process of the tribunes, which I believe Zumpt to mean—I think it probable. For the present I prefer to say with Lange⁴⁵ that it is but natural we should hear only of politically important cases, and that cases of perduellio are especially of this nature, being generally accusations of magistrates. What with the fine-processes before the tribes and occasional special commissions, the capital processes before the centuries probably became exclusively political and very rare. Indeed in all the fifth century of the city (353—253 B.C.) we do not find a single case of the kind,—no doubt because the tribunes were on good terms with the nobility.

(p) In order to give some sort of historical completeness to this sketch of a large and difficult subject, it will be necessary to say a few words⁴⁶ on the rise of the crimen maiestatis and the early legislation relating thereto. It had become more and more an established custom to apply the fine-process before the tribes to cases that might have been treated as perduellio. Sooner or later some one was sure to find out a simpler way of dealing with all or some of these cases. As the social and political fabric of the Republic gave way, the need became more pressing. At last the tribune L. Appulcius probably refers to the procedure before a quaestio perpetua.

⁴³ See note on passage (p) quoted above.

⁴⁴ This will agree with the separation of perduellio from other iudicia populi in Cic de legibus III § 36. Madvig II p 303 seems to take the same view. See also the words of Dion (p 29) οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐκτ.

⁴⁵ Lange II 511—8, 522—4, Huschke pp 168, 177.

⁴⁶ See generally Zumpt II 1 pp 227—36, Lange II 619, 551, III 80—2, 108, 165, Madvig II pp 274—7.

Saturninus, having through the violent assault of the quaestor Q Servilius Caepio been prevented from carrying his lex agraria, shortly after in the same year (103 B C) brought forward his lex de maiestate and apparently carried it. It was drawn up in the most general terms, imposing certain penalties on those who should in any way lessen the majesty (minuere maiestatem) of the Roman people. It was made to apply (like the laws on repetundae) to magistrates and senators only. It was probably meant to check the mutual opposition of magistrates, and possibly in the first instance to supply a means of punishing Caepio. But it certainly gave no definition of maiestas: hence all was left to rest on interpretation, in which the Roman pleaders found a congenial occupation for their talents. The court⁴⁷ to try cases of minuta maiestas was a quaestio perpetua. The penalty was the capital one of aquae et ignis interdictio. This law afforded powerful protection to the tribunes, in whose person the maiestas of the Roman people was especially centred. It was followed by the lex Varia of the tribune Q Varius in 90 B C, which extended the operation of the above to the movers and supporters of the Social war. Next, apparently in 81 B C, came the much wider and more detailed lex Cornelia of Sulla, by which the lex Appuleia was repealed. Its operation extended to the provinces, but it like the earlier laws applied to magistrates and senators only. A definition of the crime was given, bringing under it many and various offences,—for instance, any lessening of the state's resources property or power; opposition to any magistrate, and thereby to the senate⁴⁸, to which body Sulla sought to secure the control of all officers of state; exceeding official powers; neglect of duty. It will be seen at once that this law tended to limit the competence of individual magistrates, and also

⁴⁷ Maine Anc Law c 10 points out that the functions of the quaestiones were determined not by a classification of crimes as such, but by the terms and objects of the several statutes by which they were constituted. See appendix B

(6). The lex Appuleia may or may not have established a special quaestio maiestatis.

⁴⁸ For the further development of the law of maiestas into a means of protecting the person of the emperor see Meri-that in its conception of the crime in question it trenched on those of repetundae and peculatus.

(q) Nor is it hard to see how it affected that of the old crime of perduellio. The two terms were now practically coextensive, and the real difference lay in procedure only. But this difference was all in favour of maiestas, which accordingly superseded perduellio. The jury court took the place of the clumsy comitia, a iudicium publicum of a iudicium populi. What had never been a truly technical expression gave way to one which was gradually defined and specialized. Thus a de facto revolution in criminal jurisprudence that had long been in progress was quietly accomplished. The old law or laws of perduellio were not abolished, and it was no doubt in theory still possible to punish under this name any of the multifarious offences to which it had once regularly been applied. But in practice this was not done, and the rarity of those offences (if any) that could only be treated as perduellio and not as maiestas caused the older term and forms of procedure to fall into disuse. It was therefore an unfair proceeding to bring Rabirius to trial at all on a charge of perduellio; and still more unfair to rake up the antiquated statute that governed the trial by duumvirs. Rabirius might as well or better so far as justice was concerned⁴⁹ have been tried on a charge of imminuta maiestas, or of vis under the lex Plantia of 78 B.C.; for that both this latter and the lex Cornelia were passed after the acts laid to his charge had been committed would have caused little or no difficulty⁵⁰ at Rome, had it been thought politic to proceed thus. We shall see that in this as in most Roman trials the accusers were vale c 44. Madvig II pp 276-7. The definition of maiestas in the Cornelian law was probably far from precise.

⁴⁹ See Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

⁵⁰ On the contrary, it was a common proceeding to legislate in view of immediate application to special cases. See Huschke p 172 note 82. Thus we are told by Acon ad orat pro Scauro p 134 (21 Orell) that the lex Faria provided ut quaceretur de iis quorum ope consiliove socii contra populum Romanum arma sumpsissent. The way in which Clodius afterwards proceeded against Cicero is well known. See appendix F for the lex Sempronia, and compare the lex Pompeia under which Milo was tried for the murder of Clodius. See also de finibus II § 54, pro Cluent §§ 136-7.

influenced by other considerations than justice. To conclude, by the lex Iulia de maiestate of BC 46 it is probable that the older offence was still more completely absorbed in maiestas: and whether the term perduellio still found even in the Digest of Justinian be anything more than (as Rein⁶¹ thinks) an untechnical expression for the higher degree of maiestas it is beyond my province to enquire.

D. REGISTER OF CASES.

(1) The famous case of Horatius, for a full discussion of which see Prof E C Clark's Early Roman Law §§ 11—17. As to the treatment of a case of parricidium as one of perduellio, it should be noted that (a) Horatius was acquitted of the former by his father, (b) Horatius had, by murdering his sister, assumed the right of judgment, which did not belong to him. See in illustration Wharton's Law Lexicon under 'Petit Treason'.

(2) The agrarian law of Sp Cassius (consul 486 BC) so stirred patrician hatred against him that in 485 he was brought to trial. The charge was that he sought to make himself king, and his intended liberality to the Latins and Hernicans made him unpopular with the plebs. The form of the trial was probably that of an indictment for perduellio preferred against him by the quaestors¹ before the comitia centuriata. The elaborate procedure which we find later was most likely not developed at this early date. No duumvirs are mentioned, but there may have been such—the quaestors may have acted in that capacity. From the words cedente populo in Cic de re publ II § 60 Zumpt infers that it was a case of appeal to the people from the sentence of the quaestors. The accused was probably not left at large, for we find that on condemnation he was put to death. See Zumpt's Criminal-

⁶¹ Rein p 498.

¹ So they accuse Volscius of false witness in Liv III 24, 25, 29, a case of what Zumpt calls the 'ordinary' criminal procedure. See Clark § 17 on quaestors, Mommsen Röm Staatsrecht II p 600, Lange I pp 385—9, II § 14, Varro ling Lat VI § 90.

recht I 1 pp 286—93 and 2 p 330. Livy II 41 with Weissenborn's notes, Dionys VIII 77—8, and my note above on Introd C (i).

(3) Into the details of the famous case of M Manlius (384 BC) it is unnecessary to go. The account in Livy is most confused. What is to our purpose is the version of the story in which the duumvirs appear. We are told that they were elected. But whatever were the preliminary steps it is now pretty well agreed that there was only one real trial (iudicium) and that this was before the centuries. Probably some misunderstanding of an early narrative of the three hearings has caused the confusion in Livy's narrative. Manlius was put to death. See Livy VI 20 with Weissenborn's notes, and Zumpt I 2 pp 379—86, Lange Röm Alt II 516.

(4) A notable case is that of P Claudius Pulcher who with heedless levity disregarded the auspices and gave battle to the Carthaginian fleet off Drepana, in which action he was defeated with terrible loss. He was brought to trial (248 BC) for perduellio, and must have been condemned but for a storm which stopped proceedings at the fourth hearing. The renewal of this accusation was barred by the intervention of tribunes. So he was brought before the tribes and fined 1000 asses for every ship lost. See Schol Bob quoted above, Cic de nat deor II § 7, Livy epit XIX, Suet Tib 2, Valer Max VIII 1 absol § 4, Zumpt I 2 pp 201, 340, Lange II 518.

(5) Very interesting is the attempt made to bring M Postumius Pyrgensis the contractor (publicanus) to trial on a charge of perduellio for the violence used to prevent condemnation for peculatus. But he forsook his sureties and bolted. So the Tribes dealt with him as self-condemned in his absence. See Livy XXV 3, 4, Zumpt I 2 pp 273, 313, 340—1, Lange II 518.

(6) The case of Cn Fulvius in 211 BC is also important. He had when praetor been in command of an army. This he lost in a battle, where he himself shewed great cowardice. A tribune brought him to trial, intending to get him fined by the tribes. Two hearings passed on this understanding; at the third, so clearly did his misconduct and cowardice appear, the contio called for a capital prosecution. When the tribune declared his intention of turning the fine-process into a capital one, the accused demurred, but the other tribunes declared the proceeding legal. The accuser then got a day fixed for comitia centuriata. Fulvius found all his hopes vain, and went into voluntary exile, which was then approved and confirmed by the tribes. See Livy XXVI 3, Zumpt I 2 pp 272, 313, 341, Lange II 518.

(7) The case of Q Pleminius (204 BC) should be read in Livy XXIX 8, 9, 16—22. The commission sent to enquire into his impieties and cruelties at Locri was accompanied by two tribunes: and it was probably these two who accused Pleminius and his abettors when brought to Rome, on a charge most likely of perduellio. It seems that the comitia for the fourth hearing were purposely put off. Pleminius died in prison uncondemned, but the actual circumstances of his end were uncertain. See Zumpt I 2 pp 342—3, Lange II 519.

(8) Two censors, Ti Sempronius Gracchus and C Claudius, were accused in 169 BC of perduellio by a tribune, on the ground of their invasion of the rights of tribunes. The real motives were personal pique and discontent with their financial measures. Claudius came very near condemnation: on his acquittal, the tribune let Gracchus go. See Livy XLIII 16, Zumpt I 2 pp 203, 343—4, Lange II 523.

(9) The accusation to avoid which P Popillius Laenas went into exile was probably one of perduellio. See appendix F and Zumpt I 2 pp 346—7.

(10) So doubtless was that of L Opimius who, acting on the scutum ultimum, suppressed the movements of C Gracchus with violence. With great difficulty he was got off. See Zumpt I 2 pp 347—8, Lange II 524.

(11) Of C Popillius Laenas we are expressly told by Cicero that he was tried for perduellio, though in rhet ad Herennium I § 25 it is called maiestas. It took place in 107 or 106 BC. His offence was misconduct in the field and the making of a disadvantageous treaty. Secret voting was introduced for the purpose of securing his condemnation; a step which probably brought iudicia populi into greater disrepute than ever. See Cic de legibus III § 36, Zumpt I 2 pp 348—9, Lange II 524.

The above cases are all before the lex Appuleia de maiestate. The following is especially interesting, coming as it does after the three laws on that subject, of which we spoke above.

(12) C Verres was prosecuted in a jury court on a charge of repetundae in 70 BC. In the accusatio composed by Cicero occurs the following remarkable passage (II in Verrem I §§ 8—14). Cicero describes what he would have done had Verres been acquitted in the court of repetundae. He says that if he escape this, he will accuse him of peculatus (§ 11); if he escape again, he will accuse him of maiestas (§ 12); if the jury in this court also acquit him, he will bring him to the bar of the Roman people itself, from whose just indignation he will not escape. Though the word perduellio is not used, there can be no other interpretation of the threat. Verres' gross abuse of his official powers, his scourging and putting to death Roman citizens iniussu populi would easily have sufficed to establish such a charge. The orator recurs to it again V §§ 173, 178, 183.

E. OF THE CASE OF RABIRIUS AND THE QUESTIONS INVOLVED IN THE SAME.

I begin by quoting the fullest account of the case given by any ancient writer.

Dion Cassius XXXVII 26—28

Τίτος δὲ δὴ Λαβιήνους Γάιον Ῥαβίριον ἐπὶ τῷ τοῦ Σατουρνίνου φονῇ γραψάμενος πλείστον σφισι τάραχον παρέσχεν. ὃ τε γὰρ Σατουρνίνος πρὸ ἕξ πού καὶ τριάκοντα ἐτῶν ἐτεθνήκει, καὶ τὰ κατὰ τὸν πόλεμον τὸν πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ὕπατοι τότε παρὰ τῆς βουλῆς προσετέταχτο, ὥστε ἡ γερουσία ἄκυρος ἐκ τοῦ δικαστηρίου ἐκείνου τῶν ψηφισμάτων ἐγίγνετο. καὶ τοῦτου πᾶς ὁ κόσμος τῆς πολιτείας ἐταράττετο. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ῥαβίριος οὐδ' ὠμολόγει τὸν φόνον, ἀλλ' ἄπαρνος ἦν· οἱ δὲ δῆμαρχοὶ τὴν τε ἰσχὺν καὶ τὴν ἀξίωσιν τῆς βουλῆς καταλῦσαι παντελῶς ἐσπούδαζον, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἑαυτοῖς τοῦ πάνθ' ὅσα βούλονται ποιεῖν προπαρεσκεύαζον· διὰ γὰρ δὴ τοῦ τὰ τε τῷ συνεδρίῳ δόξαντα καὶ τὰ πρὸ τοσοῦτων ἐτῶν πραχθέντα εὐθύνεσθαι τοῖς τέ τι τῶν ὁμοίων ἐπιχειροῦσιν ἄδεια ἐδίδοτο καὶ αἱ τιμωρίαι αὐτῶν ἐκολούοντο. ἡ οὖν γερουσία δεινὸν μὲν καὶ ἄλλως ἐνόμιζεν εἶναι ἄνδρα βουλευτὴν μήτ' ἀδικοῦντά τι καὶ ἐς γῆρας ἤδη προελλυθότα ἀπολεῖσθαι, πολλῷ δὲ δὴ μᾶλλον ἡγανᾷσκετο ὅτι τό τε πρόσχημα τῆς πολιτείας διεβάλλετο καὶ τὰ πράγματα τοῖς φαυλοτάτοις ἐπετρέπετο. σπουδαί τε οὖναραχῶδεις καὶ φιλονεικίαι ἀφ' ἐκατέρων περὶ τε τοῦ δικαστηρίου, τῶν μὲν ὅπως μὴ συναχθῇ, τῶν δὲ ἵνα καθιζήσῃ δικαιοῦντων, καὶ ἐπειδὴ τοῦτο διὰ τε τὸν Καίσαρα καὶ δι' ἄλλους τινὰς ἐνίκησε, περὶ τε τῆς κρίσεως αὐθις συνέβησαν· καὶ ἦν γὰρ αὐτὸς ἐκεῖνος καὶ μετὰ τοῦ Καίσαρος τοῦ Λουκίου δικάζων, οὐ γὰρ ἀπλῶς, ἀλλὰ τὸ δὴ λεγόμενον περδουελλίωνος ὁ Ῥαβίριος ἐκρίθη, κατεψηφίσαντο αὐτοῦ, καίτοι μὴ πρὸς τοῦ δήμου κατὰ τὰ πάτρια, ἀλλὰ πρὸς αὐτοῦ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ οὐκ ἐξὸν αἰρεθέντες. καὶ ἐφῆκε μὲν ὁ Ῥαβίριος, πάντως δ' ἂν καὶ παρὰ τῷ δήμῳ ἑάλω, εἰ μὴ ὁ Μέτελλος ὁ Κέλερ οἰωνιστὴς τε ὦν καὶ στρατηγῶν ἐνεπόδισεν· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ οὔτε ἄλλως ἐπείθοντό οἱ, οὔθ' ὅτι παρὰ τὰ νενομισμένα ἡ κρίσις ἐγεγόνει ἐνεθυμοῦντο, ἀνέδραμεν ἐς τὸ Ἰανίκουλον πρὶν καὶ ὅτιοῦν σφας ψηφίσασθαι, καὶ τὸ σημεῖον τὸ στρατιωτικὸν κατέσπασεν, ὥστε μηδὲν ἔτ' αὐτοῖς ἐξεῖναι διαγνῶναι.

τοῦτο δέ, τὸ κατὰ τὸ σημεῖον, τοιόνδε τί ἐστι. πολλῶν τὸ ἀρχαῖον πολεμίων τῇ πόλει προσοικούντων, φοβούμενοι μήποτε ἐκκλησιαζόντων σφῶν κατὰ τοὺς λόγους ἐπίθωνται τινες τῇ πόλει τὸ Ἰανίκουλον καταλαβόντες, ἐνόμισαν μὴ πάντες ἅμα ψηφίζεσθαι, ἀλλὰ τινας αἰεὶ ἐνόπλους τὸ χωρίον ἐκεῖνο ἐκ διαδοχῆς φυλάττειν. καὶ αὐτό, ἕως μὲν ἡ ἐκκλησία ἦν, ἐφρουροῦν, ὅποτε δὲ διαλυθῇσεσθαι ἔμελλε, τό τε σημεῖον καθηρεῖτο καὶ οἱ φύλακες ἀπηλλάσσοντο· οὐ γὰρ ἐξῆν μὴ φρουρουμένον τοῦ χωρίου ἐκείνου οὐδὲν ἔτι χρηματισθῆναι. τοῦτο δὲ ἐν μόναις ταῖς κατὰ τοὺς λόχους ἀθροιζομέναις ἐκκλησίαις ἐγίνετο, ὅτι τε ἔξω τοῦ τείχους καὶ ὅτι πάντες οἱ τὰ ὄπλα ἔχοντες ἀνάγκην εἶχον ἐς αὐτὰς συνιέναι· καὶ ἔτι καὶ νῦν ὁσίας ἔνεκα ποιεῖται.

οὕτω μὲν δὴ τότε ἢ τε ἐκκλησία καθαιρεθέντος τοῦ σημείου διελύθη καὶ ὁ Ῥαβίριος ἐσώθη· ἐξῆν μὲν γὰρ τῷ Λαβιήνῳ καὶ αὐθις δικάσασθαι, οὐ μέντοι καὶ ἐποίησεν αὐτό.

(a) C Rabirius an aged senator was brought to trial¹ early in BC 63 for the murder of Saturninus. Thirty six full years had gone by since that turbulent demagogue had been cut off by authority of the senate. Rabirius had confessedly taken part in the suppression of the rising of Saturninus, and had according to one account afterwards shewn a needless and brutal² exultation at the tribune's fall. But it does not seem to have been proved or even probable that it was he who struck³ the fatal blow. Indeed a slave had been⁴ publicly recognised as the slayer of Saturninus and duly rewarded for the deed. But that on which Rabirius and others who took the same side relied for their security was certainly the freedom from responsibility supposed to be insured⁵ by the scutum ultimum to those who acted under cover of that decree.

(b) But it was just this presumed right of the senate that the democratic party at Rome, now headed by C Julius Caesar, were determined to call in question. If they could make an example of one of the agents employed by the senate in the suppression of Saturninus, they would have effected what was all-important for their party ends: the

¹ Suet Julius 12 subornavit etiam qui Gaius Rabirius perduellionis dum diceret, quo praecipuo adiutore aliquot ante annos Luci Saturnini solitiorum tribunatum senatus coercuerat, ac sorte index in eum ductus tam cupide condemnavit ut ad populum provocanti nihil aeque ac iudicii acerbitas profuerit.

² liber de vir illustr 73 § 12 caput eius Rabirius quidam senator per consilia in ludibrium circumtulit.

³ He may have taken a leading part, as Scipio Nasica though privatus did against Tib Gracchus.

⁴ Pro Rab § 31. But whether this recognition was anything more than a cautious move on the part of the optimates, to insure themselves against danger such as befel Rabirius later, may be doubted. See Huschke p 513.

⁵ See appendix A.

senate would be lowered and weakened by the loss of the weapon on which it had become accustomed to rely, and thereby a great fear taken off 'popular' tribunes, whose designs the senate had been able to checkmate by the destruction of the leader.

(c) It will be seen that the acts for commission of or participation in which somebody was to be brought to trial were either lawful and unpunishable or criminal in the highest degree and rendering their perpetrator liable to the uttermost penalties of the law. The real question was the constitutional one as to the quality of the acts. And as from the point of view of the populares the slaughter of a tribune was a crime exceptionally heinous it follows that the accusation could only be brought under one of two heads,—maiestas or perduellio. But maiestas was tried in one of the permanent jury courts, the members of which, being taken from the wealthier classes and representing⁶ the 'party of order', were sure to acquit a man accused on that charge. There remained perduellio, in which two forms of procedure were possible—the direct tribunician, by the four hearings, and the ancient one by duumvirs, subject to the right of appeal. Of these the latter was chosen, probably with the view of more effectually frightening the senatorial party by means of the long-disused barbarous penalty named in the ancient law.

(d) The victim selected was old and insignificant, but in all probability one who had in his time done⁷ other deeds of violence than that now laid to his charge, and so not without enemies. He had however hitherto escaped the hand of the law. An accuser was found in the tribune T Atius Labienus, ready to avenge the death of an uncle who had taken part with Saturninus and lost his life on that occasion. Labienus then was to accuse Rabirius of perduellio before duumvirs.

(e) Such was the resolution of the democratic leaders.

⁶ See pro Rab §§ 24, 27, Zumpt 1 2 p 389, Huschke p 521.

⁷ See the expressions used in pro Rab § 8, where of course the accusations are not put from the accuser's own point of view. Mommsen bk v c 5 (iv pp 167—8) puts this more confidently than I have done.

But in their endeavour to carry this into effect they encountered the strongest opposition from the senatorial party, to which the consul Cicero had now attached himself. In the party struggles⁸ to which this 'burning question' gave rise Cicero no doubt took a prominent part and exposed with all his oratorical skill the gross injustice of reviving an obsolete procedure in order to try a man for the acts of more than six and thirty years ago. What form these struggles took I cannot gather from the scanty surviving evidence. But it seems probable that they were brought to an end by a bill declaring in general terms⁹ that inquiry should be made into the circumstances of Saturninus' death, and perhaps providing further that this should be done by appointment of duumvirs to try those accused in connexion with the affair on a charge of perduellio. This bill Labienus laid before the comitia tributa and passed¹⁰ into law. It should seem that Cicero's opposition was successful so far that he induced the tribes to modify¹¹ the penalty, probably substituting the aquae et ignis interdictio for the barbarous execution of the old law. I conjecture that this was partly a trick devised by Caesar: they gave up to Cicero that which public sentiment would not have permitted them to put in practice, and were thereby more easily able to carry their main point—that the duumvirs should be nominated by the *practor urbanus*¹². The trial was soon proceeded with. C. Caesar himself and his uncle L. Caesar were nominated duumvirs: the lot fell upon the former, who with eager partiality (cupide) at once gave sentence against

⁸ I cannot agree with Huschke pp 522—3 as to the σπουδαί etc mentioned in Dion Cassius. I hold that the second contention (περί τοῦ τῆς κλάσεως αἰθῆς σπουδῆσαν) is most naturally referred to the result of the trial, which we know would be made a party matter.

⁹ See note above on Introd C (c).

¹⁰ This is the view of Mommsen Röm Staatsrecht II pp 599, 600, Huschke p 522, Zumpt I 2 pp 390—2. Lange II 325 thinks there was no plebiscitum actually passed.

¹¹ Huschke p 523 seems to think that this was done by a scdm. I do not understand how.

¹² This officer is no doubt meant by Dion, and he would probably also preside at the comitia centuriata after the appeal. But surely Metellus Celer cannot have been in that office. His acts are quite inconsistent with any hostility to Rabirius. But Zumpt I 2 p 393 makes him practor urbanus.

the accused. Hereupon Rabirius appealed to the people. That this means the people in their centuries¹³ is clear, for since the Valerian laws that assembly had held the appellate jurisdiction once exercised by the curies. But whether it was necessary after the duumviral sentence to go through the whole process of the four hearings, as in one of the 'extraordinary' tribunician trials, is so far as I know a question which there are no means of answering. Anyhow the assembly of the centuries met, and voting seems to have begun; for we are told that the rejection of the appeal was imminent when the praetor Metellus Celer ran and pulled down the red flag, after which¹⁴ the proceedings necessarily came to an end.

(f) Thus far we have met with no difficulty of importance. Here we are brought face to face with the problem on which so many scholars have of late exercised their wits. Formerly it was assumed without hesitation that the surviving speech of Cicero was delivered before the centuriate assembly on the occasion of the appeal. Since Niebuhr¹⁵ this has been a disputed question, and the balance of expert opinion seems to incline in favour of the other view—that it was delivered at some stage of a fine-process, which was brought on after the capital process had miscarried. In this view I had better at once say that I concur. I proceed to consider the evidence on which my conclusion is based; first the external, then the internal.

(i) External.

1. Dion says that the hauling down of the flag saved Rabirius: Labienus might have brought him to trial again, but he did not do so. Here I believe him to speak of a renewal of the charge of perduellio; which was no doubt as he says permissible¹⁶ by statute [legibus].

¹³ Huschke p 514.

¹⁴ See appendix I.

¹⁵ Zumpt 1 2 note 97 and Rein p 497 adhere to the old view: Lange 11 552, 111 242, Huschke pp 515—28, Madvig

11 p 304. Mommsen Rom Staatsrecht

11 p 598, adopt Niebuhr's view with some modifications.

¹⁶ This is admitted by Zumpt 1 2 pp 265, 396. See Huschke p 514. Thus though forbidden by usage [moribus]. Still it remains true that he makes no mention of a multae irrogatio. Dion wrote in the latter part of the second century AD or the earlier part of the third.

2. Suetonius, when he says that the spite of Caesar served Rabirius better than anything else in his appeal to the people, is also thinking of the trial for perduellio. But his words surely imply either that the people acquitted Rabirius or that they were inclined to do so. Now Dion says the very contrary,—that he would have been convicted before the people also. There is therefore ground for suspecting that neither of these writers understood clearly what he was writing about. The political bearing of the trial is clear in both accounts, but the details are slurred over by Suetonius, who only gives us enough information to throw some discredit upon Dion. Suetonius wrote in the earlier part of the second century AD.

3. Cicero writing to Atticus in 60 BC gives a list of 12 speeches which he was editing. They were to be a collection of consular speeches of political rather than forensic interest. Of these the fourth¹⁷ is for Rabirius. But whether the surviving speech is that referred to cannot be determined except on the supposition that he delivered and edited no other.

4. Cic in Pisonem § 4 (delivered 55 BC) says ego in C Rabirio perduellionis reo XI annis ante me consullem interpositam senatus auctoritatem sustinui contra invidiam atque defendi. Now this description would apply very well to the present speech. But the words perduellionis reo do not prove that the speech,—even granting that it is referred to—is the one delivered before the assembly of centuries on the appeal from

Valer Max VIII 1 absol § 4 says of the case of Appius (he means Publius) Claudius that he was preserved from condemnation by a storm, and the trial not renewed. But we know that he was afterwards fined by vote of the tribes.

¹⁷ ad Att II 1 § 3 quarta pro Rabirio.

the duumvirs. They contain a rhetorical description of Cicero's whole action in the matter. The title of the speech itself may have come down from Cicero himself. Even then it may as Huschke¹⁸ says have been given with an eye rather to the striking feature of the whole case than to the new phase upon which the case had (it is thought) now entered. But it is more likely that it was given by a copyist, chiefly with intent to distinguish it from the speech pro C Rabirio Postumo.

5. Cic orator § 102 says¹⁹ that the real issue involved in the case of Rabirius was whether the honour and greatness (maiestas) of Rome should be maintained ('asserted' or 'vindicated') or not: hence he gave the rein to his power of exaggeration. This also would apply to the present speech. But it speaks only of the case of Rabirius generally, and it tells us nothing as to when or where this or any other speech was delivered.

It will be seen that the external evidence is on the face of it either neutral or unfavourable to the view in which I have declared my concurrence. But it will also be seen that it is not of such a nature as to overpower good internal evidence opposed to it, if such be forthcoming. And it will I think be admitted that Cicero's own references to his defence of Rabirius are not such as he would have made to a pleading in which he had been unsuccessful, as he seems to have been in speaking before the centuries.

(ii) Internal.

1. In § 8 Cicero directly mentions multae irrogatio. The word eadem signifies²⁰ that the same comprehensive bill of penalties recited all the minor charges just mentioned as well as that with which it stands in more immediate connexion. This will hold whether we read perscriptum or praescriptum, though I prefer the former. It is a very forced interpretation²¹ to refer the multae irrogatio to some other case—e.g. that of C. Curtius (§ 8), which was almost certainly tried before the jury court of peculatus. If my view of this passage be correct, this evidence is of itself almost enough to establish my view.

¹⁸ Huschke p 526.

¹⁹ ius omne retinendae maiestatis Rabiri causa continebatur: ergo in omni genere amplificationis exarsimus, with which compare § 72. Quintil VIII 4 deals with amplificatio.

²⁰ Here I am in agreement with Huschke p 515. And in general I think the matter of §§ 6-8 suits far better with the theory of a fine-process than of one for perduellio.

2. The references in §§ 10, 17, to Cicero's previous action, so bitterly complained of by Labienus, are if taken naturally²² rather to be referred to the consul's whole opposition to the trial than to the mere lightening of the penalty²³ of perduellio which Cicero and his party had probably succeeded in effecting. The reason why Cicero so thrusts the penalty question to the front is manifest. The whole case was essentially political, and the most powerful feeling upon which it was now possible for the orator to work was undoubtedly the Roman citizen's pride in his exemption²⁴ from horrible and degrading punishment. Hence he brings in the subject of the perduellio trial in such a way as to justify a digression on the terrors of the scourge and the cross, which, in defiance of the laws meant to guard the person of a Roman, a tribune would have brought back again but for the humanity of a consul. [Huschke p. 517 calls attention to the use of the perfect in § 17 esse depulsum, neglexisti, § 28 putavit, though in more vivid passages presents are used, as §§ 11—13. Perhaps conatus es opposed to facis in § 13 is the most striking instance. But I do not lay much stress on this point. Perhaps § 16 auribus and mentio refer to what Labienus had before proposed.]

3. It is perhaps a stronger argument²⁵ than the last,

²¹ Given by Zumpt l. 2 note 97 (p. 472).

²² See Huschke pp. 516—7.

²³ The view of Zumpt l. 2 pp. 390—1.

²⁴ See appendices E and F.

²⁵ From Huschke p. 518.

that the matter of §§ 11—16 must have filled a far more considerable place in the speech before the centuries. Surely there would have been no less said about the cruelty of Labienus' proposals, probably far more about the obsolescence of the ancient procedure, and the irregular nomination of the duumvirs must have been one of the main points of attack. But this last is in our speech only casually referred to in § 12.

4. Whether the contio mentioned in § 25 be one in which Cicero is at the time²⁶ speaking, I cannot say. Huschke²⁷ is confident that it is. I am inclined to think that it refers to one of the earlier hearings of what I believe to have been a fine-process. The words quam tu habes would prove Huschke's view right were there not quod habuit domi suae in the preceding section.

5. The half-hour limit (§§ 6, 9), assigned by Labienus²⁸ to the speech of Cicero, suits better with procedure before the tribes (where the tribune could preside) than with that before the centuries. Or it may be an indication that the speech was delivered before a contio at one of the three preliminary hearings of a popular trial. If so, and the passage § 17 liberum tempus dabitur etc be rightly referred to a forecast of the fuller speech on the occasion of the fourth hearing, then the supposition²⁹ that this speech falls in one of the contiones of the fine-process gains great probability. But I am in doubt on this point. The limitation was probably in any case an arbitrary act, but it was clearly based on the tribune's power of intercessio; and this we know could be exercised³⁰ in any assembly.

²⁶ Quintilian (quoted in my note) seems to think that it is.

²⁷ Huschke pp 517, 527.

²⁸ Huschke thinks that he allowed Hortensius and Cicero half an hour each.

²⁹ Huschke pp 527—8. It is to be remembered that in this case the tribune would preside. See on § 6 comparato.

³⁰ Lange 1 843. For cases even before the centuries see Livy III 24 § 7, 25 § 2, 29 § 6, IV 50 § 6, etc. Becker II 3 p 113.

6. In § 1 we find defensio capitis famae fortunarumque omnium, in § 3 supplicium, in § 5 dimicatio capitis famae fortunarumque omnium, and have mention of Rabirius' salus to be preserved, and of his vita being staked on the popular vote. [§§ 10—17 do not concern us here, and have been dealt with above]. In §§ 3, 31 we hear of supplicium, in § 31 capitis citantur. But in the peroration § 36 we learn that Rabirius fears famae vulnus and impetus civium. In § 37 we have clear reference to exile, which would deprive him of honourable death and burial at home. Now we know what extravagant language Cicero could employ when it suited him, and I do not think that there is anything in all this to shew that the life of Rabirius was really in danger²¹ from the result of the trial at which this speech was delivered. The peroration seems even in its fragmentary state to contain evidence²² to the contrary effect. And Cicero is appealing for an old man (§ 2) who could not in the course of nature (§ 37) live many more years. The real question is, what connexion can there be between multae irrogatio on the one hand and exile and infamia on the other? This I have considered in an appendix (K), and arrived at the conclusion that there was such a connexion in some cases at least. Holding this view, I cannot but regard the expressions in the peroration as sufficient to prove that the stronger ones which come earlier in the speech are intentionally overdrawn. I cannot believe that the references to loss of caput prove the speech to have been delivered before the centuries, or that the risk to Rabirius' vita means any more than the possibility of a disastrous change in the conditions of his life.

7. Huschke remarks²³ that throughout the speech

²¹ Of course, supposing the old penalty to have been removed (as suggested above), this would not shew that the speech was not delivered before the centuries. But it would shew that it might just as well have been before the tribes, if caput was in any way thereby endangered.

²² Huschke p. 516.

²³ p. 518.

Labienus is treated as accuser. Now so far as we know the procedure by duumvirs from the only case recorded—that of Horatius—it seems that the appeal from their decision introduced a direct contest³⁴ between them and the accused. In fact they are the accusers. Now, however unwilling Cicero may have been to make any reference to Caesar, he can hardly have avoided doing so in the speech before the centuries. This he would very likely tone down in a subsequent edition, but I do not think that he would omit³⁵ it altogether. The auctor huius iudici of § 33 might be Caesar, but is more probably Labienus, who by a rogatio had originally set on foot the trial.

Such is the evidence, scattered meagre and inconclusive, on which a conclusion has to be based. I have endeavoured to state it fairly: and I think that the delicate balance of probability inclines to the side I have taken. I hold that the speech edited and preserved by Cicero was one in which he felt that he had done justice to his powers, his effort in a cause won. Whether³⁶ Labienus withdrew from the trial after this speech, or whether a vote was taken and Rabirius saved, I cannot say. But that he was saved I cannot doubt. I have now only to acknowledge with gratitude my debt to Professor Huschke, to whom I owe so much of the help necessary in treating of this very difficult subject.

F. ABSTRACT OF THE SPEECH.

Huschke's remarks, pp 529—32.

§§ 1—5. A. Exordium. Cicero justifies his own conduct in undertaking the defence, and

There are two sides to the trial, and Cicero speaks (a) as advocate points out that the object aimed at by the accusers is not to crush a harmless

³⁴ Livy I 26 §§ 6, 8.

³⁵ As Zumpt I 2 p 396 seems to think. I follow Huschke p 522.

³⁶ Huschke p 532 decidedly takes the former view, and I am inclined to agree with him.

defending Rabirius (β) as consul defending the constitution. The latter function is the more important. Hence the greater part of the speech is devoted to this.

§§ 6—31. B. Refutatio.

old man but to weaken the powers of the senate and the consuls in dealing with lawless disturbers of the public peace. He claims the sympathy and support of the citizens in his maintenance of a cause which is emphatically that of constitutional authority and the best interests of Rome.

If the consul is to justify the killing of Saturninus against the efforts of Caesar's partisans and the prepossessions of the people, he must shew himself to be a true popularis. Hence this digression. He appeals to the Roman pride in libertas, and artfully contrasts Gracchus with that 'lesser light,' Labienus.

He next complains of the unfair restrictions imposed on him by Labienus; and proceeds to clear away the prejudice raised against his client by a number of irrelevant charges. These, he declares, either (a) have been already disproved, or (b) have never been brought forward in a court of law, or (c) are too grotesquely hideous too filthy and in fact too improbable to be seriously entertained. With a passing reference to the charge against Rabirius of having killed Saturninus, he goes on to declare that he is proud of having opposed the revival of an obsolete and barbarous procedure. [He then flies off into a digression, contrasting his own conduct with that of the accuser and vehemently protesting that he the consul has a far better right than Labienus the tribune to the honourable appellation popularis.] He will for the present waive the questions of legality and custom. §§ 6—17.

He now deals directly with the affair of Saturninus. It has been already proved that Rabirius was not the slayer of that demagogue. Were this not so, he would be proud to admit the truth of the charge. As he cannot admit the fact, he will go as far as he can, and admit the intent. He would rather argue that Saturninus was rightfully put to death. §§ 18, 19. [Here is a lacuna.]

[Here probably followed some description of the revolutionary proceedings of Saturninus.]

The defence is resumed in the form of a narrative in which stress is laid upon all the points in which any justification can be found for the conduct of Rabirius on the occasion in question. He only did what all the best men in Rome did. He acted as a true patriot and accepted a responsibility which it would have been cowardly to shirk. The decisions of the law courts shew the opinion of recognized public authorities on the cause of Saturninus. To condemn Rabirius now is to stain with ignominy the names of all the men of whom Rome was then proud—even that of her great hero Marius. That Marius is dead, is no answer to this: we should reverence the dead, and honour as we would be honoured. Besides, we know that the real slayer of Saturninus has been already publicly recognized and rewarded. §§ 20—31. [Here is a lacuna.]

[He probably defended the Senate against the charge of having acted not in a patriotic but a party spirit in 100 B C or now. He then argues, as you backed up the Senate in the matter of the law of Rullus, so now shew the same sobriety and wisdom.]

§§ 32—38. C. Peroratio. He then points to the need of a firm and patriotic policy in these critical times, declares that he will do his duty like a man, and concludes with a pathetic personal appeal for mercy to Rabirius.

Here the two sides to the trial are very naturally treated in the inverse order, so as to keep the regular appeal for the accused to the last.

M TULLI CICERONIS
PRO C RABIRIO [PERDUELLIONIS REO]
AD QUIRITES ORATIO

I. 1. Etsi, Quirites, non est meae consuetudinis initio dicendi rationem reddere qua de caussa quemque defendam, propterea quod cum omnibus civibus in eorum periculis semper satis iustam mihi causam neces-

§ 1. rationem] Cicero speaking before a hostile audience saw the necessity for this ingenious justification of his conduct in undertaking the defence of Rabirius. The introductory reference to his usual practice need not be taken seriously. The opening of the speech pro Roscio Amerino shews that he had already begun a defence thus: he did it again in the pro Murena later in this very year: and the pro Sulla shews that he continued the practice. And it is quite in keeping with the spirit of Roman criminal trials.

defendam] to conduct a prosecution was looked upon as a thankless and generally a revolting task. But to defend a fellow-citizen was a congenial task and a means of earning gratitude and popularity. See div in Caecil §§ 1, 5. We see then that the word defendam here is emphatic.

periculis] this is the regular expression for trials on criminal charges, used no doubt with an eye to the grave penalties incurred by the accused if convicted. See for instance pro Mur §§ 5, 10, Quintil VI I §§ 21, 22, 36.

causam necessitudinis] here I take the genitive as in div in Caecil § 61 to express the simple object, 'ground for close connexion'. He means 'let a citizen be prosecuted on a criminal charge, that is enough to make me ready to befriend him'. It might be a genitive of more specific definition (Madvig § 286), making a previous necessitudo the caussa, but I think not.

situdinis esse duxi, tamen in hac defensione capitis famae fortunarumque omnium C Rabiri proponenda ratio videtur esse officii mei, propterea quod, quae iustissima mihi caussa ad hunc defendendum esse visa est, eadem vobis ad absolvendum debet videri. 2. nam me cum amicitiae vetustas, cum dignitas hominis, cum ratio humanitatis, cum meae vitae perpetua consuetudo capitis famae fortunarumque] referring to the penalties in store for Rabirius if condemned. Compare pro Mur § 2 and § 8 in capitis dimicatione. See Introd C (i, l, m), D (f), appendix C, F, H, K.

ratio officii mei] 'the explanation of my service', that is, the justification of my defence of Rabirius. For this common sense of officium see pro Mur §§ 2, 3, and compare generally pro Sulla § 2 sic hoc ego sentio, si mei facti rationem vobis constantiamque huius officii ac defensionis probaro, causam quoque me P. Sullae probaturum. See also Quintil iv 1 § 7.

debet] 'is bound to', 'may be expected to'. Compare § 4. de imp Cn Pomp § 28, pro Cluent § 104.

§ 2. amicitiae] this ground is continually put forward. We find it treated at length in pro Mur §§ 7—10. So inimicitiae were held to justify a man in prosecuting. See pro Mur § 56 and a host of other places.

dignitas] Rabirius was a senator.

hominis] in speaking of the 'high standing of the person' Cicero is giving a second personal reason apart from his own friendship. Rabirius is regarded as having two personal claims on his advocate as ratio] from the primary sense of 'thinking' we get to 'reckoning', 'accounting', and so to 'reason', 'principle', 'plan', 'system'. Hence I draw that of 'working' almost = 'influence'. Compare § 22 ignaviae ratio. To discuss the meanings of this word fully would require a separate treatise.

(a) Rabirius the friend (b) Rabirius the senator. Compare de imp Cn Pomp § 48 quod ut illi proprium ac perpetuum sit, Quirites, cum communis salutis atque imperi tum ipsius hominis causa, sicuti facitis, velle et optare debetis, and pro Mur § 8 if the reading there be sound.

humanitatis] here = human kindness, 'sympathy', almost 'philanthropy'. Compare § 26, de imp Cn Pomp § 42 humanitate iam tanta est ut difficile dictu sit utrum hostes magis virtutem eius pugnantem timuerint an mansuetudinem victi dilexerint, pro Sulla § 64 peterem veniam errato L. Caecili ex intimis vestris cogitationibus atque ex humanitate communi, pro Mur §§ 6, 65. This does not express a personal claim on Cicero's services: humanitas prompts him to defend Rabirius as he would any other man in the same position.

meae vitae etc] the 'unbroken

ad C Rabirium defendendum est adhortata, tum vero, ut id studiosissime facerem, salus rei publicae, consulare officium, consulatus denique ipse mihi una a vobis cum salute rei publicae commendatus coëgit. non enim C Rabirium culpa delicti, non invidia vitae, non denique veteres iustae gravesque inimicitiae civium in discrimen capitis vocaverunt, sed ut illud summum practice' of Cicero's life up to this time had been to gain influence by the judicious employment of his talents as an advocate. Strictly speaking he had not (as here implied) confined himself to defence. He had conducted the prosecution of Verres; but he was at that time a young man seeking fame, and he was playing to win the favour of the popular party. He was now attached to the senatorial party; hence his defence of Rabirius. See generally what he says in pro Mur §§ 5, 8, 9, de imp Cn Pomp §§ 1, 2.

salus rei publicae etc] all this sounds very well, as in pro Mur §§ 4, 5. It is as a patriotic statesman that he feels most impelled to throw himself heartily (studiosissime) into the work of defence.

consulare officium] perhaps the 'duty of a consul' here refers particularly (as Turnebus says) to the duty of maintaining the right of the Senate to issue the scutum ultimum (for which see appendix A) and the validity of the acts of a consul in virtue of the same. See on § 6 conquerendum, § 9 auxilium.

consulatus ipse] the obligations of the consulship in this respect are prettily handled in pro Mur §§ 1—5.

una a vobis] the words sound as if they had originally stood in the order a vobis una.

delicti] this is a very mild expression for the offence with which Rabirius stood charged. But on what authority Suet Jul 12 calls him praecepius adiutor of the Senate in suppressing Saturninus I know not. For delicta, 'wrongs' or 'torts', see Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

invidia vitae] 'odium brought on him by his life'. In Roman trials this was a consideration of the utmost importance. See pro Mur §§ 11—14, pro Sulla § 69 omnibus in rebus, iudices, quae graviores maioresque sunt, quid quisque voluerit cogitarit admiserit non ex crimine sed ex moribus eius qui arguitur est ponderandum. neque enim potest quisquam nostrum subito fingi neque cuiusquam repente vita mutari aut natura converti.

iustae] regular, 'well-grounded'. We may then infer that Cicero at least pretended to regard the ground of enmity advanced by Labienus (the murder of his uncle, see § 14) as insufficient to justify his inimicitiae.

summum auxilium etc] referring to the so-called scutum ultimum, for which see appendix A.

auxilium maiestatis atque imperi, quod nobis a maioribus est traditum, de re publica tolleretur, ut nihil posthac auctoritas senatus, nihil consulare imperium, nihil consensus bonorum contra pestem ac perniciem civitatis valeret, idcirco in his rebus evertendis unius hominis senectus, infirmitas solitudo[que] temptata est. 3. quam maiestatis atque imperi] the words form one notion, 'the imperial dignity' of Rome. For maiestas see §§ 20, 35, and orator § 102 ius omne retinendae maiestatis Rabiri causa continebatur.

traditum] so Sallust Cat 29 § 3 speaking of the same decree says ea potestas per senatum more Romano magistratui maxuma per-mittitur.

auctoritas senatus] it is well known that, when the passing of a regular consultum was prevented by the intercessio of a tribune, the sententia which had obtained a majority was called auctoritas. See for instances ad fam 1 2 § 4, 7 § 4, and the remarks in Wordsworth's Fragments and Specimens pp 416—8. But I do not feel sure that the word is not sometimes loosely applied to a scutum proper, as in de legibus III § 37 we find senatus vetus auctoritas de Bacchanalibus referring to what Livy XXXIX 18 § 8 expressly calls consultum. On the occasion of which Cicero is here speaking it is not clear how it could have been technically auctoritas, indeed in § 20 it is called consultum. Doubtless Saturninus would have vetoed the motion; but he was in the Capitol with his follow-ers: and the rest of the tribunes (see on § 20) were in accord with the senatorial majority. Perhaps it merely means 'authority', 'just influence', as in de legibus III § 27 senatus legi nostra confirmatur auctoritas. See on § 17.

imperium] this power of 'com-mand', which originally carried with it the power of life and death was essentially of a military nature and only certain classes of magis-trates possessed it. The tribunes did not. The consuls and all other magistrates who possessed it in-herited it from the kings. See Lange I 692—5.

bonorum] the supporters of the senatorial policy are meant, of course. 'The better classes' Theo-gnis ἀγαθοί. See § 21.

pestem ac perniciem] Cicero as a supporter (or tool) of the senate applies this language to revolution-ary or simply demagogic leaders or any one 'he dislikes—tribunes es-pecially, of course. See pro Mil §§ 84, 88, pro Mur § 85, pro Sestio § 135.

in his etc] these words are bracketed by Ernesti and Kayser, but I do not feel sure that they are a gloss on idcirco. 'In the pro-cess of overturning' is about the full meaning, and the form of expres-sion is Ciceronian.

senectus etc] abstract for con-crete, as often. So § 15 verborum ob rem si est boni consulis, cum cuncta auxilia rei publicae labefactari convellique videat, ferre opem patriae, succurrere saluti fortunisque communibus, implorare civium fidem, suam salutem posteriorem salute communi ducere, est etiam bonorum et fortium civium, quales vos omnibus rei publicae temporibus exstitistis, intercludere omnis seditionum vias, munire praesidia rei publicae, summum in consulibus imperium, summum in senatu consilium putare: ea qui secutus sit, laude potius et honore quam poena et supplicio dignum iudicare. 4. quam ob rem labor in hoc defendendo acerbitates, § 38 amici periculo, ad Q fratrem I I § 25 nullius inopiam ac solitudinem.

§ 3. si est boni consulis] so pro Mur § 4. Compare generally de legibus III § 8 where he gives a draft of some ideal statutes, saying of the consuls ollis salus populi suprema lex esto, (in view of his own action as consul).

fidem] protection, 'support', as often. Compare II in Verrem I § 25 deum atque hominum fidem implorabis. Or it may be 'loyalty' to the government.

suam...ducere] according to Hotomann this is a hint at possible plots against his life on the part of Labienus. It may be; or it may be merely a flourish, for Cicero loved to pose as a patriot and possible martyr.

temporibus] 'circumstances'. Hence often 'critical times', 'needs', 'emergencies'. Compare § 4, div in Caecil §§ 4, 5, pro Sestio § 123 neque poetae...tempori meo defuerunt, ad fam I 7 § 2, II 18 § 3 tempora autem rei publicae qualia futura sint, quis scit? mihi quidem turbulenta videntur fore.

intercludere] to cut off, 'block'. Compare de fin II § 118 bene laudata virtus voluptatis aditus intercludat necesse est. pro Scauro § 40 coniurationi via intercludatur.

praesidia] the 'guard-posts' of the commonwealth: a metaphor often employed by Cicero in speaking of the means available for opposing revolutionary designs. See pro Mur §§ 79, 82, 85.

summum...imperium] so of the consuls in de legibus III § 8 militiae summum ius habento.

consilium] the power of deliberation, the guidance of policy. As the word answers to both 'counsel' and 'council', it is naturally of frequent occurrence in speaking of the senate. See de legibus III § 28 si senatus dominus sit publici consili quodque is creverit defendant omnes, pro Sestio § 137 ita magistratus annuos creaverunt ut consilium senatus rei publicae praepone-rent sempiternum, Cato maior § 19, de domo § 73, Livy I 8 § 7.

praecipue meus est, studium vero conservandi hominis commune mihi vobiscum esse debebit.

II. Sic enim existimare debetis, Quirites, post hominum memoriam rem nullam maiorem, magis periculosam, magis ab omnibus vobis providendam neque a tribuno plebis susceptam neque a consule defensam neque ad populum Romanum esse delatam. agitur enim nihil aliud in hac caussa, Quirites, nisi ut nullum sit posthac in re publica publicum consilium, nulla bonorum consensio contra improborum furorem et audaciam, nullum extremis rei publicae temporibus ab omnibus vobis] Draeger, Historische Syntax I § 189 p 428, shews that by the use of the ablative with ab (rather than the dative) after the gerundive the stress is laid on the vobis. So pro Sest § 41 a consilibus meam causam suscipiendam esse dicebat, de imp Cn Pomp § 34, pro Sulla § 23. The use is very rare in later writers.

§ 4. conservandi] that is, [the anxiety to] save him from the fate of a dishonoured exile. See Introd E (f), appendix C, H, K.

providendam] to be 'guarded against', a common sense. So de imp Cn Pomp §§ 20, 29, ad fam vi 10 § 6, IX 18 § 4, Ter Andr 208.

defensam] 'resisted'. As in pro Mur § 5 de civium periculis defendendis, we see that what is meant is the undertaking to defend a man in a trial. The word sounds rather awkward with rem, but it must be remembered that rem really means the charge brought by Labienus; and we actually have crimen defensum in Livy XLII 48 § 2. It is no more than a strong instance of the original meaning 'ward off'. Compare de off III § 74 si is, qui non defendit iniuriam neque propulsat cum potest, iniuste facit.

publicum consilium] this I take to mean policy adopted in the common interest of the state, a 'common policy' or 'state policy' as opposed to the selfish aims of unscrupulous demagogues. Compare Brutus § 329 pacis spem a publico consilio esse exclusam, de legibus III § 28 (quoted above), Livy III 63 § 10 (of a contest between the tribunes and senate) ne ita omnia tribuni potestatis suae implerent ut nullum publicum consilium sinerent esse. ita demum liberam civitatem fore, ita aequatas leges, si sua quisque iura ordo, suam maiestatem teneat. Nor can I feel sure that this is not the meaning in pro Sest § 42, though Halm makes it = the senate, as it sometimes does. But I must also admit that it is possible to refer all these passages to the senate as the State Council.

improborum] the demagogues.

perfugium et praesidium salutis. 5. quae cum ita sint, primum, quod in tanta dimicatione capitis famae fortunarumque omnium fieri necesse est, ab Iove optimo maximo ceterisque dis deabusque immortalibus, quorum ope et auxilio multo magis haec res publica quam ratione hominum et consilio gubernatur, pacem ac veniam peto, precorque ab eis, ut hodiernum diem et ad huius salutem conservandam et ad rem publicam constituendam illuxisse patiantur. deinde vos, Quirites, quorum potestas proxime ad deorum immortalium numen accedit, oro atque obsecro, quoniam uno temsalutis] a subjective genitive, to be expressed by 'for'. Compare pro Sulla § 79 munite communem arcem bonorum, obstruite perfugia improborum, and see Halm and Wilkins on de imp Cn Pomp § 39 avaritiae perfugium. The word means the 'weal' of the state, as in de re publ I § 51 certe in optimorum consiliis posita est civitatum salus.

§ 5. Iove etc] see div in Caecil § 43. Demosthenes both begins and ends his speech on the Crown with a similar invocation.

quorum ope etc] Verg Aen II 352 de quibus imperium hoc steterat. See also Aristoph Clouds 587—9.

pacem ac veniam] 'a kindly and gracious hearing'. Compare pro Fonteio § 30 [20] illae (gentes) in bellis gerendis ab dis immortalibus pacem ac veniam petunt, and the common use pace tua dixerim. I think what is asked is (a) that they will receive his petition in a kindly spirit, not prejudiced against Rabirius (pacem), and (b) that they will be indulgent (veniam). Of course the two really form but one notion. Compare also Livy I 31 § 7, XXXIX 10 § 5, and see Conington on Verg Aen I 519, III 144, 261, 370, XI 101.

precor] compare the precatio in pro Mur § 1.

constituendam etc] to 'set the commonwealth on a firm basis', that is, to strengthen or establish the government,—by confirming the right of the senate to act promptly and summarily in great emergencies, which was of course the real question at issue in this trial. For the word compare de legibus III § 42 nihil est enim exitiosius civitatibus, nihil tam contrarium iuri ac legibus, nihil minus civile et humanum, quam composita et constituta re publica quicquam agi per vim.

potestas etc] compare the words addressed to the jury in pro Mur § 83, and the comparison of their power to that of the gods in § 2 of that speech and pro Cluent § 195.

pore vita C Rabiri, hominis miserrimi atque innocentissimi, salus rei publicae vestris manibus suffragiisque permittitur, adhibeatis in hominis fortunis misericordiam, in rei publicae salute sapientiam, quam soletis.

6. Nunc quoniam, T Labiene, diligentiae meae temporis angustiis obstitisti meque ex comparato et constituto spatio defensionis in semihorae curriculum coegisti, parebitur, et, quod iniquissimum est, accusatoris condicioni et, quod miserrimum, inimici potestati. quamvita...salus] Kayser after earlier scholars inserts et before both these words, to improve the run of the sentence. But without it the latter is more identified with the former, which I prefer.

manibus] they would hand in tablets, each man marking his own according to the verdict he found. See § 32.

suffragiis] the lex Cassia [called tabellaria], carried in BC 137 by L Cassius Longinus a tribune, introduced ballot voting in all trials before the assembled people with the sole exception of cases of perduellio. In BC 107 the tribune C Caelius got this exception removed, principally with intent to take vengeance on an individual. See Mommsen Geschichte des Römischen Munzwesens p 636 No 279, and in particular de legibus III §§ 35, 36, the passage (γ) at head of Introduction.

in...fortunis...in...salute] this is the common idiom, where we should say 'in dealing with'....., 'in the case of'..... Compare for instance § 7, de imp Cn Pomp § 56 in salute communi.

§ 6. diligentiae] the care and labour of a thorough defence, which would naturally have been shewn in a longer speech. See § 9.

comparato] arranged, 'appointed'. Very common, compare I in Verrem § 42, pro Balbo § 31. Whether there was a customary limit to the length of speeches in a iudicium populi I do not know. Probably this was regularly done by the president of the court. Huschke p 527 refers the words to a private arrangement of time between Cicero and Hortensius.

spatio] from its meanings, 'room', 'space', 'extent', we may feel the force of the intended opposition to curriculum, which here seems to signify a course more marked out and limited. See § 30.

semihorae] see Introd E (ii)⁴.

condicioni] the 'terms' imposed by the prosecutor. Compare pro Mur § 60, pro Plancio § 41, pro Cluent § 42, Tacitus Agr 27, and see note on § 15 below.

potestati] Labienus was tribune. See § 28.

praescriptione] 'marking out', 'limitation'. See pro Caecina § 8 quam in hac praescriptione semihorae patroni mihi partes reliquisti, consulis ademisti, propterea quod ad defendendum prope modum satis erit hoc mihi temporis, ad conquerendum parum. 7. nisi forte de locis religiosis ac de lucis, quos ab hoc violatos esse dixisti, pluribus verbis tibi respondendum putas: quo in crimine nihil est umquam abs te dictum, nisi a C Macro obiectum esse crimen id C Rabirio. in quo ego demiror meminisse te quid obiecerit C Rabirio Macer inimicus, oblitum esse quid aequi et iurati iudices iudicarint. III. 8. an de peculatu facto aut de tabupraescribat. In § 38 below we have praestitutum.

conquerendum] for the word see pro Mur §§ 7, 55. The complaint he would have liked to amplify in this speech referred no doubt (as the words consulis ademisti shew) to the weakening of the imperium which would ensue on the condemnation of Rabirius. See on §§ 2, 9.

§ 7. religiosis] 'consecrated' by religious awe. See div in Caecil § 3. It seems that Macer had charged Rabirius with some profanation of holy places, probably in the hurry and confusion of the attack on Saturninus and his crew.

quo in crimine] 'in handling which charge'. crimen = a particular head or 'count' of an accusation. But I do not feel sure that Labienus himself did more than allude to it in passing: of course Cicero would eagerly seize on the smallest insinuation when he felt able to answer it.

C Macro] this is Gaius Licinius Macer, a wordy and fluent historian, but notable as having studied ancient records at first hand. As an orator we are told by Cicero (Brutus § 238) that he was very careful in his pleadings, but far from a brilliant speaker: while his life character and looks told greatly against him. In the year B.C. 66 Cicero as praetor presided in the court of repetundae, and Macer was brought before him. Whether sentence was actually passed on him, is not clear: anyhow he was practically condemned, and committed suicide. Thus his accusation of Rabirius must have been at least three years before the date of this speech.

quid...iudicarint] Whatever the charge, Rabirius seems to have been acquitted.

§ 8. peculatu] see appendix B.

facto] it is curious that Cicero should use this expression if his client was innocent of that crime. Hence Lambinus suspected the word with some reason. But I think it merely expresses the allegation of Labienus.

tabulario] Mr Burn (Rome and the Campagna pp 97—8) points lario incenso longa oratio est expromenda? quo in crimine propinquos C Rabiri iudicio clarissimo, C Curtius, pro virtute sua est honestissime liberatus, ipse vero Rabirius non modo in iudicium horum criminum, sed ne in tenuissimam quidem suspicionem verbo est umquam vocatus. an de sororis filio diligentius respondendum est? quem ab hoc necatum esse dixisti, cum ad iudici moram familiaris funeris excusatio quaeout that most of the large public buildings and temples at Rome probably had record-rooms attached to them. Thus we hear of them in the atrium Libertatis and the temples of Jupiter Capitolinus, of Ceres Liber and Libera, and especially in that of Saturn. Besides these, a grand tabularium was erected and dedicated II C 78, which is supposed to have overlooked the Forum. In such places were preserved not only state documents but also records of private transactions. What tabularium is here referred to we cannot tell.

incenso] Cicero mentions the burning of a record-office again in de deorum natura III § 74 sessum it praetor: quid ut iudicetur? qui tabularium incenderit. quod facinus occultius? id se Q Sosius splendidus eques Romanus ex agro Piceno fecisse confessus est. This may refer to the case mentioned in pro Arch § 8, but I doubt it.

propinquos] this word seems to be, more nearly than any other in Latin, equivalent to our 'relative'. I will not discuss it here in its various shades of meaning. Good references for the study of the word are de off I §§ 53—4, 58—9, Laelius § 19, philippic VIII § 1, pro Rosc Am § 96, Sallust Iug 10 § 3, Verg Aen II 86, Gellius XX I § 40. The notion of 'intimacy' comes out well in Cic ad fam IV 12 § 3.

C Curtius] referred to again in pro Rab Post § 45 hem, Postume, tunc es C Curti filius, C Rabiri iudicio et voluntate filius, natura sororis? We see that Rabirius had before the date of that speech (II C 54) adopted a son of a sister who had married this Curtius. But I see no proof that he had done so at the date of this speech (II C 63), indeed the passage just quoted sounds to me very feeble if the adoption had taken place some 10 years previously. The marriage would have made them adfines. Perhaps it is to this marriage relationship that Cicero is referring in the word propinquos.

sororis filio] I see no proof that this is the same sister that Curtius married. Even if it be so, the filius is clearly not the one adopted by old Rabirius, who was still living in II C 54 as Rabirius Postumus.

familiaris funeris] compare in Vatin § 31. That this would be a reretur. quid enim? est [tam] veri simile [quam] cariolem huic sororis maritum quam sororis filium fuisse, atque ita cariolem, ut alter vita crudelissime privaretur, cum alteri ad prolationem iudici biduom quaereretur? an de servis alienis contra legem Fabiam retentis aut de civibus Romanis contra legem Porciam verberatis aut necatis plura dicenda sunt, cum tanto studio C Rabirius totius Appuliae, singulari voluntate Cam-valid plea to stay proceedings is clear from the words of Ulpian quoted in the Digest II 4 §§ 2, 3 praeterea in ius vocari non debetneque funus ducentem familiare iustave mortuo facientem, which shew that it held good in the civil law. Indeed it seems that a man could not in such circumstances be called upon to perform any public act. That he need not appear in his place in the army even after taking the oath is clear from the old form quoted by Cincius (in Gellius XVI 4) giving the following exceptions nisi harumque feriaeve denicales, quae non eius rei causa in eum diem collatae sint, quo is eo die minus ibi esset, etc. Some such excuse as this is probably meant in Cic de domo § 45 (quoted at head of Introduction).

excusatio] 'plea'. Compare pro Mur § 47 morbi excusationi, philippic VIII § 1 propinquitatem excusavit, pro Sestio § 112, de domo § 45, Livy XXXVIII 52.

quid enim etc] Kayser follows Garatoni in bracketing the words tam and quam here, which spoil the obvious meaning; and I am driven to accept this in itself unsatisfactory solution of the difficulty. To read quid enim est tam veri simile quam and take it all for sarcasm seems to me forced and inappropriate to a speech before the people.

crudelissime] this sounds all very well, but there were probably plenty of men at Rome in that age who would have done the same any day.

cum] Kayser brackets this, following Lambinus and Haln; but it gives the good sense of 'merely because'.

alteri] that is, the sororis maritus (Curtius) mentioned above. I see nothing to shew that this trial which it had been sought to delay was in any way connected with the cases of peculatus and incendium above.

biduom] emphatic.

legem Fabiam] see appendix D.

legem Porciam] see appendix E.

Appuliae] Rabirius evidently had interest in this district: perhaps, as Turnebus suggests, he had large estates there. See Introd E (d).

Campaniae] we have mention of domus Rabiriana at Naples in ad Att I 6 § 1. Perhaps the accused was a native of that district.

paniae [vicinitatis] ornetur? cumque ad eius propulsandum periculum non modo homines, sed prope regiones ipsae convenerint, aliquanto etiam latius excitatae quam ipsius vicinitatis nomen ac termini postulabant? nam quid ego ad id longam orationem comparem, quod est in eadem multae irrogatione perscriptum, hunc nec suae nec alienae pudicitiae pepercisse? 9. quin etiam suspicor eo mihi semihoram ab Labieno praestitutam esse, ut ne plura de pudicitia dicerem. ergo ad haec crimina quae patroni vicinitatis] Kayser follows Beck in bracketing this; and it does seem to have crept in from just below. The MSS have Campaniae not Campanae.

ornetur] by deputations sent to petition in his favour; a common device, called laudatio.

prope regiones ipsae] Cicero is no doubt making the most of some trifling demonstration on Rabirius' behalf. It was very easy to get up these laudationes.

ipsius] 'in itself'. That is, it is true they would have supported any neighbour, but not in such force as this. This is due to the merits of Rabirius.

vicinitatis] often concrete thus, like our 'neighbourhood'.

postulabant] required, made it incumbent on them to do. Compare § 29.

multae irrogatione] See Introd C (m), E (f), appendix K.

perscriptum] this is the reading of Manutius adopted by Kayser. It will give the sense of 'drawn out in full', and perhaps contains a rather weak antithesis to the limit of time imposed on Cicero, to which reference is presently made. The MSS seem to have praescriptum, which Zumpt retains. If that be right, it must mean 'inserted in the heading or preamble' of the bill. The figurative sense of 'putting in as a pretext' is seen in Caesar bell civ III 32 ut honesta praescriptione rem turpissimam tegerent. In the de domo § 83 we have [poena] ea praesertim quae ne in ipsa quidem rogatione praescripta est. But there the word surely means 'prescribed', 'appointed' (so praescriptio legis in de leg agr II § 22), which will not do here. I incline therefore to perscriptum; and so Huschke p 515, who sees in it the point that the full statement given by Labienus was unnecessary when every one knew that the matter of Saturninus was the real question at issue.

§ 9. plura...dicerem] how Cicero would have enlarged on this very unsavoury topic readers of his second philippic may guess. The remark made in the pro Caelio § 6 is also instructive in this connexion.

diligentiam desiderant intellegis mihi semihoram istam nimium longam fuisse: illam alteram partem de nece Saturnini nimis exiguum atque angustam esse voluisti: quae non oratoris ingenium, sed consulis auxilium implorat et flagitat. 10. nam de perduellionis iudicio, quod a me sublatum esse criminari soles, meum crimen est, non Rabiri. quod utinam, Quirites, ego id aut primus aut solus ex hac re publica sustulissem! utinam hoc, quod ille crimen esse volt, proprium testimonium meae laudis esset! quid enim optari potest quod ego malletm quam me in consulatu meo carnificem de foro, illam alteram] Huschke pp 529—30 would read ad illam etc, thus carrying on semihoram to exiguum etc.

consulis auxilium] the succour or support that a consul is bound to give—which I take to be the full meaning of these words—is I think that maintenance of the imperium in its plenitude of power, acting under the commission of the senate, which follows from the justification of the acts of Marius. So Turnebus had understood it. See on §§ 2, 6. Perhaps he intentionally seeks to make his hearers think of the auxilium tribunicium.

§ 10. a me] doubtless Cicero had used every effort to prevent the trial of Rabirius taking place at all, especially before duumvirs. Labienus may in his speeches and common talk have put some such colour on the consul's action as he is here represented to have done. See § 17 depulsum, and Introd E (e) and (f ii)².

quod.....id] Mr Reid writes to me: 'The id has been frequently attacked, but is sound, quod being the conjunction 'whereas'. Compare de divin ii § 127 quod quoniam illud negatis, Acad ii § 79 quod ne id facere posses, orator § 52 quod quidem ego...sentiebam, non te id sciscitari, ii in Verrem ii § 160 quod nisi Metellus hoc tam graviter egisset, ad Att XIII 10 § 1 quod nisi mihi hoc venisset in mentem, Plaut capt 754 quod absque hoc esset, Ter Phorm 157 quod utinam ne Phormioni id suadere in mentem venisset'.

carnificem etc] of course Cicero knew that Rabirius would in no case have been actually put to death; but he makes the most of this in order to excite compassion for the accused. The carnufices were servants of the triumviri capitales, and were probably servi publici. They were kept to torture slaves or put them to death.

de foro] we know that from very early times executions had taken place in the Forum; see Livy vii 19 § 3, ix 24 § 15, xxi 57 § 3, xxviii crucem de campo sustulisse? sed ista laus primum est maiorum nostrorum, Quirites, qui expulsis regibus nullum in libero populo vestigium crudelitatis regiae retinuerunt, deinde multorum virorum fortium, qui vestram libertatem non acerbitate suppliciorum infestam, sed lenitate legum munitam esse voluerunt.

IV. 11. Quam ob rem uter nostrum tandem, Labiene, popularis est? tune, qui civibus Romanis in contione ipsa carnificem, qui vincla adhiberi putas oportere, qui in campo Martio, comitiis centuriatis, auspicato in loco, crucem ad civium supplicium defigi et constitui iubes, an ego, qui funestari contionem contagione carnificis veto, qui expiandum forum populi Romani ab illis nefarii sceleris vestigiis esse dico, qui 28 § 3. It is to be noted that both here and in § 11 Cicero speaks of both the Forum and the Campus Martius. This may be an intentional following of the words of the old law quoted in Livy I 26, which run verberato vel intra pomerium vel extra pomerium. See on § 15.

crucem] Mr Reid writes; 'Crucifixion, I think, always took place outside the walls. The idea appears to be that the carnufex fetches the perduellis from the forum to crucify him in the campus Martius, the proper place for a military traitor to die'.

crudelitatis] Cicero lays great stress on this point. See §§ 13, 17. Quintilian V 13 § 20 mentions this line of argument as a rhetorical commonplace, referring to this speech as an illustration.

virorum fortium] such as the authors of the Porcian laws.

infestam] this sense, 'endangered',

'threatened', 'beset', is the primary one, and very common.

§ 11. popularis] δημοτικός: a true defender of the rights of the people, opposed to the aristocratic champions of the senate. It is a cant expression of the time. See de leg. agr. II § 15 consul re non oratione popularis, and the words put into the mouth of Laelius (§ 95) contio, quae ex imperitissimis constat, tamen iudicare solet quid intersit inter popularem, id est assentatorem et levem civem, et inter constantem et verum et gravem.

contione] which would naturally be held in the Forum.

campo Martio] the centuries were originally the army, and as a military assembly met outside the city proper; see Mommsen bk II c 1. This rule had survived.

auspicato in loco] compare pro Mil § 43 ad illa augusta centuriarum auspicia, Livy I 36 § 6.

castam contionem, sanctum campum, inviolatum corpus omnium civium Romanorum, integrum ius libertatis defendo servari oportere? 12. popularis vero tribunus plebis, custos defensorque iuris et libertatis! Porcia lex virgas ab omnium civium Romanorum corpore amovit: hic misericors flagella rettulit. Porcia lex libertatem civium lictori eripuit: Labienus, homo popularis, carnifici tradidit. C Gracchus legem tulit, ne de capite civium Romanorum iniussu vestro iudicaretur: hic popularis a duumviris, iniussu vestro, non iudicari de cive Romano, sed indicta caussa civem Romanum capitis condemnari coegit. 13. tu mihi etiam legis Porciae, tu C Gracchi, tu horum libertatis, tu cuiusquam de-omnium civium Romanorum] so in speaking of the crucifixion of Gavius by Verres (II in Verr v § 170) he says facinus est vincere civem Romanum, scelus verberare, prope parricidium necare; quid dicam in crucem tollere? and what follows also well illustrates our present passage.

§ 12. virgas] Rich (dict Ant) points out that this word is used of a cane or switch used for the chastisement of schoolboys, and of the staff carried by the lictor in the right hand to clear a way for the magistrate. But that it could be made a severe implement of torture may be gathered from II in Verrem v §§ 140—2. So in Livy epit 57 (of Scipio's restoration of discipline before Numantia) quem militem extra ordinem deprehendisset, si Romanus esset, vitibus, si extraneus, virgis cecidit. See appendix E.

flagella] the flagellum was (see Rich) a far more cruel implement than the virga. It had a number of tails, the wiry thongs of which cut into the victim with fearful keenness. See Hor sat 1 2 41, 3 119, epod 4 11.

C Gracchus] for this Sempronian law see appendix F.

duumviris] see Introd B, and E (c).

indicta] because before these irregularly appointed Duumvirs Rabirius had not had a fair chance. Turnebus. And the procedure was in any case a summary one, judged by the standard of Cicero's time.

coegit] the force would I imagine be in the illegal appointment of Duumvirs for the purpose of condemning Rabirius: not in any constraint laid on them after appointment. But see Introd C (n).

§ 13. tu horum libertatis] Kayser brackets these awkward words.

nique hominis popularis mentionem facis, qui non modo suppliciiis inusitatis, sed etiam verborum crudelitate inaudita violare libertatem huius populi, temptare mansuetudinem, commutare disciplinam conatus es? namque haec tua, quae te hominem clementem popularemque delectant: I, LICTOR, COLLIGA MANUS, quae non modo huius libertatis mansuetudinisque non sunt, sed ne Romuli quidem aut Numae Pompili: Tarquini, superbissimi atque crudelissimi regis, ista sunt cruciatus carmina: quae tu, homo lenis ac popularis, libentissime commemoras: CAPUT OBNUBITO, ARBORI INFELICI SUStemptare] to 'make trial of' their clemency = to see how much of this bloodthirsty procedure they will stand. So often with patientiam, prudentiam, scientiam, etc. See the use in de imp Cn Pomp § 23.

Possibly they may have got out of their proper place. horum refers to the assembled citizens.

disciplinam] the notions and beliefs in which Romans are brought up = 'traditions'. See § 28, pro Cluent § 76.

I, LICTOR, etc.] for this and the following quotation see Livy I 26 quoted at the head of the Introduction.

huius] 'this' freedom, which we see around us, in which we live. This use of the demonstrative is very common in Cicero.

Tarquini] this reference to Tarquin is a mere oratorical flourish, as Prof Clark remarks, Early Roman Law § 12.

carmina] 'strains', meaning the set form of words. See Livy I 26 § 6, 32 § 8, III 64 § 9.

obnubito] the veiling of the head was a solemn preliminary to execution. So in II in Verrem V §§ 156, 157 we have capitibus involutis. Indeed it was always the custom to prepare for death thus, in deference to the powers of the world below. So Caesar veiled his head as he fell murdered.

arbori] old ablative, as Klotz remarks. So in Livy I 26 § 6.

infelici] 'barren', hence 'accursed'. Paulus the epitomizer of Festus says that Cato used the words felix and infelix of trees that bear or do not bear fruit respectively. On this Muller remarks that what is meant is that Cato used the words in an agricultural not a religious sense, as Livy V 24 § 2 and Vergil often. So apparently does Pliny nat hist XXIV § 68. Macrobius sat III 20 §§ 2—3 seems rather to be concerned with the religious sense 'impure', 'unlucky', and to connect impurity with the bearing of black (or dark) fruit. Pliny XVI § 108 says infelices autem existimantur damnataeque religione quae neque seruntur umquam neque

PENDITO: quae verba, Quirites, iam pridem in hac re publica non solum tenebris vetustatis, verum etiam luce libertatis oppressa sunt.

V. 14. An vero, si actio ista popularis esset et si ullam partem aequitatis haberet aut iuris, C Gracchus eam reliquisset? scilicet tibi graviolem dolorem patruui mors attulit quam C Graccho fratris, et tibi acerbior eius patruui mors est, quem numquam vidisti, quam illi eius fratris, quicum concordissime vixerat, et similis viri tu ulcisceris patruui mortem atque ille persequeretur fratris sui, si ista ratione agere voluisset, et par desiderium sui reliquit apud populum Romanum Labienus iste, patruos vester, quisquis fuit, ac Ti Gracchus reliquerat? an pietas tua maior quam C Gracchi? an animus? an consilium? an opes? an auctoritas? an eloquentia? quae si in illo minima fuissent, tamen prae tuis facultatibus maxima putarentur. 15. cum vero fructum ferunt, where he seems to combine the two meanings.

suspendito] so Tac Germ 12 proditores et transfugas arboribus suspendunt. Klotz.

luce libertatis] the expression is used elsewhere. See 11 in Verrem v § 160.

§ 14. actio] 'procedure', viz the antiquated one of the duumviri. See § 17.

reliquisset] have left unnoticed, 'neglected'. Compare de fin 1 § 18 and Madvig's note.

persequeretur] compare de imp Cn Pomp § 11 ius legationis verbo violatum illi persecuti sunt: vos legatum omni supplicio interfectum relinquetis?

vester] from the use of this word here and in §§ 22, 23, Huschke p opes] that is, can you argue that Gracchus only dropped the matter because he did not feel sure of having sufficient support, while you have, and so need not draw back?

525 infers that Labienus had some brother or cousin supporting him in this accusation. The use of vester = tuus is not found till long after the time of Cicero.

fuissent...putarentur] compare philippic VIII § 14 ergo is tibi civis, si temporibus illis fuisses, non probaretur, Livy IX 19 § 5 Persas Indos aliasque si adiunxisset gentes, impedimentum maius quam auxilium traheret. See Madvig's grammar § 347 b obs 2.

facultatibus] 'resources', means, powers, abilities. Compare ad Att III 10 § 2 tantis facultatibus ingeni.

his rebus omnibus C Gracchus omnis vicerit, quantum intervallum tandem inter te atque illum interiectum putas? sed moreretur prius acerbissima morte miliens C Gracchus quam in eius contione carnufex consisteret: quem non modo foro, sed etiam caelo hoc ac spiritu censoriae leges atque urbis domicilio carere voluerunt. hic se popularem dicere audet, me alienum a commodis vestris, cum iste omnis et suppliciorum et verborum consili, gratiae, tantis praesidiis bonorum omnium.

[§ 15. moreretur... consisteret] this use of the imperfect is common. Compare Tusc disp 1 § 90, pro Cluent § 80, philippic VIII § 14 num igitur cum, si tu esses, temerarium civem aut crudelem putares? See Madvig § 347 b obs 2.

[prius...quam] see Madvig on de fin IV § 20, from which it will be seen that, whatever mood and tense had preceded, we should have had consisteret here;—the mood, because of the notion of resistance or avoidance here implied in prius quam;—the tense, because it expresses what would have been Gracchus' feelings when alive had such a proposal been made to him.

[eius] the possessive genitive, for the contio is regarded as the creature of the magistrate who called it together. So 'a meeting of his' = a meeting he had called together. Compare de leg agr III § 1 in meam contionem predeant. The ius contionem habendi was a common but not absolute right of all magistrates, Lange I 687, II 663.

[censoriae leges] we find the expression lex censoria applied to the rules regulations and terms of the contracts made on behalf of the state by the censors as superintendents of public works and revenues. Mommsen (Röm Staatsr I p 313 note 5) points out that it would be their duty to assign dwellings to servi publici. The exclusion of the carnufex came no doubt from some 'regulation' of the censors.

[urbis...carere] we have seen above (§ 10) that executions used to take place in the Forum. This seems however to have gradually become less usual. The work was more and more done outside the walls: outside the Esquiline gate was a common place. See Tac ann II 32 and Orelli's note. [It was in keeping with this tendency that the censors made carnufices live outside the city.] But the old practice was not wholly discontinued. In this very year the leading associates of Catiline were strangled in the Tullianum. See Sallust Cat 55. The execution mentioned by Tac ann V 9 seems to have been somewhere near the arx.

[commodis vestris] the regular expression in Cicero for 'your interests', as de leg agr II § 15 hoc animo legem sumpsi in manus, ut acerbitates non ex memoria vestra ac patrum vestrorum, sed ex annalium monumentis atque ex regum commentariis conquisierit, ego omnibus meis opibus, omnibus consiliis, omnibus dictis atque factis repugnarim et restiterim crudelitati? nisi forte hanc condicionem vobis esse voltis, quam servi, si libertatis spem propositam non haberent, ferre nullo modo possent. 16. misera est ignominia iudiciorum publicorum, misera multatio bonorum, miserum exsilium: sed tamen in eam cuperem esse aptam vestris commodis etc.

annalium] which of the works passing under this name are here meant I cannot venture to say. But I rather think he means the old chronicles of the early writers and the records of the pontiffs and censors etc in a general sort of way, rather than any one set of records in particular. See pro Mur § 16.

regum commentariis] the ancient kings were supposed to have kept books of notes or minutes of their transactions. If any books existed in Cicero's time bearing this title, they were surely forgeries. Such references to them as we find in Livy I 31 § 8, 60 § 4 have of course no authority whatever. But we see that there as here they are spoken of as being consulted for precedents. See Mommsen, Röm Staatsrecht I p 5 note.

condicionem] here and in §§ 16, 30 we may see how the meaning develops itself: 'terms' = what you have to expect = 'prospect'. See on § 6, and compare II in Verrem V § 157, pro Cluent §§ 129, 150.

§ 16. ignominia] here used generally of the 'disgrace' following on criminal trials, as often. For the technical sense see appendix H.

iudiciorum publicorum] that is, trials held under the quaestiones perpetuae. This trial of Rabirius on appeal to the people is a iudicium populi, a very different thing.

exsilium] 'banishment' in the strict sense was not a penalty. Thus in pro Caecina § 100 he says exsilium enim non supplicium est sed perfugium portusque supplicii; nam qui volunt poenam aliquam subterfugere aut calamitatem, eo solum vertunt, hoc est sedem ac locum mutant. itaque nulla in lege nostra reperitur, ut apud ceteras civitates, maleficio ullum exsilio esse multatum. See the passage, and Jordan's note. Cicero must therefore here mean 'exile' either (a) voluntary, in order to escape punishment, or (b) after condemnation, when that was followed up by a bill brought before the people ut aqua et igni damnato interdiceretur. See appendix C, Introductio C (i).

omni calamitate retinetur aliquod vestigium libertatis. mors denique si proponitur, in libertate moriamur, carnufex vero et obductio capitis et nomen ipsum crucis absit non modo a corpore civium Romanorum, sed etiam a cogitatione, oculis, auribus. harum enim omnium rerum non solum eventus atque perpressio, sed etiam condicio, exspectatio, mentio ipsa denique indigna cive Romano atque homine libero est. an vero servos nostros horum suppliciorum omnium metu dominorum benignitas vindicta una liberat: nos a verberibus, ab unco, a crucis denique terrore neque res gestae neque acta aetas neque vestri honores vindicabunt? 17. quam ob rem fateor atque etiam, T Labiene, profiteor retinetur etc] compare pro Sulla § 91.

aliquod] 'some' trace: that is, a marked trace, a real one, such as one can readily detect. Compare § 19 aliquid, § 26 aliquam deprecationem, pro Mur § 60 pro aliquo praecudio = 'as a real previous verdict', § 64 aliquo rei publicae vinculo, pro Caecina § 5 pars aliqua iuris, and a host of other places.

si proponitur ... moriamur] see Madvig § 348 obs 4, and compare de off III § 87 si gloriae causa imperium expectandum est, scelus absit.

eventus] the actual occurrence of these punishments.

exspectatio] that is on the part of any citizen whose eyes behold the horrid sight and suggest to him the reflexion that it may be his own case tomorrow. So Turnebus explains it; and if he be (as I think) right, we shall take condicio as parallel to cogitatione above, and mentio to auribus.

cive Romano atque homine libero] the second expression goes further than the first: the crux is unworthy of a free man anywhere.

vindicta] for manumissio per vindictam see Persius v 73—90, and in particular 75—6 quibus una Quiritem vertigo facit. Ramsay Rom ant p 100 will give a sufficient account of the proceeding.

verberibus etc] compare the ghastly lines of Lucretius III 1016—7 carcer et horribilis de saxo iactu deorsum, verbera carnifices robur pax lammina taedae.

unco] philippic I § 5, Mayor on Juvenal x 66.

acta aetas] 'our past life', 'our history'. Besides Rabirius was an old man.

§ 17. quam ob rem] after the digression in §§ 11—16 he returns to where he left off after § 10 and begins again with the same conjunction.

fateor ... profiteor] a common et prae me fero te ex illa crudeli, importuna, non tribunicia actione, sed regia meo consilio virtute auctoritate esse depulsum. qua tu in actione quamquam omnia exempla maiorum, omnis leges, omnem auctoritatem senatus, omnis religiones atque auspiorum opposition. Compare pro Caecina § 24 quid confitetur atque ita libenter confitetur ut non solum fateri sed etiam profiteri videatur?

regia] the name rex was regarded with a deep traditional hatred at Rome. Hence orators freely employed the artifice of imputing to their opponents conduct only fitted for a (tyrant) king. See de leg agr II § 15, pro Sulla §§ 21—7. So we might say 'worthy of the Star Chamber'. Cicero no doubt is having a fling at Labienus for having (like a king, eg Tullus) practically nominated the Duumvirs himself.

consilio] 'judgment', 'tact', 'policy'. Compare pro Sulla § 4 (of Hortensius) hoc honore auctoritate virtute consilio praeditum, div in Caecil § 73. On the (presumed) possession of this quality Cicero especially prided himself. See the cap he makes to fit himself in pro Mur § 24.

virtute] = the sum of a man's excellencies moral or intellectual or (as here, I think) both. No English word that I know of is coextensive with it. See its wide use in de imp Cn Pomp §§ 28—36.

auctoritate] personal weight, influence, authority.

esse depulsum] See Introd E (e) and (f)ii².

exempla maiorum] referring to the irregularity in the appointment of the duumviri, or perhaps to the employment of that procedure at all. See Introd B.

leges] probably he refers to the Porcian and Sempronian laws mentioned above. But as I have already remarked (§ 10) Cicero very well knew that Rabirius would not have been scourged and put to death.

auctoritatem senatus] I think this bears only the general meaning of the 'authority' of the senate, that is, the sanction they had given to the killing of Saturninus by declaring him a public enemy. See on auctoritas senatus § 2. So in Pisonem § 4 (referring to this very case) he says senatus auctoritatem. But he may be speaking of their opposition to Labienus' measures.

religiones etc] probably Labienus had disregarded some flaw in the auspices taken before the assembly of the centuries, or the notice of a magistrate (such as Q Metellus Celer the augur who was praetor this year) that he intended to watch the heavens for signs of the divine will (de caelo servare). See philippic II §§ 80—1 and Mayor's notes. Or it may refer to Labienus' carrying his rogatio in the tribes for a trial (Introd E e) in the teeth of all such obstacles, publica iura neglexisti, tamen a me haec in hoc tam exiguo meo tempore non audies. liberum tempus nobis dabitur ad istam disceptationem.

VI. 18. Nunc de Saturnini crimine ac de clarissimi patrum tui morte dicemus. arguis occisum esse a C Rabirio L Saturninum, at id C Rabirius multorum testimoniis, Q Hortensio copiosissime defendente, antea falsum esse docuit. ego autem, si mihi esset integrum, susciperem hoc crimen, agnoscerem, confiterer. utinam hanc mihi facultatem causa concederet, ut possem hoc praedicare, C Rabiri manu L Saturninum, hostem perhaps disregarding the lex Aelia et Fufia (see Halm on pro Sestio § 33), Huschke p 522.

publica] this word is somewhat unmeaning here, and is omitted by some MSS. Kayser therefore brackets it. If it have any sense, it must be 'concerning the state', 'constitutional'. Compare de orat 1 § 201 publica quoque iura, quae sunt propria civitatis atque imperi.

dabitur] this may be a threat, of course not meant to be carried out, of finding an excuse for bringing Labienus to trial some day. But see Introd E (f ii)².

ad istam disceptationem] 'for discussing those points'. Compare pro Mil § 23 et lator ipse legis, quum esset controversia nulla facti, iuris tamen disceptationem esse voluit, pro Cluent §§ 79, 81, 88, 90.

§ 18. crimine] though I think that the sense 'the charge relating to Saturninus' is possible, still it is a very awkward expression. Kayser brackets crimine. Huschke p 517 takes it as opposed to meum crimen of § 10. If it be kept, I can only compare such expressions as pro Sestio § 72 inimicitias sibi mecum ex rei publicae dissensione susceptas.

at id] so Turnebus for et id. Kayser accepts it, and I am unable to find a really parallel instance to support the et.

Q Hortensio] he had no doubt spoken for Rabirius before the duumviri, but this probably refers to a speech before the people. Cicero spoke last.

ego autem etc] for this line of speaking compare pro Mil §§ 72—83, philippic 11 §§ 25—36. See below § 31, de orat 11 § 106.

integrum] untouched, in which nothing has yet been done, where all is still open. Very common. See pro Mur §§ 8, 43. We have it again in next section.

agnoscerem] compare pro Mil § 38 cum totius Italiae concursus ... facti illius gloriam libens agnovisset.

confiterer] 'admit', 'plead guilty'. See on § 17 fateor, and particularly compare pro Mil §§ 81, 82

populi Romani, interfectum! nihil me clamor iste commovet, sed consolatur, cum indicat esse quosdam civis imperitos, sed non multos. numquam, mihi credite, populus Romanus hic qui silet consulem me fecisset, si vestro clamore perturbatum iri arbitraretur. quanto iam levior est adclamatio! quin continetis vocem, indicem stultitiae vestrae, testem paucitatis. 19. libenter, inquam, confiterer, si vere possem aut etiam si mihi esset integrum, C Rabiri manu L Saturninum esse occisum, et id facinus pulcherrimum esse arbitrarer, sed, quoniam id facere non possum, confitebor id, quod ad laudem minus valebit, ad crimen non minus: confiteor interficiendi Saturnini causa C Rabi-rium arma cepisse. quid est, Labiene? quam a me commovet] 'makes nervous'.

See div in Caecil § 41.

cum indicat] see div in Caecil § 54, Madvig § 358 obs 2. 'Betraying as it does'.

imperitos] foolish, that is, so ignorant of the constitutional bearings of the question as not to know that Saturninus was rightly slain with the sanction of the senate. Compare Laelius § 95 contio, quae ex imperitissimis constat. The word is a general one, changing its local meaning according to the special context, very like the Greek ἰδιώτης. See § 24.

hic qui silet] said with a wave of the hand towards some of the nearer bystanders—very likely posted there by Cicero himself.

fecisset si arbitraretur] see II in Verrem II § 3, Madvig § 347 b obs 2.

perturbatum] 'put out', 'disconcerted'.

iam] 'at once'.

quin continetis etc] the first two words were probably uttered in a very harsh bitter voice, according to Quintilian XI 3 § 169 who quotes the passage loosely from memory.

indicem] used more in the strict sense than indicat above, as the opposition to testis shews. 'Anyone can see how few you are, and you yourselves bear witness of it besides; but you go further and betray your own folly, which we might otherwise not have discovered'. See div in Caecil § 34 indicium.

§ 19. confiterer etc] this passage, if not wholly a fresh insertion, was surely much heightened in colour when the speech was edited for publication.

ad laudem...valebit] compare pro Mur §§ 59, 67.

graviorem confessionem aut quod in hunc maius crimen exspectas? nisi vero interesse aliquid putas inter eum, qui hominem occidit, et eum, qui cum telo occidendi hominis caussa fuit. si interfici Saturninum nefas fuit, arma sumpta esse contra Saturninum sine scelere non possunt: si arma iure sumpta concedis, interfectum iure concedas necesse est.

In vetustissimo exemplari deest una charta.

VII. 20. Fit senatus consultum, ut C Marius L

cum telo... fuit] a regular expression in this connexion. Compare pro Mur § 52, pro Mil § 11, Sallust Cat 27 § 2.

occidendi hominis caussa] that is, the intent, not the deed, constitutes the crime. See pro Mil §§ 7, 8, 11, 19, and compare Julius Paulus v 23 § 3 qui hominem occiderit aliquando absolvitur, et qui non occidit ut homicida damnatur; consilium enim uniuscuiusque, non factum, puniendum est. ideoque qui, cum vellet occidere, id casu aliquo perpetrare non potuit ut homicida puniatur: et is qui casu iactu teli hominem imprudenter occiderit absolvitur.

interfectum etc] the italics in the text denote the necessary supplement of Manutius, now regularly adopted. Here follows a considerable lacuna in the MSS. See Introd F. The words in vetustissimo etc are found in some MSS.

§ 20. fit scutum, ut etc] the ordinary form of this decree was (see appendix A) dent operam (or videant) consules ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat. I can find no statement in the surviving accounts of this affair of Saturninus that gives the very words used on the occasion. But I have a strong suspicion that Cicero is only using this other (itself, as will be seen below, probably in its own place formal) language in order to drag in the word maiestas. For if we remember that charges of perduellio had for some time been very rare, since that crime was being more and more absorbed by that of (laesa or imminuta) maiestas, there would really be some moral gain in shewing that Rabirius had acted on the side conservandae maiestatis. And at present I know of no other passage where this form of words is used in this connexion: nor does Lange cite any other. It is however just possible that the senate may have chosen the expression at the time with a view to the lawless acts of the author of the Appuleian law.

[Since writing the above I find that in the work de viris illustribus urbis Romae attributed (wrongly, see Teuffel Gesch der Röm Lit § 414) to Aurelius Victor, a writer of the fourth century AD, cap 73

Valerius consules adhiberent tribunos plebis et praetores quos eis videretur operamque darent, ut imperium populi Romani maiestasque conservaretur. adhibent omnis tribunos plebis praeter Saturninum, praetores omnis praeter Glauciam: qui rem publicam salvam esse vellent, arma capere et se sequi iubent. parent omnes. ex aedificiis armamentariisque publicis arma

§ 10, stand the following words; Marius senatus consulto armatus quo censeretur, darent operam consules ne quid res publica detrimenti caperet, Saturninum et Glauciam in Capitolium persecutus obse- dit. I do not wish to lay very great stress on the words, but such value as they have tells on the side of my conjecture hazarded above.]

adhiberent etc] Zumpt Criminalrecht I 2 pp 402—3 thinks that this clause concerning the calling in other magistrates was added in most if not all cases of this scutum being issued. I see no proof of this, and he gives none.

maiestas] this word, used also in §§ 2, 35, signifies in a general sense the 'sovereign majesty' or 'sovereignty' of the Roman people. Since the lex Appuleia of Saturninus any conduct calculated to injure this had been made criminal, and definitions of maiestas and of the kinds of acts that could be held to weaken it had naturally been sought for. Hence the numerous references thereto in the rhetorical works of Cicero. See de invent II §§ 52—5, de orat II § 164, partit orat §§ 104—5, and also Quintil VII 3 § 35. In philippic III § 13 au- temque populi Romani we have (as Rein remarks) a distinction not always observed. It is worthy of note that it was customary in treaties imposed by Rome on other peoples to add maiestatem populi Romani comiter conservanto; see pro Balbo §§ 35—7 and Reid's notes, comparing Livy XXXVIII 11 § 2. See also div in Caecil § 69. It is the highest term for greatness and imperial dignity (connected with maior, maior), well illustrated by the case of the soldiers who (Caesar bell Gall VII 17) amid fearful hardships would not utter a sound unworthy of the maiestas of the Roman people. See Introd C (p).

praeter Saturninum] he should have added Gracchus (Equitius). See below.

praeter Glauciam] C Servilius Glaucia the well-known demagogue was an ally of Saturninus.

qui...vellent] this seems to have been the regular set form of words used in such an appeal to the 'party of order', though the need for its use seldom arose. See § 34, post reditum in senatu §§ 24—5, and the note on qui in salute etc below.

exaedificiis etc] Mr Long (Decline of Roman Republic I 117) remarks populo Romano, C Mario consule distribuyente, dantur. hic iam, ut omittam cetera, de te ipso, Labiene, quaero: cum Saturninus Capitolium teneret armatus, esset una C Glaucia, C Saufeius, etiam ille ex compedibus atque ergastulo Gracchus: addam, quoniam ita vis, eodem Q Labienum, patruum tuum: in foro autem C Marius et L Valerius Flaccus consules, post cunctus senatus atque ille senatus, quem iam ne vos ipsi quidem [qui hos patres conscriptos, qui nunc sunt,] in invidiam vocatis, quo facilius de hoc senatu detrahere possitis: cum equester ordo—at quorum equitum [Romanorum], di

'it appears from what happened on this and other occasions of arming the people that they did not possess arms at home, and very probably were not allowed to keep them'. See Livy III 15 §§ 7, 8.

Saufeius] an obscure associate of Saturninus. Appian says that he was a quaestor.

ille...Gracchus] this was a fellow named L Equitius, said to have been a runaway slave, who came forward at that time of disturbance as a candidate for the tribuneship, giving out that he was a son of Tiberius Gracchus. The populace received him with marked favour and elected him tribune. The appearance and success of this worthless pretender was a notable indication of the utter disorganization of Roman society and the breakdown of the old constitution. He perished with the rest of the associates of Saturninus. For the facts concerning him see pro Sestio § 101, Appian bell civ I 32—3, Florus III 16 § 1, Valer Max IX 7 § 1, 15 § 1, III 2 § 18, 8 § 6, [Aurel Victor] de viris illustr 73 §§ 3, 4.

quoniam ita vis] he means that nobody would have known or remembered the fact of the man's presence had not Labienus brought it forward, as Turnebus well pointed out.

cunctus] hear Paulus the epitomizer of Festus (p 50); cuncti significat quidem omnes, sed coniuncti et congregati, at vero omnes etiam si diversis locis sint.

qui hos patres etc] in bracketing these and other words in this section I have simply adopted the somewhat violent expedients of Kayser (chiefly following Bake), in order to get some tolerable sense out of the passage. But I doubt whether a satisfactory restoration is possible. Klotz keeps the words in brackets and quem etiam vos ipsi (not iam ne vos ipsi quidem), inserts laudatis after vocatis, and reads quae referring to aetatis (not qui referring to ordo).

at quorum etc] so he breaks off in pro Sulla § 4 at quos viros! non solum summa virtute et fide, etc.

immortales!—[patrum nostrorum atque eius aetatis,] qui tum magnam partem rei publicae atque omnem dignitatem iudiciorum tenebat: cum omnes omnium ordinum homines, qui in salute rei publicae salutem suam repositam esse arbitrabantur, arma cepissent, quid tandem C Rabirio faciendum fuit? 21. de te ipso, inquam, Labiene, quaero: cum ad arma consules ex senatus consulto vocavissent, cum armatus M Aemilius, princeps senatus, in comitio constitisset, qui cum ingredi vix posset, non ad insequendum sibi tarditatem pedum, sed ad fugiendum impedimento fore putabat: cum denique Q Scaevola, confectus senectute, qui tum ... tenebat] they held the state contracts for the revenues etc (publica) and also, since the law of Gaius Gracchus, the exclusive right of sitting on juries in criminal trials (iudicia). Of this latter the legislation of Sulla deprived them. Or magnam partem reip may simply mean that they formed a very important political party.

qui in salute etc] compare his words (referring to the Catilinarian conspiracy) pro Sulla § 32 ecquem tu horum qui adsunt.....aut tam sceleratum statuis fuisse, ut haec omnia perire voluerit, aut tam miserum, ut et se perire cuperet et nihil haberet quod saluum esse vellet?

§ 21. M Aemilius] Scaurus, the well-known chief of the senatorial party for many years, of whom Cicero's works contain so many laudatory notices. His character is mercilessly analysed and exposed by Mommsen bk IV c 4 passim. One passage of his life is of interest here. Saturninus when quaestor had received the provincia Ostiensis (see pro Mur § 18), and had somehow displeased the senate or misconducted himself in that charge. The senate went so far as to remove him from his office and appoint Scaurus in his place. This is said to have driven Saturninus into the arms of the extreme democrats (factum esse popularem). See pro Sestio § 39, de harusp resp § 43. The reference to his conduct here is more fully worked up by Valerius Max III 2 § 18.

ingredi] 'put foot to ground', 'walk'. Compare Tusc disp I § 75 qui in compedibus corporis semper fuerunt, etiam cum soluti sunt, tardius ingrediuntur.

Q Scaevola] this must be Q Mucius Scaevola generally called the Augur to distinguish him from his relative the pontifex maximus. He was a very famous jurist, and so too was the pontiff. He lived till BC 88.

perditus morbo, mancus et membris omnibus captus ac debilis, hastili nixus, et animi vim et infirmitatem corporis ostenderet: cum L Metellus, Ser Galba, C Serranus, P Rutilius, C Fimbria, Q Catulus omnesque, qui tum erant, consulares pro salute communi arma cepissent: cum omnes praetores, cuncta nobilitas ac iuventus accurreret, Cn et L Domitii, L Crassus, Q Mucius, C Claudius, M Drusus: cum omnes Octavii, Metelli, Iulii, Cassii, Catones, Pompeii: cum L Philippus, L Scipio, cum M Lepidus, D Brutus, cum hic ipse P Servilius, quo tu imperatore, Labiene, meruisti: cum hic Q Catulus, admodum tum adulescens, cum hic C Curio, cum denique omnes clarissimi viri cum consulibus essent, quid tandem C Rabirium facere convenit? utrum inclusum atque abditum latere in occulto atque ignaviam suam tenebrarum ac parietum custodiis tegere an in Capitolium pergere atque ibi se cum tuo patruo et ceteris ad mortem propter vitae turpitudinem condebilis] I have explained the force of this word on pro Mur § 79.

He is one of the speakers in the dialogue Laelius. See Reid's introduction p 15.

L Metellus] brother of Q Caecilius Metellus Numidicus whom Saturninus had driven into exile. See Mommsen bk iv c 6.

P Rutilius] Rufus, the army reformer, a most worthy and incorruptible man. For his shameless condemnation on a charge of repetundae by the equestrian iudices (about 92 BC) see Mommsen bk iv c 6.

Q Catulus] the colleague of Marius and conqueror of the Cimbri in BC 101. See Mommsen bk iv c 5.

nobilitas ac iuventus] a hendiadys, I think. 'The nobles of military age'.

P Servilius] Vatia Isauricus. For his campaigns against the corsairs and mountain tribes of southern Asia Minor in BC 78—6 see Mommsen bk v c 2.

Q Catulus] this Lutatius Catulus was son of the above, and was himself a general of some distinction. He was consul in BC 78.

C Curio] Gaius Scribonius Curio, father of the man who afterwards did so much for the cause of Caesar, was consul BC 76. For his campaigns in Thrace and Macedonia BC 75—3 see Mommsen bk v c 2.

fugientibus congregare? an cum Mario, Scauro, Catulo, Metello, Scaevola, cum bonis denique omnibus coire non modo salutis, verum etiam periculi societatem?

VIII. 22. Tu denique, Labiene, quid faceres tali in re ac tempore? cum ignaviae ratio te in fugam atque in latebras impelleret, improbitas et furor L. Saturnini in Capitolium arcesseret, consules ad patriae salutem ac libertatem vocarent, quam tandem auctoritatem, quam vocem, cuius sectam sequi, cuius imperio parere potissimum velles? patruos, inquit, meus cum Saturnino fuit. quid, pater quicum? quid, propinqui vestri, equites Romani? quid, omnis praefectura, regio, vicinitas vestra? quid, ager Picenus universus utrum tribuniciium furorem an consularem auctoritatem secutus coire...societatem] compare de deorum natura II § 123 pina vero ...cum parva squilla quasi societatem coit comparandi cibi, and see Mayor on philippic II § 24 utinam, Pompei, cum Caesare societatem aut numquam coisses aut numquam diremisses.

§ 22. ignaviae ratio] see on § 2 ratio humanitatis.

ad salutem] 'to uphold' the welfare of your country. For ad see pro Mur §§ 53, 59.

pater] of this man nothing seems to be known.

praefectura] Festus p. 233 praefecturae eae appellabantur in Italia in quibus et ius dicebatur et nundinae agebantur et erat quaedam earum res publica neque tamen magistratus suos habebant; in quas legibus praefecti mittebantur quotannis qui ius dicerent. He goes on to distinguish two classes and name instances. Among the names is Reate, to which Turnebus—why, I know not,—thinks that the family of Labienus belonged. The legal status of the praefecturae varied greatly in the various cases. See Madvig, Verfassung und Verwaltung I pp 44, 49, II pp 4, 5.

ager Picenus] this district had been parcelled out to Roman settlers before the Hannibalic war by a law of Gaius Flaminius who made the road named after him. See Brutus § 57. It is to be noted that Valer Max IX 15 § 1 says that Equitius came from Firmum in Picenum.

furorem etc] common language in Cicero's mouth about this time and for most of the rest of his life. See de leg agr II § 14, pro Mur § 24, etc.

secutus est] we know that the consular elections for 99 B.C. gave occasion to the great riot and the death of Saturninus. Probably est? 23. equidem hoc adfirmo, quod tu nunc de tuo patruo praedicas, neminem umquam adhuc de se esse confessum: nemo est, inquam, inventus tam profligatus, tam perditus, tam ab omni non modo honestate sed etiam simulatione honestatis relictus qui se in Capitolio fuisse cum Saturnino fateretur. at fuit vester patruos. fuerit, et fuerit nulla desperatione rerum suarum, nullis domesticis vulneribus coactus: induxerit eum L Saturnini familiaritas, ut amicitiam patriae praeponeret: idcircone oportuit C Rabirium desciscere a re publica? non comparere in illa armata multitudine bonorum? consulum voci atque imperio non oboedire? 24. atqui videmus haec in rerum natura tria fuisse, ut aut cum Saturnino esset aut cum bonis aut lateret. latere mortis erat instar turpissimae, cum Saturnino esse furoris et sceleris, virtus et honestas et pudor cum consulibus esse cogebat. hoc tu igitur in crimen vocas, quod cum eis fuerit C Rabirius, quos amentissimus fuisset si oppugnasset, turpissimus si reliquisset? IX. at C Decianus, de quo tu saepe commemoras, quia, then a few voters from the towns of Picenum were present in Rome at the time, led there by various motives. They may have taken part with the 'party of order',—at least they were pretty certain to say so afterwards, as Cicero naively goes on to admit.

§ 23. honestate] 'right and virtuous feeling', that prompts to right action. It seems to be virtus viewed as a feeling that influences our public conduct. See § 24. de off 1 §§ 4, 17, and pro Archia § 14 nihil esse in vita magno opere expectandum nisi laudem atque honestatem with Reid's note relictus] with ab. So Tusc disp v § 14 se (the virtues) a beata vita esse relictas.

fuerit] Madvig § 352.

induxerit] for the word compare pro Mur § 62 inductus.

C Rabirium] emphatic, to shew that he was a man 'with a stake in the country', not a necessitous desperado.

§ 24. haec...fuisse...ut] see div in Caecil § 22 id est ut, Madvig § 374.

instar] de off § 69 patrocinio vero se usos aut clientes appellari mortis instar putant.

C Decianus] was a member of cum hominem omnibus insignem notis turpitudinis, P Furium, accusaret summo studio bonorum omnium, queri est ausus in contione de morte Saturnini, condemnatus est. etiam Sex Titius, quod habuit imaginem L. Saturnini domi suae, condemnatus est. statuerunt equites Romani illo iudicio improbum civem esse et non retinendum in civitate, qui hominis hostilem in modum seditiosi imagine aut mortem eius honestaret aut desideria imperitorum misericordia commoveret aut suam significaret imitandae improbitatis voluntatem. 25. itaque mihi mirum videtur unde hanc tu, Labiene, imaginem, quam tu habes, inveneris. nam Sex Titio damnato qui istam habere auderet inventus est nemo. quod tu si audisses aut si per aetatem scire potuisses, numquam profecto istam imaginem, quae domi posita the gens Appuleia. Little is known of him beyond the present story, which is very likely a gross misrepresentation. He seems to have been endeavouring to take vengeance for Saturninus. Valer Max VIII 1 damn § 2 dresses up the story further, saying that the very penalty meant for Furius was inflicted on him instead. He calls him spectatae integritatis vir, and perhaps this may explain why Labienus had often referred to him as an authority: Turnebus also suggests this. The Schol Bob (p 230 Orelli) on the pro Flacco says that after this condemnation he went to the East and joined king Mithridates. For the general political bearing of these cases see Mommsen bk IV c 6.

P Furium] Philum (?), of whom little seems to be known. Valerius

Maximus seems to imply that he got off. But, if he be the man spoken of by Dion Cassius frag 95, it would appear that he was lynched by the people when impeached before them for his acts as tribune; and also that he had basely deserted Saturninus and Glaucia and joined in the attack on them.

Sex Titius] a man of indifferent character who as tribune in BC 99 carried an agrarian law, which was annulled on a religious pretext. See de orat II § 48, 265, Brutus § 225, Valer Max VIII 1 damn § 3, Mommsen bk IV c 6.

§ 25. imagine] Quintil VI 1 § 49 praises the skill shewn by Cicero in this endeavour to neutralize the effect of the exhibition of the cast of Saturninus' face on the populace.

pestem atque exsilium Sex Titio attulit, in rostra atque in contionem attulisses nec tuas umquam ratis ad eos scopulos appulisses, ad quos Sex Titi adflictam navem et in quibus C Deciani naufragium fortunarum videres. sed in his rebus omnibus imprudentia laberis. caussam enim suscepisti antiquiorem memoria tua. quae caussa ante mortua est quam tu natus esses, qua in caussa tute profecto fuisses, si per aetatem esse potuisses, eam cum in iudicium vocas, 26. [an] non intelligis primum quos homines et quales viros mortuos summi sceleris arguas? deinde quot ex eis, qui vivunt, eodem crimine in summum periculum capitis arcessas? nam si C Rabirius fraudem capitalem admisit, quod arma contra L Saturninum tulit, huic quidem adferet aliquam deprecationem periculi aetas illa, qua tum fuit, Q vero Catulum, patrem attulit] emended by Baiter. attulisset might mean 'it having (as you must have known) brought'. But so forced an interpretation is not needed with attulisses so near to account for a corruption.

rostra...contionem] this must refer to some occasion on which Labienus harangued a meeting in the Forum. See Introd E (fii)⁴.

ratis] an emendation of MSS rationes adopted by Kayser.

scopulos] Cicero, who is fond of such metaphors, remarks in de orat II § 163 deinde videndum ne longe simile sit ductum: Syrtim patrimonii, scopulum libentius dixerim; Charybdim bonorum, et oraginem potius. Compare pro Sulla § 41.

imprudentia laberis] a favourite expression of Cicero's. See pro Mur § 78. labi to go wrong, σφάλλίσθαι. Compare de orat I § 202 languentem labentemque populum, Caesar bell Gall v 3, Herod VII 50.

caussam] 'cause', 'side'. So pro Sulla § 9 una bonorum est omnium caussa, de imp Cn Pomp § 53 ipsius populi Romani salus et vera caussa.

esses] see Madvig § 360. Halm, Baiter, Kayser would read es.

eam cum] so Rau, followed by Kayser, for eam caussam. cum had probably been mistaken for an abbreviation of caussam, and hence an added below, thus really spoiling the argument.

§ 26. fraudem] compare de orat II § 199 id C Norbano in fraude capitali esse ponendum, Liv XXIII 14 § 3. Surely fraus = 'guilt', not as Ulpian in digest XXI tit i 23 § 2 (cited by Klotz) explains it = poena. See Digest I. 16 § 131.

huius, in quo summa sapientia, eximia virtus, singularis humanitas fuit, M Scaurum, illa gravitate, illo consilio, illa prudentia, duos Mucios, L Crassum, M Antonium, qui tum extra urbem cum praesidio fuit, quorum in hac civitate longe maxima consilia atque ingenia fuerunt, ceteros pari dignitate praeditos custodes gubernatores-que rei publicae quem ad modum mortuos defendemus? 27. quid de illis honestissimis viris atque optimis civibus, equitibus Romanis, dicemus, qui tum una cum senatu salutem rei publicae defenderunt? quid de tribunis aerariis ceterorumque ordinum omnium hominibus, qui tum arma pro communi libertate ceperunt? X. sed quid ego de eis omnibus, qui consulari imperio

L Crassum, M Antonium] two of the greatest orators of Rome, of whom Cicero is constantly speaking. He could remember them in his youth; and his treatise de oratore is practically an embodiment of their views on the subject of oratory intended to preserve the fame of these great men, who had left so little behind in the way of literary remains.

qui...fuit] 'M Antonius, consul designatus, was posted outside the city with an armed force, probably to prevent the country folks from coming to help their friend the tribune'. G Long.

ingenia] a word very frequently employed by Cicero in speaking of orators.

§ 27. equitibus] for the way in which the violent measures of Saturninus led to a temporary combination of the senate and equites, see Mommsen bk IV c 6.

tribunis aerariis] see appendix G.

ceterorum ordinum] this probably refers to all those lesser citizens who having some little capital of their own (and so something to lose) had embarked it in various companies of a less ambitious character than those of the publicani. See II in Verrem II § 17 si cuiquam ordini sive aratorum sive pecuariorum sive mercatorum probatus sit. In an inscription of the time of Elagabalus (Wilmanns 1737) I find ex decreto ordinis corporis piscatorum et urinatorum totius alve(i) Tiber(ini) quibus ex s(enatus) c(onsulto) coire licet. So we have the word used of priestly bodies, ordo sacerdotum, haruspicum, Augustalium, etc. So too ordo scribarum (pro Mur § 42, II in Verr III § 183), fabrorum tignariorum (Wilmanns 1742) and others. Valer Max v 2 § 1 has even matronarum ordinem. Compare generally de imp Cn Pomp §§ 17, 18, in Catil IV §§ 14—16.

paruerunt, loquor? de ipsorum consulum fama quid futurum est? L. Flaccum, hominem cum semper in re publica tum in magistratibus gerendis, in sacerdotio caerimoniisque quibus praeerat diligentissimum, nefarii sceleris ac parricidi mortuom condemnabimus? adiungemus ad hanc labem ignominiamque mortis etiam C Mari nomen? C Marium, quem vere patrem patriae, parentem, inquam, vestrae libertatis atque huiusce rei publicae possumus dicere, sceleris ac parricidii nefarii mortuom condemnabimus? 28. etenim si C Rabirio, quod iit ad arma, crucem T Labienus in campo Martio defigendam putavit, quod tandem excogitabitur in eum supplicium, qui vocavit? ac si fides Saturnino data est, quod abs te saepissime dicitur, non eam C Rabirius, de...fama quid futurum est] compare Terence adelphoe 996 sed de fratre quid fiet?

L. Flaccum] the colleague of Marius in the consulship B C 100. See § 20.

in re publica] 'in his political career'.

sacerdotio] from de divinat I § 104 we learn that he had been flamen Martialis.

parricidi] for the meaning of this word see Clark, Early Roman Law § 7. I do not however believe that parricida is a shortened form of parenticida. For the figurative use see in Vatin § 35, Sall Cat 51 § 25.

labem ignominiamque] he is fond of this connexion. See I in Verrem § 40, de imp Cn Pomp § 33.

§ 28. iit ad arma] so ad fam VIII 15 § 2 civitas ad arma iit, philippic XIV §§ 1—3 ad saga. Whether the form iit should be read in Cicero is doubtful.

fides...data est] that this assurance was really given at the time there seems to be no doubt. Thus Plutarch Mar 30 παρίδωκαν σφᾶς αὐτοὺς διὰ τῆς λεγομένης δημοσίας πίστεως, [Aurel Vict] de viris ill 73 § 10 (Marius) in deditionem accepit: nec deditis fides servata. This seems implied also in the words of Florus III 16 § 6 (Saturninus) senatuique per legatos paenitentiae fidem faceret, nor does Appian bell civ I 32 make against it, though he only says ἐλπίσαντες αὐτοῖς ἐπικουρήσειν Μάριον παρίδωκαν ἑαυτούς. Orosius V 17 § 9 simply says that they took refuge in the curia, cogente Mario. The same pledge was given to the informers in the matter of the Catilinarian conspiracy. See in Catil III § 8 fidem publicam iussu senatus dedi, and Sallust Cat 47 § 1, 48 § 4.

sed C Marius dedit, idemque violavit, si in fide non stetit. quae fides, Labiene, qui potuit sine senatus consulto dari? adeone hospes es huiusce urbis, adeone ignarus disciplinae consuetudinisque nostrae, ut haec nescias, ut peregrinari in aliena civitate, non in tua magistratum gerere videare? 29. quid iam ista C Mario, inquit, nocere possunt, quoniam sensu et vita caret? itane vero? tantis in laboribus C Marius periculisque vixisset, si nihil longius quam vitae termini postulabant, spe atque animo de se et gloria sua cogitasset? at credo, cum innumerabilis hostium copias in Italia fudisset atque obsidione rem publicam liberasset, omnia sua secum una moritura arbitrabatur. non est ita, Quirites: neque quisquam nostrum in rei sine senatus consulto] see last note. This is a very poor piece of argument, for there can be no doubt that (as Hotomann long ago remarked) no further authorization was needed, all such powers being included in the scitum ultimum, if that were valid.

hospes...peregrinari] this tone seems to have been often taken by Roman speakers. From pro Sulla §§ 22—5, Sallust Cat 31 § 7, we see that Cicero had been himself twitted with being a denizen rather than a citizen. With the present passage compare de orat 1 § 249 cur ergo non eidem in iure civili.....satis instructi esse possumus ad hoc dumtaxat, ne in nostra patria peregrini atque advenae esse videamur? Acad 1 § 9, ad Att 1v 13 § 2, vi 3 § 4.

§ 29. quid iam...etc] compare the words put into the mouth of Caesar (then pontifex maximus)

by Sallust Cat 51 § 20 de poena possumus equidem dicere, id quod res habet, in luctu atque miseriis mortem aerumnarum requiem non cruciatum esse, eam cuncta mortalium mala dissolvere, ultra neque curae neque gaudio locum esse. Such was the Epicurean view, for which see Lucretius III passim. See also pro Cluent §§ 10, 171.

tantis in laboribus etc] Cicero is fond of taking this line; it seems to have been one of his regular commonplaces. See pro Archia §§ 28—30, pro Sestio § 47, Tusc disp 1 §§ 32—5.

in Italia] referring to the defeat of the Cimbri near Vercellae in BC 101.

obsidione] the word is used because the inroad of the Cimbri had been really equivalent to a tumultus Gallicus, which was traditionally held to create a state of siege. See philippic VIII §§ 2—4.

publicae periculis cum laude ac virtute versatur quin spe posteritatis fructuque ducatur. itaque cum multis aliis de caussis virorum bonorum mentes divinae mihi atque aeternae videntur esse, tum maxime, quod optimi et sapientissimi cuiusque animus ita praesentit in posterum, ut nihil nisi sempiternum spectare videatur. 30. quapropter equidem et C Mari et ceterorum virorum sapientissimorum ac fortissimorum civium mentes, quae mihi videntur ex hominum vita ad deorum religionem et sanctimoniam demigrasse, testor me pro illorum fama gloria memoria non secus ac pro patriis fanis atque delubris propugnandum putare, ac si pro illorum laude mihi arma capienda essent, non minus strenue caperem, quam illi pro communi salute ceperunt. etenim, Quirites, exiguum nobis vitae curriculum natura circumscripsit, immensum gloriae. XI. qua re si eos, qui iam de vita decesserunt, ornabimus, iustiore nobis mortis condicionem relinquemus. sed si illos, Labiene, quos iam videre non possumus, neglegis, ne his quidem, quos vides, consuli putas oportere? 31. neminem esse laude] 'merit', as often.

spe posteritatis fructuque] 'hope of reward from posterity', a hendiadys. For the genitive ('hope in') compare de imp Cn Pomp § 44 unius hominis spe ac nomine hope in one man directly his name was mentioned.

virorum bonorum] this limited view of immortality is apparently derived from the Stoics. They held that only the souls of the good and wise will last till the end of the world in the general conflagration. Those of the bad and foolish only last a short time after death, and meantime are punished in the nether world. So Tacitus (Agr 46) thinks that piorum manes and magnae animae will survive in a sort of Elysium. See Zeller's 'Stoics Epicureans and Sceptics' pp 204—9 (Eng trans), J B Mayor, Sketch of ancient Philosophy p 155.

sempiternum] compare de re publ VI §§ 13, 25.

§ 30. religionem] sanctity, as in II in Verrem IV §§ 96, 109, 127, etc.

iustiore] more favourable, like (Ter Andr 36) iusta et clemens servitus.

condicionem] see on § 15.

dico ex his omnibus, qui illo die Romae fuerit, quem tu diem in iudicium vocas, pubesque tum fuerit, quin arma ceperit, quin consules secutus sit. omnes ei, quorum tu ex aetate coniecturam facere potes quid tum fecerint, abs te rei capitis C Rabiri nomine citantur. at occidit Saturninum Rabirius. utinam fecisset! non supplicium deprecarer, sed praemium postularem. etenim si Scaevae, servo Q Crotonis, qui occidit L Saturninum, libertas data est, quod equiti Romano praemium dari par fuisset? et, si C Marius, quod fistulas, quibus aqua suppeditabatur Iovis optimi maximi templis ac sedibus, praecidi imperarat, quod in clivo Capitolino improborum civium

§ 31. ex aetate etc] that is, all men of military age (at least) were in the following of the consuls (the rare exceptions may be neglected): hence all those whom you can guess to have been grown up at that time are in all probability every whit as guilty as Rabirius. A very Ciceronian way of putting it.

Scaevae] this recognition of another person as the actual slayer of Saturninus is from an English point of view the only plea of any force contained in the speech. But see Introd E (a).

libertas] probably he would receive a reward in money as well. His master would be compensated out of the state chest for the loss of his services. See Livy XXXII 26 fistulas] these pipes were made by bending round sheet lead and soldering together the edges. See Rich, and Frontinus de aquis I § 25 plumbea lammina...circumacta in rotundum.

§ 14, XXVI 27 § 9.

suppeditabatur] from the aqua Tepula no doubt. See Frontinus I § 8, Burn p 183. For the distribution of the water in Rome see Burn p lviii.

imperarat] so also say Plutarch Marius 30 εἰλε διψεῖ τοὺς γὰρ ὀχετοὺς ἀπέκοψεν, Orosius V 17 § 7, [Aurel Vict] de viris illustr 73 § 10. Florus III 16 § 6 is discreetly neutral, while Appian bell civ I 32 says καὶ βραδύνοντος (τοῦ Μαρίου) ἔτεροι τὸ ὕδωρ ἐπιπρίον ἐς τὸ ἱερὸν διάτμον.

Fragmenta a Niebuhr et cod. Vaticano palimpsesto primum edita.

XII. 32.  aret. itaque non senatus in ea caussa cognoscenda me agente diligentior aut inclementior fuit, quam vos universi, cum orbis terrae distribu-tionem atque illum ipsum agrum Campanum animis, manibus, vocibus repudiavistis.

33. idem ego, quod is, qui auctor huius iudici est, clamo praedico denuntio: nullus est reliquus rex, nulla gens, nulla natio quam pertimescatis: nullum adventicium, nullum extraneum malum est quod insinuare in hanc rem publicam possit: si immortalem hanc civitatem esse vultis, si aeternum hoc imperium, si gloriam sempi-ternam manere, nobis a nostris cupiditatibus, a turbulentis

§ 32. The following fragments were first discovered by Niebuhr in a palimpsest MS in the Vatican Library, probably in 1816, for his letters dated Rome Nov 20 and Christmas Eve of that year contain references to his discovery of lost fragments of Cicero's orations.

ea causa] what this matter was,
I am not sure. Probably the lex agraria of Rullus, for in his first speech (in the senate) against that proposal he says § 27 errastis, si senatum probare ea quae dicuntur a me putatis, populum autem esse in alia voluntate. See Introd F.

me agente] in a general sense of 'when I dealt with the business', almost 'on my motion', 'at my instance'. Not in the technical sense of agere (cum populo), for which see it in Verrem V § 173, Gellius XIII 16.

manibus] see on § 5. Plutarch Cic 12 tells us that the bill of Rullus was rejected.

§ 33. is qui auctor etc] See Introd E (f ii)².

clamo etc] it is not necessary to suppose that Labienus or Caesar had done anything of the kind.

praedico] this is the quantity, I think.

nullus est etc] compare de leg agr 1 § 26 multa sunt occulta rei publicae vulnera, multa nefariorum civium pernicioiosa consilia; nullum externum periculum est, non rex, non gens ulla, non natio pertimescenda est: inclusum malum, intestinum ac domesticum est. Also see generally Livy's preface, in particular §§ 4, 11, 12.

natio] 'tribe', expressing a less important aggregate than gens.
Very often thus.

cupiditatibus] Sallust Cat 11—14 illustrates this.

hominibus atque novarum rerum cupidis, ab intestinis malis, a domesticis consiliis est cavendum.

34. hisce autem malis magnum praesidium vobis maiores vestri reliquerunt, vocem illam consulis, 'qui rem publicam salvam esse volunt'. huic voci favete, Quirites, neque vestro iudicio abstuleritis mihi..... neque eripueritis rei publicae spem libertatis, spem salutis, spem dignitatis.

35. quid facerem, si T Labienus caedem civium fecisset, ut L Saturninus, si carcerem refregisset, si Capitolium cum armatis occupavisset? facerem idem, quod C Marius fecit, ad senatum referrem, vos ad rem publicam defendendam cohortarer, armatus ipse vobiscum armato obsisterem. nunc, quoniam armorum suspicio nulla est, tela non video, non vis, non caedes, non Capitoli atque arcis obsessio est, sed accusatio pernicioosa, iudicium acerbum, res tota a tribuno plebis suscepta contra rem publicam: non vos ad arma vocandos esse, verum ad suffragia cohortandos contra oppugnationem vestrae maiestatis putavi.

itaque nunc vos omnes oro atque obtestor hortorque; non ita mos est, consulem cum es.....

XIII. 36....timet: qui hasce ore adverso pro re publica cicatrices ac notas virtutis accepit, is ne quod [intestinis etc.] later in the year he urged this point more strongly in pro Mur §§ 78-85, and in the speeches against Catiline passim.

§ 35. carcerem] perhaps this refers to what happened when Gracchus (Equitius, see on § 20) was a candidate for the tribuneship and, having raised an uproar, was imprisoned by Marius. For then, says Valerius Max IX 7 § 1 populus claustris carceris convulsis raptum [Equitium] humeris suis per summam animorum alacritatem portavit.

Capitoli atque arcis] see Burn's Rome and the Campagna pp 184 foll.

maiestatis] see on § 20.

§ 36. cicatrices] we need not suppose that these were very serious. Cicero no doubt would make accipiat famae volnus perhorrescit: quem numquam incursiones hostium loco movere potuerunt, is nunc impetum civium, cui necessario cedendum est, perhorrescit.

37. neque a vobis iam bene vivendi, sed honeste moriendi facultatem petit: neque tam ut domo sua fruatur quam ne patrio sepulcro privetur laborat. nihil aliud iam vos orat atque obsecrat, nisi uti ne se legitimo funere et domestica morte privetis, ut eum, qui pro patria nullum unquam mortis periculum fugit, in patria mori patiamini.

38. dixi ad id tempus, quod mihi a tribuno plebis praestitutum est: a vobis peto quaesoque, ut hanc meam defensionem pro amici periculo fidelem, pro rei publicae salute consularem putetis.

ad aliquam lacunam huius orationis fragmentum pertinet, quod Servius ad Verg. Aen. I 13 servavit his verbis. Cicero pro Rabirio: 'et cum universo populo Romano tum vero equestri ordini longe carissimus'.

the most of a scratch. Klotz remarks that the two words of Hor-tensius' speech preserved by Charisius are 'cicatricum mearum'.

§ 37. patrio sepulcro] to be deprived of this was a serious matter in ancient times. See Servius ad Verg. Aen. v 64, vi 152, Hearn's in patria] this is worked up more elaborately in pro Mil §§ 93-4.

Aryan Household cc 11, 111. Cicero makes a similar appeal in pro Cluent § 201, pro Sulla § 89.

§ 38. pro amici periculo] pro Mur § 10.

APPENDIX

- CONTENTS. A. senatusconsultum ultimum.
 B. peculatus.
 C. aquae et ignis interdictio.
 D. lex Fabia.
 E. lex Porcia.
 F. lex Sempronia.
 G. tribuni aerarii.
 H. infamia, ignominia.
 I. vexillum russi coloris.
 K. multae inrogatio and its probable connexion with exile and infamia.

A. OF THE SCUTUM ULTIMUM.

It will be best to begin the consideration of this subject by transcribing in full some of the most important passages in ancient authors relating thereto.

(1) Sallust Cat 29 §§ 2, 3 itaque, quod plerumque in atroci negotio solet, senatus decrevit darent operam consules ne quid res publica detrimenti caperet. ea potestas per senatum more Romano magistratui maxima permittitur, exercitum parare, bellum gerere, coercere omnibus modis socios atque cives, domi militiaeque imperium atque iudicium summum habere; aliter sine populi iussu nullius earum rerum consuli ius est.

(2) Caesar bell civ 1 § 5 decurritur ad illud extremum atque ultimum senatusconsultum, quo nisi paene in ipso urbis incendio atque in desperatione omnium +illata+ sceleratorum audacia numquam ante descensum est; dent operam consules praetores tribuni plebis quique pro consulibus sint ad urbem ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat. haec senatusconsulto perscribuntur a d VII idus Ianuarias.

(3) Cicero ad fam XVI 11 § 2... ad Caesarem cum Curione profecti erant postea quam senatus consulibus praetoribus tri- bunis pl et nobis qui pro coss sumus negotium dederat ut curaremus ne quid res publica detrimenti caperet.

(4) philippic II § 51 in te, M Antoni, id decrevit senatus et quidem incolumis, nondum tot luminibus extinctis, quod in hostem togatum decerni est solitum more maiorum.

(5) philippic V § 31 tumultum decerni iustitium edici saga sumi dico oportere, dilectum haberi sublati vacationibus in urbe et in Italia praeter Galliam tota.

§ 34 consulibus totam rem publicam commendandam censeo, eisque permittendum ut rem publicam defendant provideantque ne quid res publica detrimenti accipiat.

(6) Livy III 4 § 9 tantumque terrorem incussere patribus ut, quae forma senatus consulti ultimae semper necessitatis habita est, Postumio alteri consulum negotium daretur videret ne quid res publica detrimenti caperet¹.

VI 19 § 3 decurritur ad leniorem² verbis sententiam, vim tamen eandem habentem, ut videant magistratus³ ne quid ex perniciosi consiliis M Manli res publica detrimenti capiat.

(7) Dion Cassius XXXVII 43 § 3 οἱ βουλευταὶ συνῆλθον αἰθημερὸν ἐς τὸ συνέδριον καὶ τὰ τε ἱμάτια ἡλλάξαντο καὶ τοῖς ὑπάτοις τὴν φυλακὴν τῆς πόλεως, ὥστε μηδὲν ἀπ' αὐτῆς ἀποτριβῆναι, ἐπέτρεψαν.

XI. 49 § 5 is in almost the same words, and in XLVI 31 § 2 we find ἐκείνο δὲ τὸ εἰθισμένον τῷ δόγματι προσγράψαντες, τὸ μηδὲν ἀπ' αὐτῆς ἀποτριβῆναι.

(8) Asconius in Milon p 35 (of the state of things after the death of Clodius) siebant interea alii ex aliis interreges, qui comitia consularia...habere non poterant. itaque primo factum erat senatusconsultum ut interrex et tribuni plebis et Cn Pompeius, qui pro consule ad urbem erat, viderent ne quid detrimenti res publica caperet, dilectus autem Pompeius tota Italia haberet.

¹ This was a case of external danger. The other consul was at the time besieged in his camp by the Aequi.

² Some had called for another Ahala to make short work with Manlius like another Maelius.

³ Tribunes with consular powers and tribunes of the plebs.

(9) Asconius in Cornel p 57 *promulgavitque legem*⁴, qua auctoritatem senatus minuebat, ne qui nisi per populum legibus solveretur. quod antiquo quoque iure erat cautum: itaque in omnibus senatusconsultis quibus aliquem legibus solvi placebat adici erat solitum ut de ea re ad populum ferretur; sed paulatim ferri erat desitum, resque iam in eam consuetudinem venerat ut postremo ne adiceretur quidem in senatusconsultis de rogatione ad populum ferenda. [The senatorial leaders opposed Cornelius, and a tribune interposed to stop him. Then, after much debate in the senate, Cornelius proposed] *ne quis in senatu legibus solveretur nisi CC adfuissent, neve quis, cum solutus esset, intercederet cum de ea re ad populum ferretur. haec sine tumultu res acta est: nemo enim negare poterat pro auctoritate senatus esse eam legem; sed tamen eam tulit invidis optimatibus*⁵.

I now proceed to examine under several heads this proceeding, which is often for briefness' sake called scutum ultimum.

(1) It seems to have had very much the effect of 'proclaiming a state of siege,' and was intended to strengthen the hands of the magistrates (consuls especially) in dealing with extraordinary emergencies by practically relieving⁶ them of responsibility for any illegal acts that they might be driven to commit in the rapid execution of their duty. It was in short a quasi-dictatorial power: and as, since the days of the second Punic war, the dictatorship had fallen into disfavour⁷ with the optimates, it was found convenient to develope by ⁴ This seems to have happened in 67 B.C. See also Dion Cass xxxvi 39 (22), Halm on Cic de imp Cn Pomp § 62.

⁵ The bearing of this extract will be seen on reading (6) below.

⁶ Zumpt maintains that it covered all acts of violence committed while the enemy still offered resistance. The crime charged to Rabirius was the murder post fulem datam (see § 28) more than anything else. Besides Rabirius was privatus.

⁷ See Mommsen hist bk II c 11 (vol II p 378). Zumpt objects to the comparison with the dictatorship. He shews that provocatio was not done away with, but that the state of siege only lasted till resistance ceased, when provocatio revived. This however was enough for the purpose, and a dictator might when the crisis was past be found a nuisance.

use this presumed right of the senate. They thus held in reserve a power which was practically equivalent to the dictatorship and at the same time under the efficient control of their whole body. Whether it was as wholesome a constitutional appliance as the old dictatorship may well be doubted.

(2) It could be employed to meet both external and internal dangers: but the course of events determined that it should be applied chiefly⁸ to cases of the latter kind. And this made it all the more convenient as a weapon of the senatorial party to be used in the suppression of troublesome demagogues and conspirators.

(3) The form of words employed in conferring this power on the magistrates may have varied slightly on different occasions, but I think we are justified in saying that the words ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat were always retained. The loose expressions⁹ of writers who are not quoting the form do not make exceptions; and I have endeavoured in my note on § 20 of the pro Rabirio to shew that that passage is not to be regarded as containing a direct quotation.

(4) If the senate thought fit, it might declare that a 'state of uproar' or 'war in Italy' existed (tumultum esse) and call upon all citizens to don the dress of war (sagae sumere); the consul declared public business suspended (ius-titium edicere), and the shops and offices were closed. But these are minor details.

(5) It was a more definite step when the senate proceeded formally to outlaw (hostem indicare) a certain person by name. This was done¹⁰ in the latter days of the Republic,

* The proceeding against Tib Gracchus is the beginning of its regular employment as a party weapon, and the refusal of Scaevola to act upon it then shews that he held it unconstitutional. Mommsen Staatsrecht I pp 664-5.

⁸ See for instance pro Deiotaro § 11,

Plut C Gracchus 14, Cic 15, Dion Cass XII 3, XIIII 23.

¹⁰ See in Catil IV § 10, Nepos Att 9 § 2, Suet Aug 17, Appian bell civ I 60, III 63, IV 38; in I 32 he says of Saturninus Glaucia etc καὶ αὐτοῖς τῇ βουλῇ ἀναιρεθῆναι ψήφισαμένης. Compare pro Rabirio §§ 18, 31.

and was held by the supporters of the senatorial policy to be a complete justification of all acts of violence perpetrated in the interests of order. To reward the slayer of such a public enemy was only a logical consequence of such a declaration.

(6) The most important point in this enquiry is the question of legality. Was this action of the senate constitutional, or was it not? A statement of the evidence under various heads will furnish the answer.

(a) There was no lex in grant or confirmation of the right in question.

(b) When we find any reference to its basis, it is in effect made to rest on use and custom only. The very anxiety of Cicero¹¹ to give it the appearance of immemorial antiquity arises from a consciousness of the lack of other authority.

(c) We know that Cicero was himself called to account for his action against the associates of Catiline, which was taken under the supposed protection¹² of the scutum ultimum. The prosecution of Rabirius was a challenge to the senate on the same ground.

It is thus pretty clear that the action of the senate was not¹³ in a strict sense legal. But that it had not become constitutional by use can hardly be maintained in the face of the words of Sallust and Caesar quoted above. At what date the procedure was first employed, we do not know, nor is it material to enquire: its real constitutional importance dates (as I have shewn above) from the third century BC. As in the practice of granting special dispensations¹⁴ from the operation of certain statutes, no doubt the senate assumed the right at a favourable moment, and then in the gradual ¹¹ In addition to the quotations above, see pro Rab §§ 2—5, pro Mil §§ 8, 70.

¹² Zumpt shews that the scutum could not relieve Cicero from responsibility, nor did Cicero ever plead this. And Clodius had to carry a law on purpose before he could attack Cicero with effect.

¹³ Zumpt seems to make it out to be legal, but not (I think) with success.

¹⁴ See Asconius (9) quoted above, and de legibus II § 14.

accumulation of precedent the original usurpation was lost sight of: it was no doubt also true to the traditions of its body in the way of avoiding any definition of its powers in this direction, well knowing that definition must bring limitation.

Had the tribunes checked this encroachment of the senate at an early stage they would have deprived the aristocratic party of a weapon which in the last century of the Republic was often employed against the democrats with terrible effect: as it was, they began their struggle too late, and, though Pompeius allowed them to make an example of Cicero, they saw the senate still in possession and use of this power after the death of Caesar.

I have only to add that the subject of this enquiry well illustrates one of the most fatal constitutional weaknesses of Republican Rome—the great practical control of the magistrates by the senate, a body which was after all powerless against any decided movement of the comitia of the tribes. Thus the degradation of the Legislature and Judicature was accompanied or even preceded by a wretched weakening of the Executive.

[See Lange's Römische Alterthümer 1 pp 728—9, 11 p 398, Madvig's Verfassung und Verwaltung des Römischen Staates 1 pp 301—3, Zumpt's Criminalrecht 1 2 pp 397—416.]

B. OF PECULATUS.

It will be best to begin by quoting a few of the most notable passages relating to the subject.

(1) Varro de ling Lat v § 95 (speaking of pecus) hinc peculatum publicum¹ primo, tum cum pecore diceretur multa² et id esset coactum in publicum, si erat aversum.

¹ The expression used here and in Livy XXIII 47 §§ 1—3 does not imply that peculatus ever meant 'theft' simply. There is no trace of such an original meaning. Rein p 673.

² For these fines see also Festus p 202. Cic de republ II §§ 16, 60. Pliny nat hist XVIII § 11.

(2) Festus p 213 peculatus est nunc quidem quaecunque publicum furtum, sed inductum est a pecore, ut pecunia quoque ipsa...etc. p 237 peculatus furtum publicum dici coeptus est a pecore, quia ab eo initium eius fraudis esse coepit, siquidem ante aes aut argentum signatum ob delicta poena gravissima erat duarum ovium et XXX bovum...etc.

(3) Cicero II in Verrem I § 11 (after speaking of his stealing state money and corn) crunt etiam fortasse, iudices, qui illum eius peculatum³ vel acerrime vindicandum putent, quod iste M Marcelli et P Africani monumenta, quae nomine illorum, re vera populi Romani et erant et habebantur, ex fanis religiosissimis et ex urbibus sociorum atque amicorum non dubitarit auferre.

(4) philippic XII § 12 sestertium septiens miliens advertisse Antonium pecuniae publicae indicavistis: num fraude poterit carere peculatus?

(5) pro Murena § 42 (of the charge allotted to Sulpicius⁴ as praetor) quid tua sors? tristis, atrox: quaestio peculatus, ex altera parte lacrimarum et squaloris, ex altera plena tabularum⁵ atque indicum. cogendi iudices inviti, retinendi contra voluntatem; scriba damnatus, ordo totus alienatus; Sullana gratificatio reprehensa, multi viri fortes et prope pars civitatis offensa; lites severe aestimatae; cui placet obliviscitur, cui dolet meminit.

(6) rhet ad Herenn I § 22 si quis peculatus accusetur quod vasa argentea publica de loco privato⁶ dicatur sustulisse, possit dicere, cum definitione sit usus quid sit furtum quid peculatus, secum furti agi non peculatus oportere.

(7) Gellius XI 18 § 18 sed enim M Cato in oratione quam de praeda militibus dividenda scripsit vementibus et illustribus verbis de impunitate peculatus atque licentia conqueritur. ea

³ In III § 168 Cicero declares that the lending of public money at interest is really peculatus. But his words do not shew that it was such by law. Under the Empire this offence was visited with various penalties, as is pointed out by Rein, who thinks that it was probably even dealt with by the lex Julia de peculatu.

⁴ In the year 65 B.C.

⁵ Put in as evidence. See I in Verrem § 33, pro Fonteio § 12. I have no doubt that this reading of Zumpt, now accepted by Halm, is right.

⁶ The emphasis is of course on privato.

verba, quoniam nobis impense placuerunt, adscribimus: 'fures' inquit 'privatorum furtorum in nervo atque in compedibus aetatem agunt, fures publici in auro atque in purpura.'

(8) Isidorus V 26 *peculatus iudicium in eos datur qui fraudem aerario faciunt pecuniamque publicam intervertunt. nam a pecunia peculatus est dictus. non autem sic indicatur furtum publicae rei sicut rei privatae: nam ille sic indicatur ut sacrilegus, quia fur est sacrorum*⁷.

From our evidence we may draw the following inferences.

(1) The term peculatus had its origin in denoting the theft of the beasts paid as fines to the state; but the employment of coined money and the development of a more complex civilization caused an extension of its meaning so as to include the theft of any kind of state property. As instances of peculatus in this wider sense we can point to cases⁸ of misappropriation of the booty or war-indemnity by victorious generals, embezzlement of public moneys by state officers to whom they had been entrusted for public purposes, of corn and money by provincial governors, of sacred objects statues etc by the same, fraud on the part of a state contractor⁹, etc.

(2) The offence was no doubt originally dealt with by a iudicium populi, the clumsy appliance of a community still in an early stage of growth. Men's conception of wrong done to the state being very hazy, they carry out the trial and punishment of individual offenders by separate legislative acts¹⁰ as occasions successively require. As a rough definition of this or that class of offence is worked out in practice, and the inconvenience of the old procedure is more strongly felt, it becomes possible to legislate on the subject in general terms, and to delegate the administration of the law so enacted to a ⁷ Quoted by Rein.

⁸ Collected by Rein, Crim p 679 foll.

⁹ See Livy xxv 3, 4. with Weissenborn's notes. The word peculatus is not used there, and was perhaps not yet employed to designate a particular crime in the days of the Hannibalic war.

¹⁰ See Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

permanent tribunal. Thus peculatus was in some way defined, and brought under the cognizance of a *quaestio perpetua*¹¹. The precise date of this step I am unable to determine. The passage in the rhetorical treatise addressed to Herennius seems certainly to refer to a time when the offence had been defined, and we may probably assume that the quaestio perpetua peculatus was already in full course of work. The treatise is assigned¹² to the year 84 BC or later. This inclines me to think that the court was already established before the dictatorship of Sulla, and not in the first instance by a lex Cornelia of that legislator. Indeed the existence of a lex Cornelia de peculatu is nowhere (so far as I can discover) directly attested, and Lange¹³, who hesitatingly assumes it, seems to make out but a weak case. The a priori likelihood of such an enactment proceeding from Sulla I do not deny. All I can admit for certain is that the standing court was in existence before BC 70, the year of the trial of Verres.

(3) As to the penalties inflicted on the guilty in earlier times we have no satisfactory information. Probably they varied according to the degrees of guilt in the accused and punishment called for by the accuser. Restitution would no doubt be enforced by a money fine; whether of greater amount than the peculations, is not certain. This would probably be accompanied¹⁴ by infamia, and (in very bad cases at least) by aquae et ignis interdictio and confiscation of the offender's property. Of the effects of conviction under the quaestio perpetua we have fuller knowledge. The condemned criminal lost his civic rights and became infamis. Besides this, exile—voluntary in theory—might¹⁵ be enforced by aquae

¹¹ Perhaps at first that of the existing quaestio repetundarum. See Introd C (p).

¹² Journal of Philology vol x pp 197 foll, Teuffel's Geschichte der Rom Literatur § 162.

¹³ Römische Alterthümer III p 166. He only refers to 1 in Verrem § 39, II in Verrem I § 11, III § 83, pro Cluent § 147. The ingenious argument of Zumpt II 2 pp 78–9 proves what I admit here, but not (I think) his own further conclusions.

¹⁴ See appendix K.

¹⁵ Not necessarily. I understand Zumpt II 2 p 89 to take substantially the same view.

et ignis interdictio. And in cases of peculatus as in those of repetundae the jury were called upon to hold a second enquiry¹⁶ in order to fix the amount of money penalty to be demanded by way of restitution. Whether an equal or multiple value was exacted, I cannot learn; but I am inclined to conjecture that it was double the amount of the peculation, as was the case in repetundae under a clause¹⁷ of the lex Acilia. This proceeding, called litis aestimatio, gave to the jury an opportunity of mitigating the punishment of a man whom they had in the first trial been unable or unwilling to acquit; and they not seldom availed themselves of it.

(4) It may be well to add that a lex Iulia of Julius Caesar or Augustus¹⁸—the former, I rather think—dealt fully with the offence and penalties. It included¹⁹ tampering with the imperial coinage and with instruments and documents of public importance. And it seems to have fixed the amount of restitution required at four times²⁰ the amount of the peculation (in quadruplum) as another *lex Iulia*²¹ did in the case of repetundae. The other penalties seem to have remained in effect much the same²².

(5) It is further to be noted that the lex Iulia here referred to also included by name sacrilege (de sacrilegis) and misappropriation of the public funds by persons entrusted therewith (de residuis). This is interesting as illustrating²³ the history of jurisprudence. The old peculatus was wide enough to include all these and indeed repetundae as well: so that it was not always clear under which of these heads the acts of a particular offender would be most appropriately ranged. But as the growth of criminal jurisprudence produced more precise ¹⁶ pro Mur § 42, pro Cluent §§ 115—6. Zumpt II 2 p 89 remarks that the litis aestimatio rendered confiscation unnecessary. See also I in Verrem § 38.

¹⁷ See lines 48—9 of this law in Wordsworth's Fragments and Specimens p 184. A comparison of div in Carol § 19 with I in Verrem § 46 may suggest a rate of 2½ times the amount.

¹⁸ Zumpt thinks it was the latter.

¹⁹ Digest XLVIII 13 §§ 1, 10.

²⁰ Julius Paullus V 27.

²¹ This was certainly a law of Julius Caesar.

²² Digest XLVIII 13 § 3.

²³ See Introd C (p) note 47, Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

classification of crimes the terminology was enlarged before a statutory separation took place.

(6) It now remains to apply the above to the explanation of pro Rabirio § 8. I cannot agree with Rein that the burning of the tabularium was the act characterized by the accuser as peculatus. It seems far more likely²⁴ that Curtius had been charged with (a) some more direct act of peculatus (b) an incendiary act for the purpose of suppressing the evidence²⁵ of the former. That this latter act might from one point of view have been regarded as peculatus, I do not deny: but I think the words of Cicero point more naturally to the conclusion I have ventured to draw. Whether the juxtaposition of the reference to a sacrilegious act (§ 7) is in any way significant, I cannot say. The information is too scanty to warrant even a conjecture.

[See generally Rein's Criminalrecht pp 672—90. I cannot however say that my debt to him is very great.]

C. OF THE AQUAE ET IGNIS INTERDICTIO.

The most interesting passages bearing upon this subject are the following

(1) Cicero, de domo sua § 78 qui erant rerum capitalium condemnati non prius hanc civitatem amittebant quam erant in eam recepti quo vertendi, hoc est mutandi, soli causa venerant; id autem ut esset faciundum, non ademptione civitatis sed tecti et aquae et ignis interdictione adigebantur.

(2) Cicero, pro Caecina § 100 nam quod ad exilium attinet, perspicue intelligi potest quale sit. exilium enim non supplicium est, sed perfugium portusque supplicii. nam qui volunt aliquam poenam subterfugere aut calamitatem, eo solum vertunt, hoc est, sedem ac locum mutant. itaque nulla in lege nostra reperietur, ²⁴ This I find to be also the view of Huschke p 515.

²⁵ See II in Verrem III § 83, pro Mil § 73.

ut apud ceteras civitates, maleficium ullum exsilio esse multatum. sed cum homines vincula necesse ignominiasque vitant, quae sunt legibus constitutae, confugiunt quasi ad aram in exsilium. qui si in civitate legis vim subire vellent, non prius civitatem quam vitam amitterent: quia nolunt, non admittitur iis civitas, sed ab iis relinquitur atque deponitur. nam cum ex nostro iure duarum civitatum nemo esse possit, tum amittitur haec civitas denique, cum is, qui profugit, receptus est in exsilium, hoc est, in aliam civitatem.

(3) Cicero, philippic VI § 10 [Plancum] sic contemnit tamquam si illi aqua et igni interdictum sit.

(4) rhet ad Herenn II § 45 ...aut proinde quasi non omnes, quibus aqua et igni interdictum est, exsules appellentur¹.

(5) Paulus in Digest XLVIII 1 § 2 capitalia sunt [iudicia] ex quibus poena mors aut exsilium est, hoc est aquae et ignis interdictio; per has enim poenas eximitur caput de civitate. nam cetera non exsilia sed relegationes proprie dicuntur: tunc² enim civitas retinetur.

The following account of this remarkable capital penalty is all or nearly all taken from Zumpt's Criminalprocess pp 451—467, though the matter is arranged in somewhat different order from that followed in the German work.

When the old penalty of death had (at least in the case of political offences) ceased to be imposed³ by sentence of the iudicia populi, the Romans did not introduce an equivalent punishment in its place, but determined in a legislative form⁴ the penalties for the several offences according to the merits of the cases as they arose. Hence the various degrees of this penalty which will shortly be distinguished.

First it should be noted that exile as such was not a

¹ The remark refers only to conversational usage, not to legal terminology.

² I am not sure whether this means that the civitas was formally taken away in exilium; anyhow it refers to the practice of a long time after Cicero.

³ It was not abolished, Madvig II p 292. But we hear of no executions since Manlius, Lange II § 19.

⁴ See appendix B § 2.

Roman punishment. The only exception to this was created by the lex Tullia de ambitu carried by Cicero⁵ in his consulship: this imposed ten years exile on candidates found guilty of corrupt practices. But, barring this, it was and long remained⁶ true that exile was a refuge from punishment and not a punishment itself. Yet we know that many persons were driven into exile, though not formally exiled. How was this? They were 'interdicted from fire water and shelter'; that is to say, outlawed or laid under ban.

This proceeding did not deprive a man of his civitas: he still remained civis, but he lost caput, having in effect lost the means of enjoying his privileges as a citizen. Not until he had actually been made a citizen⁷ of some other community (residence of course went for nothing) did he cease to be a citizen of Rome.

The origin of this penalty is to be sought in times when the punishment of death was still in common use. The accused fled beyond the Roman frontier, and in order to bar his return it became the practice⁸ to lay him formally under ban. When the punishment of death had ceased to be applied to political offenders, it was only natural that this penalty should take its place; and also that it should become the severest sentence of the permanent courts. For the presence or absence of the reus made no difference⁹ in the matter or tingtion is nugatory. See Lange I 207-8. Indeed it is hard to see how a man whose life and honour were no longer protected could have remained technically civis.

⁵ pro Mur §§ 47, 89, pro Planc § 83, Holden's introd to pro Planc § 16.

⁶ For the change see Digest XLVIII 19 6 § 2 et sunt poenae quae aut vitam adimant aut servitutem iniungant aut civitatem auferant aut exilium aut coercionem corporis continent. Such expressions as pro Cluent § 29 quem leges exilio natura morte multavit are loose and apply only to the effect in practice. See also appendix K.

⁷ See pro Caecina quoted above, and pro Balbo § 31. It should be said that Madvig Verf und Verw I p 55 is decidedly of opinion that the civitas was lost by outlawry, and that Cicero's dis-

⁸ Thus Caeso in Liv III 13 and the decemvirs III 58 § 9 were probably outlawed. See the cases of Postumius XXV 4 §§ 9-11, and Fulvius XXVI 3 § 12, where the decision is given by the Tribes, no trial taking place on the occasion. Zumpt Criminalrecht I 2 p 281. See Madvig II pp 288-90.

⁹ It was the same for Milo as for Verres, for Oppianicus and Scamander as for C Fabricius.

form of the sentence; and it is manifest that this was the only penalty capable of being applied in all cases.

The penalty was outlawry, the consequences varying with the severity of the sentence and the circumstances of the case. The ancient form employed was a declaration that the outlaw was prohibited from fire water and shelter. And in early times, when the bonds of state union were stronger, the denial of these common elementary wants would probably mean utter destruction to the victim of such a ban. But as the old sentiments relaxed it became necessary, if the outlaw was to be deprived of life or residence on Roman ground, to introduce special penalties for the secondary offenders, those who did not help in giving effect to the sentence of the state.

The three principal degrees of this punishment may be distinguished as follows.

i. The man was outlawed in the usual form, but no limits were named within which alone the outlawry should hold good. Thus it extended over the known world so far as Roman law or influence could reach. Sometimes a reward was offered to any that should betray the outlaw or put him to death. One very extreme sentence¹⁰ rendered all that gave succour to the outlaw liable to the same penalty themselves. This was a rare and exceptionally severe form of the penalty, and was applied only¹¹ in such cases as the proscriptions of Sulla and the Triumvirs and against the murderers of Caesar by the Peditian law.

ii. The man was outlawed in the usual form, but a limit of so many miles from Rome was named, outside which he was free from the ban. No reward was offered for his betrayal or murder; but minor penalties were provided for succouring him. This was the common form¹² of outlawry

¹⁰ Appian bell civ iv 11.

¹¹ Confiscation of goods generally if not always was attached to such outlawry as this. Lange II §40 declares that if the capital sentence was actually passed on a man by the centuries, confiscation always followed.

¹² Confiscation entire or partial sometimes was attached to this outlawry.

and was employed by Saturninus¹³ against Metellus and by Clodius against Cicero.

iii. The man was outlawed in the usual form, a limit was named, but the execution of the sentence does not seem to have been enforced by rewards or penalties as in the above. The outlaw might be put to death by anyone without fear of punishment. Thus a public penalty was left to be carried out by the capricious action of private hatred. This was a peculiar form of outlawry applied to secondary offenders, the succourers of those outlawed under (ii). But, while the harder forms of outlawry were only used in sentences pronounced by iudicia populi, it seems most probable that this form was also the 'capital penalty' of the permanent jury courts. Instances of this are to be found in the cases of (a) the risk run¹⁴ by the friends of Cicero in giving him succour (b) the cases of the elder Oppianicus and of Verres, as simple criminals.

The consequences of these different degrees of outlawry would be respectively (i) Death or the imminent risk of it, (ii) Exile, (iii) A certain amount of risk of death, to be avoided by exile, and generally a wretched despised outcast existence.

It is interesting in this connexion to consider the expressions employed by Cicero in the perorations of his speeches on behalf of men accused on capital charges before the jury courts. We find that in such cases as that of Sextus Roscius and that of Cluentius he speaks¹⁵ of the accused as standing in danger of his life. In such as those of Sulla Sestius Caelius and Plancius he lays¹⁶ the stress on the banishment which must follow condemnation. The difference is to be accounted for by observing that the former were merely cases of ordinary crime, while the latter were essentially political in their bearing. It is not however to be inferred that there was any difference in the penalty: the difference lay in the ¹³ Appian bell civ 1 31.

Cluent § 200.

¹⁴ This was practically not great.

¹⁵ pro Sulla § 89, pro Sest § 146, pro

¹⁶ pro Rosc Am §§ 146, 150, pro Cael § 77, pro Planc § 102.

classes of men against whom the different charges would commonly be brought. The latter kind would generally affect only men of wealth and position, who would be able to avail themselves of the protection afforded by exile against the hardships to which meaner criminals were forced to submit¹⁷.

Two changes in respect of the mildest form of this penalty, that inflicted by the permanent courts or in the provinces by the governors' courts, took place before the establishment of the empire. First, an edict of the tribunes of B C 72 ordained¹⁸ that no one who had been found guilty of a capital offence should remain in Rome. Second, it seems that Caesar when dictator added¹⁹ a money fine, which in the case of parricides extended to confiscation of a man's whole property.

This last was indeed a very important change. For so long as the outlaw could go abroad, taking his money with him, the intention of such sentences was ever being flagrantly evaded. Some pleasant provincial town, glad to engage in its interest one who most likely had still many powerful friends at Rome, afforded him a comfortable asylum where he would feel no deprivation save of the political intrigues of the capital. But when a poor man had been thus outlawed, his condition²⁰ was pitiable in the extreme. Driven from Rome, excluded from the municipal towns, exposed without protection to all manner of hardship and wrong, his life depending on the forbearance of his enemies, his scanty property at the mercy of his neighbours' cupidity or spite,—life must to such have been hardly worth the keeping. All this the wealthy man was able to avoid by residence abroad; all this he incurred if while outlawed he ventured to return.

¹⁷ Mr Reid writes to me that this suggestion as to the different effect of the punishment on men of different social standing seems hardly to meet the difficulty; an opinion in which I heartily concur, but I must leave this difficulty for the present.

¹⁸ See it in Verrem ii § 100. It seems from pro Cluent § 175 that the prohibition was maintained by the tribunes of the following year.

¹⁹ Suet Jul 42. It was an old principle that the capital penalty should not be joined with a money fine, Cic de domo § 45. Confiscation seems to have been different in kind, Huschke p 192.

²⁰ pro Cluent § 175.

D. OF THE LEX FABIA.

The *lex Fabia de plagiariis*¹ was most likely passed in the last century of the Republic, or a little earlier; and it continued to be much used and commented on in the imperial times. It dealt with² the offence of kidnapping concealing detaining buying selling etc (a) a Roman citizen freeborn or freed (b) a free Latin (c) the slave of another man—the same being done with knowledge and dolo malo. The trials under this law were so far as we can gather always iudicia publica. The penalty following on conviction was at one time a money fine, but it was afterwards made more severe and varied, according to the rank and quality of the offender, from a fine with banishment for life to crucifixion or slavery in the mines. The money fine was naturally accompanied by infamia.

How the offence had been dealt with before the lex Fabia is not certain: possibly (as Rein suggests) variously according to circumstances, either by a iudicium populi or by the interdiction de homine libero exhibendo or by actio furti or actio servi corrupti.

The mere fact of there being need of such a law speaks volumes as to the horrible condition of Italy, both social and economic, in the age after the Punic wars.

[For more detailed account of this law see Rein's Criminalrecht pp 386—9, Lange's Römische Alterthümer II pp 617—8, III p 5, to the former of which I am greatly indebted.]

¹ This title may perhaps have been in current use from the first. Cicero uses the word plagiarius in ad Quint frat I 2 § 6. For the metaphorical use see Martial I 52. In a wall writing at Pompeii occurs the expression Venus plagiaria est.

² See Julius Paullus sent v 6 § 14, Mos et Rom legum collat 14, digest XLVIII 15, instit IV 18 § 10, codex IX 20. Zumpt points out that pro Cluent § 21 gives a case. See also Ramsay on § 162.

E. OF THE LEX PORCIA (LEGES PORCIAE).

The most important passages relating to this subject are these.

(1) Livy x 9 §§ 3—6 *eadem anno M Valerius consul de provocatione legem tulit diligentius sanctam*¹. *tertio ea tum post reges exactos lata est, semper a familia eadem. causam renovandae saepius haud aliam fuisse reor quam quod plus paucorum opes quam libertas plebis poterat. Porcia tamen lex sola pro tergo civium lata videtur*², *quod gravi poena, si quis*³ verberasset necassetve civem Romanum, sanxit; Valeria lex, cum cum qui provocasset virgis caedi securique necari vetuisset, si quis adversus ea fecisset, nihil ultra quam 'improbe factum' adiecit. id, qui tum pudor hominum erat, visum credo vinculum satis validum legis; nunc vix servus ero ita minetur quisquam.

(2) Cicero de re publ II § 54 (after speaking⁴ of Valerian laws) *neque vero leges Porciae, quae tres sunt trium Porciorum, ut scitis, quicquam praeter sanctionem*⁵ attulerunt novi.

It is first to be remarked that Livy speaks of but one lex Porcia, as indeed do all other writers in referring to this subject, Cicero included, with exception of the one passage quoted above. But Weissenborn well points out that Livy after mention of three Valerian laws on provocatio goes on to speak of Valeria lex apparently referring to all three none the less. And from this he fairly argues that when he says

¹ He is probably thinking of the technical sense of sanctio (penal clause in a law), for which see Justinian inst II 1 § 10. Weissenborn. But the application here is loose. In fact the real means of enforcement would be found in the capricious penalties inflicted by iudicia populi when offenders were unpeached. They could if they chose bring the words improbe factum home to a transgressor with ample force.

² The view of Livy himself, or of the authority whom he is here following. W.

³ Any magistrate, that is. W.

⁴ The dialogue is supposed to be held in the time of the younger Scipio Africanus.

⁵ See gravi poena... sanxit above.

Porcia lex he is in like manner including the three leges of members of the gens Porcia under a singular appellation. In the next place we may observe that Livy lays stress on the lack of penal sanctio in the Valerian legislation, and seems to mean that this defect was remedied by the Porcian; wherein he and Cicero, whose words are more definite, perfectly agree. Whether they are right in affirming so direct a connexion between the Porcian laws⁶ and those concerned with the right of appeal is not certain. It should also be noted that the protection of the backs of citizens was according to Livy the object of the Porcian legislation and of that alone.

Accepting the statement that there were three Porcian laws and that they were carried by three different members of that house, we are unfortunately unable to determine with certainty when and by what persons they were severally carried. A fair degree of probability is alone attainable. Lange⁷ observes that we only know of three magistrates of the gens Porcia in the period⁸ to which these laws must belong; and to these he proceeds to assign the three laws, the enactments of which have to be gathered from a very meagre body of evidence.

i. The passages most important for the consideration of the first Porcian law are the following:

(1) Festus p 234 'pro scapulis' cum dicit Cato⁹, significat pro iniuria verberum. nam complures leges erant in cives rogatae quibus sanciebatur poena verberum. his significat prohibuisse multos suos cives in ea oratione quae est contra M Caelium [The fragment following is too obscure to be of any use].

⁶ Laws 2 and 3 would either extend the right of appeal or grant the exemption in question whether the citizen appealed or not. In practice these two alternatives come to much the same.

⁷ Römische Alterthümer II p 233.

⁸ Between 300 and 129 B.C., the passing of the third lex Valeria and the death of the younger Africanus.

⁹ The interest taken by Cato in the subject may also be gathered from the fragment quoted by Gellius x 3 § 17.

(2) Livy III 20 § 7 (the tribunes argued that if the army when in the field were formed into an assembly) *omnes id iussuros quod consules vellent; neque enim provocationem esse longius ab urbe mille passum*¹⁰, *et tribunos, si eo veniant, in alia turba Quiritium subiectos*¹¹ fore consulari imperio.

(3) Sallust Cat 51 §§ 21—2 *sed per deos immortalis quamobrem in sententiam non addidisti uti prius verberibus in eos animadvorteretur? an quia lex Porcia vetat? at aliae leges item condemnatis civibus non animam eripi sed exilium*¹² permitti iubent.

§§ 39, 40 sed eodem illo tempore Graeciae morem imitati verberibus animadvortebant in civis, de condemnatis summum supplicium sumebant. postquam res publica adolevit et multitudine civium factiones valere, circumveniri innocentes alia huiusmodi fieri coepere, tum lex Porcia aliasque leges paratae sunt, quibus legibus exilium damnatis permissum est.

The conclusions¹³ arrived at in respect to this law may also be ranged under heads.

(1) The first legislation in this direction must surely have proceeded from a 'friend of the people', not from a leader of the nobles. Now we know that M Porcius Cato had as a reformer great need of popular support: and we have evidence that he took an interest in this particular subject. It is therefore extremely probable that this law was carried by him, and further that it dates from his praetorship in 198 B.C. Instead of appealing to meaner passions by proposing a land or corn law, it is quite in character with what we know of the great moral reformer that he should touch the nobler feeling of Roman pride. The nobles, at whose head was the elder Scipio, could of course offer no opposition

¹⁰ For the measurement see Digest L. appendix C.
16 § 124.

¹¹ Compare XXIV 9 § 2.

¹² See on pro Rab § 16, and ap-

¹³ Taken chiefly from Lange R A II pp 192, § 10. See also I p § 80.

to a measure which freed from stripes the backs of citizens who had fought and suffered in the Hannibalic war. Besides, the punishment of death had practically ceased to be inflicted by sentence of the people, and so men's minds were prepared for such a proposal.

(2) The law does not seem to have abolished the punishment of death, but only scourging and death preceded by scourging.

(3) It seems to have followed the precedent of the laws on provocatio in confining its operation¹⁴ to the precincts of the city and a distance of one mile in every direction beyond.

(4) It repealed those penal clauses of former laws that contained provision for the infliction of such penalties.

(5) The penal clause of the law itself probably provided¹⁵ that offenders should be 'interdicted from water and fire'.

(6) It was not strictly speaking a law on provocatio. Indeed it would tend to lessen the number of cases in which the need of the provocatio would arise.

ii. The second lex Porcia is supposed¹⁶ to have been carried by P Porcius Laeca when he was praetor in 195 B.C., the year of Cato's consulship. The political bearing of the measure and the main drift of its contents have been set forth as follows.

¹⁴ Thus helping to complete the growing distinction between the imperium militiae and imperium domi. This head contains an inference probable in itself, and countenanced by the juxtaposition of the Valerian and Porcian laws in Livy x 9.

¹⁵ See below § 7 of my exposition of Zumpt's view.

¹⁶ Lange R A II pp 198, 520—1. Two known denarii having on them the names of their coiners, M PORC

LAECA and P LAECA, bear in their stamp obvious allusions to the Porcian legislation. The latter may belong to the man mentioned in the text. But after reading Mommsen, Geschichte des Rom Munzwezens pp 526, 552—3, Nos 113, 161, and the criticism of Zumpt 1 2 p 48—58, I can only say that, though the allusion is clearly to this law, it does not prove that P Porcius Laeca was its author. See Ramsay Rom Ant p 286 (Ed 9).

(1) Porcius Laeca was probably an adherent of the nobility, or he would not have been made¹⁷ one of the tresviri epulones who were then (first time) appointed, doubtless under aristocratic influence. Now the benefit of the new law rested, as will be seen, almost entirely with the travelling capitalists. It is quite inconsistent with what we know¹⁸ of the character and career of Cato that he should have proposed a measure to weaken the control of these gentry by the provincial governors. The law is therefore more probably to be regarded as a crafty move of his opponents. They outbid¹⁹ him in the quest of popularity by carrying further the principle which he had made his own and consequently could not oppose. [And the selection of a Porcius as their tool for this purpose would have about it an ironical plausibility eminently Roman.]

(2) So far as can be gathered by a not too timid inference from a solitary fact, it appears that the principal enactment of this law was the extension of the privilege granted in that of Cato to all citizens living or carrying on civilian pursuits in Italy beyond the mile radius and in the provinces. At least we know that such an extension did take place²⁰ in the case of the provinces, and from this we may argue a fortiori to Italy. Indeed the spread of empire and dispersion of large numbers of citizens travelling on business about so many countries had made the old mile limit an absurdity. Its original intention had no doubt been to reserve the full imperium to the general in the field.

(3) That we do not hear of a single case of a provincial governor being impeached²¹ before the people for a breach of this law, is easily accounted for. The governors knew better than to vent their displeasure on ¹⁷ Livy xxxiii 42 § 1.

Gracchus by the Livian laws of Drusus.

¹⁸ See Livy xxxii 27 §§ 3, 4, and other passages.

²⁰ Cic II in Verrem v § 163.

¹⁹ As they afterwards did Gaius

²¹ For Cicero's threats to Verres see II in Verrem I § 13, V § 173.

Roman citizens, having the fear of a iudicium populi before their eyes; they had besides plenty of provincials to plunder and oppress if so inclined, victims whose cries were far less audible at Rome and who had for the most part to submit without any prospect of redress.

iii. The third lex Porcia, continues Lange²², probably owes its origin to L Porcius Licinus consul in 184 BC when Cato was censor. It is treated as follows.

(1) This Porcius came of a family which had belonged to the nobility²³ at the time of the Hannibalic War. He had been praetor²⁴, and was a man of influence²⁵ and a faithful supporter²⁶ of the nobility. And the law itself, as will be seen, suits well with the decline of military discipline which followed the war with Antiochus. It also bears the stamp of the same desire to outbid Cato that has been detected in the second lex Porcia.

(2) Probably it was this law that gave the final extension to the principle of Cato by granting immunity from the degrading punishments in question to citizens²⁷ serving in the Roman armies. It did not lessen²⁸ the plenary imperium of the general; against this there was still to be no appeal. Nor did it abolish the punishment of death; it forbade the scourging of citizens with the cat (verbera)²⁹, and henceforth even the execution of a citizen by order of a court martial had to be carried out in a less³⁰ degrading manner. The sergent's cane (vitis)³¹ was now the only in-

²² RA II pp 233-4, 521.

²³ Livy xxvi 6 § 1, xxvii 6 § 19, 35 § 1, 36 § 11, 46 § 5.

²⁴ Livy xxxiv 54 § 2.

²⁵ Livy xxxix 32.

²⁶ Livy xxxix 39.

²⁷ Sall Jug 69 § 4, Livy epit 57, Plut C Gracchus 9; the case in Livy epit

55 is so exceptional as to be no exception in this connexion, and probably the people had sentenced the man.

²⁸ Cic de re publ i § 63, de legibus iii § 6.

²⁹ And probably also rods (virgae).

³⁰ See Polyb vi 37.

³¹ Livy epit 57. note on pro Rab § 12

strument available for the chastisement of a citizen soldier.

(3) Thus at last the Roman in any part of the world where Roman law was respected could guard himself from cruel scourging by the plea civis Romanus sum. But the wanton and needless distinction thus made between the Roman and the Latin only served to impress more vividly on the latter the already present sense of his own inferior position, which the loyal service rendered in the second Punic war entitled him to regard as undeserved. This rankled in the minds of the Latin communities and bore bitter fruit for Rome at a later day.

I have now to speak of the view of Zumpt³², which is in many important points different from that of Lange. For convenience sake I will take the chief of these points of difference one by one.

(1) He argues that Cato cannot have been the author of the first law, or we should have found mention of it in Plutarch's account of his life. The quotation from Festus (see above) merely proves that Cato spoke on the subject: but so he did on other laws; and Livy, who freely used his speeches, must have made mention of this, or at least of the law, by name. Least of all can it be placed in the year of Cato's praetorship, for he was governor of Sardinia³³ and had his hands full.

[I can only say that these moderate probabilities do not prove the negative of the moderately probable view of Lange.]

(2) He holds that the first law cannot have been passed earlier than 166 B.C., nor the third later than 134 B.C. For Livy's history (which must have given an account of this legislation) is in our hands down to 167, and does not tell us of their enactment: and the procedure of Scipio at Numantia was clearly a novel one. If it were not, why should Livy lay such stress on it as to make his abridger put the affair into his epitome? And, if novel, it must have been in consequence of some new legislation, recent or impending. It must have been recent, or we should hear of it in Livy's account of the campaigns of Aemilius Paullus. Besides, if the three laws were passed in a space of about thirty years, it is easier to understand their being generally regarded as one.

³² op. cit. In Livy II 55 the man seems to have been liable to the flogging, but he got off through a popular outbreak.

³³ Zumpt I 2 pp. 48—69.

³⁴ Livy XXXII 8 § 5, 27 § 3.

[Surely this is weaker than the last, and proves either too little or too much.]

(3) It is just worth mentioning that while he lays great stress on the word omnium in pro Rab § 12, and bases arguments thereon, he finds it convenient to overlook item in Sall Cat 51 § 22, and to force a distinction or even opposition between the lex Porcia and the aliae leges both there and in § 40.

(4) He considers it most probable that the valuable exemption granted by these laws was not extended to all citizens but only to the cives optimo iure, that is those who had the ius honorum. He argues that certain cases³⁴ of these degrading punishments are known to us, in which the sufferers were pretty certainly citizens, and in some of them we are distinctly told so. But they probably had not the ius honorum.

[This is possible, perhaps probable, though not exactly proved. The cives (cum suffragio) who had not the ius honorum would in any case not be very numerous. At least I can only discover one class answering to the description—those³⁵ who, having the Latin right plus the right of acquiring the Roman full franchise by settlement at Rome, had settled there, but, not having as yet been enrolled on the list of citizens, were temporarily regarded as incolae and allowed a sort of limited vote in the assembly of the tribes.]

(5) He urges that the laws have a tribunician air, and that three members of the Porcian house (whose names he gives) must have been tribunes in the short space of time mentioned above (2).

[This is the merest conjecture, as he is constrained to admit.]

(6) He thinks that a more likely conjecture as to the contents of the three laws is that the first exempted citizens in Rome from the degrading penalties whether they appealed to the people or not, the second dealt with citizens abroad, and the third was really pro tergo civium as forbidding scourging altogether.

[He admits that one might go on guessing some time at this rate. And surely these would not so readily bear the appearance of one law as those reconstructed by Lange.]

(7) He thinks that the gravis poena mentioned by Livy as contained in the sanctio of the Porcian law was nothing else than a clause declaring that a transgressor was liable to the penalties of perduellio, in fact that he was perduellis.

[‘perduellis esto’ would be something like the form. It is indeed very ³⁴ See Sall Jug 69 § 4, Plutarch Marius 8, Gracchus apud Gellium x 3 § 3, Cic ad Att v 11 § 2 with Watson's note.

³⁵ See Livy xxv 3 § 16, Mommsen Rom Hist bk II cc 5, 7 [vol I pp 376, 462]. Lange R A II pp 434—5, 452.

possible that, as a formal penalty of outlawry (aqua et igni interdicere) probably belongs to a late age of Republican legislation, the Porcian law may have employed this form, which soon, perhaps had already, assumed much the same effective meaning. But if it did, then Lange's earlier dates will suit it far better than Zumpt's own. And we must be careful not to employ against it Zumpt's favourite argument, that if it had been so Cicero must surely have made some allusion to it in his speech for Rabirius.]

I can only say in general that I wish I could do more towards removing the obscurity that surrounds this interesting subject. In the state of the evidence I can do no more than express a qualified approval³⁶ of the efforts of Lange. Zumpt seems to aim at more precision than is really attainable, and in the attempt to prove negatives he is misapplying an independent and honest judgment.

The references to lex Porcia in the speech for Rabirius (§§ 8, 12, 13) are of so general a nature that they cannot in my opinion be fairly applied to any one of the three laws, but must be taken as a loose reference to the Porcian legislation as a whole. Even were they not such, their authority would not serve to establish anything; for there is nothing that Cicero would not say to suit the needs of his case.

F. OF THE LEX SEMPRONIA.

To begin again with quotations, I select the following.

(1) Plutarch C Gracchus 4 δύο νόμους εἰσέφερε, τὸν μὲν...
.....τὸν δέ, εἴ τις ἄρχων ἄκριτον ἐκκεκηρύχοι πολίτην, κατ' αὐτοῦ δίδοντα κρίσιν τῷ δήμῳ. τούτων τῶν νόμων ἀντικρυς ὁ μὲν.....τῷ δ' ἐνείχετο Ποπίλλιος· οὗτος¹ γὰρ στρατηγῶν τοὺς τοῦ Τιβερίου φίλους ἐξεκέρυξε. καὶ Ποπίλλιος μὲν οὐχ ὑποστὰς τὴν κρίσιν ἔφυγεν ἐξ Ἰταλίας.

³⁶ Lange's theory is accepted by Mr Wordsworth in his 'Fragments and Specimens' p 624.

¹ See Cic Laelius § 37, Velleius II 7 § 2.

(2) Cicero de domo sua § 82 ubi enim tuleras ut mihi aqua et igni interdiceretur? quod C Gracchus de P Popillio, Saturninus de Metello tulit, homines seditiosissimi de optimis ac fortissimis civibus; non ut esset interdictum, quod ferri non poterat, tulerunt, sed ut interdiceretur.

(3) Cicero in Catil IV § 10 video de istis qui se populares haberi volunt abesse non neminem, ne de capite videlicet civium Romanorum sententiam ferat.....at vero C Caesar intellegit legem Semproniam esse de civibus Romanis constitutam, qui autem rei publicae sit hostis, cum civem nullo modo esse posse: denique ipsum latorem Semproniae legis iniussu populi poenas rei publicae dependisse.

(4) in Catil I § 28 (his country is appealing to Cicero) quid tandem te impedit? mosne maiorum? at persaepe etiam privati in hac re publica perniciosos cives morte multarunt. an leges quae de civium Romanorum supplicio rogatae sunt? at numquam in hac urbe qui a re publica defecerunt civium iura tenuerunt.

(5) Schol Ambros (on in Catil IV § 10) sententiam² tulerat [Gracchus] ut ne quis in civem Romanum capitalem sententiam diceret.

(6) Schol Gronov (ibid) lege Sempronia iniussu populi non licebat quaeri³ de capite civis Romani.

(7) Livy XXVI 33 § 10 per senatum agi de Campanis, qui cives Romani sunt, iniussu populi non video posse, idque et apud maiores nostros in Satricanis factum esse, cum defecissent, ut M Antistius tribunus plebis prius rogationem ferret sciretque plebs uti senatui de Satricanis sententiae dicendae ius esset⁴.

(8) Cicero de domo sua § 33 [dico] hoc nobis esse a maioribus traditum; hoc esse denique proprium liberae civitatis, ut nihil de capite civis aut de bonis sine iudicio senatus aut populi *aut eorum qui de quaque re constituti iudices sint detrahi possit*⁶.

² Of course legem is meant, and probably should be read, as Zumpt seems to think.

³ This can only refer to a quaestio extraordinaria, as Zumpt remarks.

⁴ This passage is quoted by Madvig to shew that the principle was an old one. For the later custom see Cic Brutus § 85.

This lex Sempronia seems to belong to the first tribunate of C Gracchus, 123 BC. His object in bringing forward such a proposal was twofold. First, he had to revenge the death⁶ of his brother and the banishment⁷ of a number of his adherents. The person principally aimed at was P Popillius Laenas, who had been president of the quaestio extraordinaria by which the followers of Ti Gracchus had been tried. In the second place he had to win the favour of the people by popular measures; and this law, prohibiting these trials by special commissions except with the consent of the people, was aimed directly at the assumption of such powers by the senate.

That the appointment of such special commissions by the senate without the sanction of a popular vote was strictly speaking an unconstitutional step, cannot be doubted. But in this matter as in others by the gradual disuse⁸ of what was a necessary condition of validity the senate had come to consider itself entitled to act alone: if any demagogue attacked them on this ground it was generally⁹ possible to employ in their defence the intercession of one tribune against another. After the overthrow of the elder Gracchus the nobles proceeded in this unconstitutional manner against the remaining leaders of the popular party: and again in the case of the Catilinarian conspirators the senate formed itself into a sort of High Commission to try them. Even Cicero could only defend this conduct on the ground that men who had been declared public enemies could not claim the right to be treated as citizens.

⁶ I have added this as shewing how audaciously an orator could class together three sorts of jurisdiction, (1) senatorial (2) popular (3) that of special commissions, as though all on the same footing, when it suited his purpose.

⁷ See pro Rab § 14.

⁸ See Plut Ti Gracchus 20.

⁸ See the quotation (9) from Asconius given in appendix A. These special commissions originally became common owing to the clumsiness of trials before the comitia, and they were not wholly superseded by the quaestiones perpetuae. Lange II § 14, 648. See Brutus § 85.

⁹ See Zumpt Crim I 2 pp 211—6.

Cicero tells us (pro Rab § 12) that C Gracchus carried a law ne de capite civium Romanorum iniussu vestro [sc populi] *iudicaretur*¹⁰. This is the most explicit statement on the subject that has come down to us from any Latin author: and it must therefore serve as our chief text in the following enquiry concerning the contents of the law.

(1) It seems to have reenacted (a) the provisions of the Valerian laws¹¹ on provocatio, as may be gathered from Cicero's appeal to the Sempronian together with the Porcian laws as having been violated by Verres in the case of Gavius, and (b) provisions resembling those of the Porcian¹² laws, by a general prohibition of the penalty of death, as is to be gathered from the passages¹³ of Cicero and Sallust relating to the Catilinarian affair.

(2) It expressly forbade the trial and sentencing of citizens so as to affect their caput, the rights and privileges of a free Roman citizen, by a quaestio extraordinaria without the consent of the people.

(3) The difficulty now meets us in the attempt to discover what there was new in all this. Surely there must have been some new provision in the law. Yet it does seem, as Zumpt asserts, that all these enactments were, so far as relates to the liability of offending magistrates, already in existence; and it can hardly be supposed that in such a period as that of the Gracchi they were in serious danger of being forgotten. Zumpt then argues that the novelty must have consisted in the extension of the liability to those who took part in this violation of citizen right, such as the board of advisers (consilium)¹⁴ by whom the offending magistrate

¹⁰ The word is opposed to indicta causa just below.

¹¹ It seems from Plut Ti Gracchus 16 that the elder Gracchus just before his fall had proposed a law granting appeal to the people from the sentence of a quaestio perpetua—an absurdity, as will be seen from Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

See in general Mommsen bk iv c 3 (vol III pp 117—8, 124).

¹² 11 in Verrem v § 163, Gellius x 3 § 13.

¹³ See appendix E.

¹⁴ See Cic Laelius § 37 and Reid's note.

had been supported and the senators who had assisted in the passing of a scutum for the appointment of any such extraordinary judicial commission. He urges that the measures employed against the adherents of Ti Gracchus would not have been undertaken by the boldest of consuls on their own sole responsibility: they must have acted on instructions from the senate. I must admit the plausibility of this view. He goes on to shew that the timidity of certain senators shewn in absenting themselves from the debate on the Catilinarians may be best accounted for on this supposition. The senate was acting illegally¹⁵ as a court of justice on that occasion. The argument of Cicero, that the men were hostes not cives, was a mere evasion; for their true character had only been prejudged by the scutum ultimum, the constitutional validity of which had been recently called in question in the case of Rabirius, which was a moral defeat for the senate. We can well understand an unwillingness on the part of cautious members to render themselves by participation in such proceedings liable to the penalties of the Sempronian law. Allowing this explanation to be plausible, I must add that the attempt of Cicero to construe the presence of Caesar into an admission¹⁶ that the law did not apply in the case was no more than the artful hit of a clever debater. All that Caesar wanted¹⁷ was to save the prisoners from the blind fury of the moment. His own risk under the Sempronian law would be practically nothing; and it was no time to be pointing out the risk run by others when there was nothing to be gained by it in debate.

(4) Whether the law was in any degree retrospective in its effect, seems very doubtful. Plutarch clearly understood it to have been so, but his cursory notice cannot be held to prove that the law under which the quaestio extraordinaria to try Popillius was appointed was the same law as the above. But that either a separate law or a special clause of this one ¹⁵ See Zumpt Crim 1 2 pp 210—1.

¹⁶ Notice the word intellegit.

¹⁷ Caesar's speech is given by Sallust, and its authority as a report is strengthened by Plut Cato minor 23.

did bring such past acts under the operation of this law, is pretty certain. Else why was the accusation of Popillius delayed till this law had been passed?

(5) We must also doubt whether the provision against the ensnaring of unwary citizens through the omission of the due forms of procedure¹⁸ (ne quis iudicio circumveniretur) belonged to this or to a separate law.

(6) The penalty named¹⁹ in the sanctio was the liability to trial in a iudicium populi. Probably it took the form of declaring²⁰ the offender to be perduellis. The court before which he would be impeached was the sovereign people assembled in their centuries. This was the supreme court alone competent²¹ to judge where a citizen's caput was concerned, and indeed remained so till the end of the Republic. The penalty on conviction would then be aquae et ignis interdictio.

To apply these conclusions to the speech for Rabirius, it seems abundantly clear that the power claimed by the senate of issuing the scutum ultimum in emergencies, on the maintenance of which Cicero lays so much stress, was at least indirectly taken away by this law of Gracchus. And it is to be remarked that when dealing with this topic²² Cicero avoids all reference or allusion to this or any other law. We should also infer that the nomination of the duumvirs by the praetor was illegal, at all events since the passing of this law. Accordingly in § 12 we find the conduct of Labienus opposed to the legislation of Gracchus with as much strength as the orator thought suited to the ears of a hostile audience.

¹⁸ So expressed by Lange R A 111 31 from Plut C Gracchus 3. But Ramsay on pro Cluent §§ 151—4 seems to think that it referred to judicial corruption.

¹⁹ See the quotation from the speech de domo.

²⁰ See appendix E (§ 7 of my exposition of Zumpt's view).

²¹ See Cic de legibus 111 §§ 11, 44, 45, pro Sest § 65, Zumpt Crim 1 2 pp 231—3.

²² From § 13 it seems that Labienus had in some way appealed to this and the Porcian law—perhaps as supporting his view on this point against that of Cicero.

[See Lange RA 1 p 385, II pp 413, 523, 525, 612, 647, III p 31, Zumpt's Criminalrecht I 2 pp 69—76, Madvig's Verfassung und Verwaltung I pp 299, 300; to all which I am indebted.]

G. OF THE TRIBUNI AERARII.

In the year 70 BC the praetor L. Aurelius Cotta carried¹ a law for the reform of the criminal courts. By this he deprived the senators of that exclusive right of sitting on juries which had been restored to them by Sulla. But he did not simply divide this power equally between the senators and equites: he ordained that each jury should consist of three panels (decuriae)², one of senators one of equites one of tribuni aerarii. Of these last we can only be said to know the following facts.

(1) They were recognized as a clearly marked class (ordo) of citizens. The way in which they are spoken of³ proves this.

(2) They were a numerous class, or they would not have been able to supply a sufficient number of competent jurors.

(3) They were closely connected with the equites; for not only are they generally mentioned as acting in full sympathy with them, but in passages⁴ where nothing turns on the distinct mention of the third decuria we find the term equites used to include both.

(4) They were (as we should expect) not confined to Rome, but were some of them resident⁵ in municipia.

(5) Their judicial function was taken from them⁶ by Julius Caesar.

¹ Madvig II pp 222—3, Lange III 197.

² See ad Quint frat II 4 § 6.

³ See in Catil IV § 15, ad Att I 16 § 3, pro Plancio § 21. When Dion Cassius calls them ἐκ τοῦ ὁμίλου τινὲς he is speaking of their ejection from the courts by Julius Caesar, and his authority is of little or no weight on the point.

⁴ See pro Cluent §§ 121, 130, pro Font § 36 (26).

⁵ See pro Plancio § 21.

⁶ Suet Jul 41 iudicia ad duo genera

The following points also deserve attention, though the evidence does not warrant the drawing of certain conclusions.

(6) It is probable that their ordo was—at all events after the passing of the lex Aurelia—based⁷ like that of equites on a definite census footing. For not only would this be very natural in itself and in accordance with Roman precedent, but we know that when Augustus added a fourth *decuria*⁸ he took its members from a class defined by census. It is thus almost certain that the same principle was acted upon throughout.

(7) It is probable that their name was inherited from the tribuni aerarii of whom we have mention⁹ as existing in ancient times. These seem to have been persons entrusted with the duty of receiving the tributum (which was raised tributum) and paying the money to the soldiers as stipendium. In the later days of the Republic the raising of tributum ceased and the stipendium was paid through the quaestors. It is therefore not to be wondered at that we find no mention of tribuni aerarii again until the time of Cicero. They may have been in some sense a survival of the agents employed in ancient times. But how they came to outlive the loss of their functions, how they became an ordo at all, whether they were in any way connected with the curatores tribuum mentioned by Varro,—these questions, though interesting in themselves, admit of no definite answer in the present state of the evidence; indeed they are mere matters of baseless speculation.

(8) The opinion of Mommsen, that they were men of equestrian census who had served the office of tribunus aerarius, is open to several objections. Passing over the point that this iudicium redegit, equestris ordinis ac senatorii; tribunos aerarios, quod erat tertium, sustulit. See Cic philippic 1 § 20, Dion Cassius XLIII 25.

⁷ Certainly for judicial purposes after the lex Pompeia iudiciaria of 53 B.C., for which see philippic 1 § 20 and the 'index legum' in Orelli and Haider's onomasticon.

⁸ Suet Aug 32 ad tria iudicium decurias quartam addidit ex inferiore censu, quae ducentariorum vocaretur indicaretque de levioribus summis.

⁹ Varro de ling Lat v § 181, Paul diac (Müller's Festus p 2), Cato apud Gell vi (vii) 10, Gaius iv 27. See also Livy i 43 § 13.

duty (in the early times when we hear of it) had probably nothing official¹⁰ about it, it is to be noted that the passages upon which this view rests are chiefly such as are referred to above on (3), which give no such inference when fairly regarded, or such as Tac ann XI 22, which only speaks in general terms¹¹ of the recovery by the equites of a share in the iudicia. It may also be asked how it comes that, if there was an office of this name important enough to be held by equites, we still have no reference to any function as falling within its competence.

(9) As to the date at which the tribuni aerarii became recognized as an *ordo*¹², we have no materials that enable us to determine it even approximately. The reference in pro Rabirio § 27 has been explained by Madvig to mean that men who in 63 BC were equites and tribuni aerarii had as young men in 100 BC taken part in the suppression of Saturninus. But this interpretation, which seems to me a very forced one, has been rejected by Mommsen and Becker. I venture to think that the members of those ordines at the time are meant, even as the senatus and nobilitas of §§ 20, 21 are the senators etc of that time. If this be so, it will follow that (a) the tribuni aerarii were already an ordo in 100 BC, and consequently (b) were not first recognized as such by the lex Aurelia of 70 BC.

[For more detailed discussion see Becker and Marquardt's Handbuch der Römischen Alterthümer part III div 2 pp 130—134, Lange's Römische Alterthümer I pp 498, 509, 540, 549—50, III pp 197—8, Madvig's Verfassung und Verwaltung des Römischen Staates I pp 182—5, Mommsen's die Römischen Tribus §§ 7, 8, to the first and third of which works I am especially indebted.]

¹⁰ Madvig I p 184.

¹¹ So Plut Pomp 22. The statement of Velleius II 32 § 3, that Cotta divided the judicial power between the senate and equites equally (aequaliter inter utrumque ordinem) is so inexact as to deceive nobody.

¹² How loosely the word ordo was used may be seen from the note on § 27 of the speech.

H. OF IGNOMINIA AND INFAMIA.

Both these words are used in the general sense of 'disgrace' 'dishonour'. But they have also a special and technical sense which requires notice, and may be best brought out by considering the relations between the two. These seem to be as follows.

(a) infamia is the condition of the infamis. Such a condition necessarily results from certain antecedents, such as¹ condemnation in a turpe iudicium, following some dishonourable trade or profession, etc. It is not declared or announced in the form of a sentence of any kind. It is the immediate and unavoidable consequence of certain courses of action which offend against the popular sentiment or the positive law, and it is at once recognized by all as ipso facto existent. The infamis does not strictly speaking undergo a capitis diminutio but only² minutio existimationis, though the practical consequences do not greatly differ. He remains a citizen, but loses the ius honorum and probably ius suffragi also, and the right to display the imagines of his ancestors³ and wear the latus clavus. The censors were bound to take notice of his condition and strike him out of a tribe (tribu movere) and make him aerarius (aerarium facere or relinquere), whereby his position became that of a civis sine suffragio. It is always to be remembered that when a censor struck the name of an infamis out of the tribe list he did not thereby make him infamis; because the man was infamis, therefore he was struck out.

(b) ignominia is the consequence⁴ of the notio animadversio notatio of the censor. It depended upon the censor's will, and the nota was often affixed to a man's name from

¹ pro Cluent § 119, edictum Iulianum 17, Digest III 2, Lange 1 506—7, 805, Becker Rom Alt II 1 pp 121—4, Madvig II pp 259, 297.

² pro Rose com § 16, pro Caccina

§ 6, Digest I. 13 § 5, Lange 1 208—9, 506—7, Becker as before.

³ pro Sulla § 88, pro Cluent § 120.

⁴ Lange 1 806.

caprice prejudice and party or personal hatred. It was not an enduring⁵ condition, but had to be renewed each time by the new censors. But the man so degraded on one occasion might be reinstated by the next censors in his full privileges; or the two censors might disagree, and what one had done his colleague would readily undo. There were various degrees⁶ of this degradation. Probably the ius honorum was in any case lost. But in other respects it seems that the censors inflicted more or less disgrace (as senatu movere, equum vendere iubere, tribu movere, aerarium facere) according to their conception of deserts and the rank of the offender. They need not act in recognition of existing infamia, or of a judicial decision of any kind; public rumour was enough. The ignominia was not strictly speaking⁷ a penalty, nor the censor's decision a iudicium. It should be added that the aerarius lost ius suffragi altogether, while the man tribu motus in the milder sense⁸ (transferred from a rural to a city tribe) got a worse vote. The aerarius remained liable⁹ to army service, though not in the legion, and also was exposed to arbitrary taxation.

It seems then that the man infamis gives the name to his condition of infamia, while on the other hand the imposed condition of ignominia makes a man ignominiosus.

I. OF THE VEXILLUM RUSSI COLORIS.

We are told by Dion Cassius XXXVII 28 that it was a very ancient custom of the Romans to keep a military standard¹ flying on the Janiculum during the meetings of the comitia

⁵ See Livy IV 24, 31 for case of Mamercus Aemilius.

⁶ See generally Livy XXIX 37, XLV 15, IV 24 §§ 7, 8, 31 § 5. Cic pro Cluent §§ 119—122, Lange I 507, 805 7, Becker p 123.

⁷ See the long discussion of this matter in pro Cluentio §§ 117, 131.

and compare de republ IV § 6.

⁸ Livy XLV 15 §§ 4, 5, Pliny nat hist XVIII § 13, Lange I 805—6.

⁹ Lange I 507.

¹ Plut Fab 15 tells us that the signal for battle was χιτών κόκκινος ὑπὲρ τῆς στρατηγικῆς σπητῆς διατεινόμενος.

centuriata. This was to indicate that watch and ward was being duly kept at that post by a guard set there for that purpose. For inasmuch as the centuries met outside the city wall, and represented the armed force² of the Roman people, it was dangerous to leave the city in their rear exposed to the attack of an enemy, whose first step would be to occupy the Janiculum. No further business could be transacted³ at the meeting when the hauling down of the ensign announced the withdrawal of the guard. He adds that the custom was still kept up in his time from religious motives.

Macrobius sat I 16 § 15 speaks of *triginta dies*⁴ quibus exercitui imperato vexillum russi coloris in arce positum est. Livy XXXIX 15 § 11 says cum vexillo in arce posito comitiorum causa exercitus eductus esset.

There is here an apparent disagreement as to the spot where the guard and flag were planted, for at Rome arx usually denoted the citadel on the Capitoline; and from the place of assembly in the Campus Martius both the Capitoline and the Janiculum would be visible. But there can I think be little doubt that Weissenborn is right⁵ in taking arx to stand for the Janiculum in this connexion. That this was traditionally a menaced point of strategic importance is clear from the story of Cocles in Livy II 10 §§ 3, 4. And the word arx is used of it (though quite untechnically) in I 33 § 6. Lange however (Röm Alt I 555) seems to incline to the view that the arx in question was that commonly so called on the Capitoline.

² Hence called exercitus.

³ For the breaking up of assemblies see Cic de domo § 45.

⁴ Compare Paul diac p 103 iusti dies dicebantur triginta, quum exercitus

esset imperatus et vexillum in arce positum. Lange I 554.

⁵ Madvig I p 255 takes the same view.

K. OF THE CONNEXION BETWEEN MULTAE IRROGATIO AND EXILE AND INFAMIA.

It seems that in early times the fines imposed by magistrates (multae dictio) or named in laws were not allowed to exceed the half¹ of the offender's property. But it is certain that in the fine-processes before the comitia tributa this limitation was not² observed. This may be explained by observing that each multae irrogatio was a separate legislative act³ and that the sovereign people could only be bound by the expression of its own will.

The simple multae dictio brought⁴ no infamia. The multa according to Huschke⁵ is essentially a composition for some wrong done. But the multae irrogatio is an attempt to get a fine inflicted by the people⁶, and so to force the accused to compound for an offence which might have been dealt with as perduellio. There is therefore strong a priori likelihood that condemnation in such a fine-process would make a man infamis. That a vote of the people in their centuries should deprive a man of all that made life worth having, or even of life itself, while a vote of the same given by tribes could inflict a fine but involved no further consequences, is a position of affairs hardly conceivable. Yet it seems to have been so⁷ (at least in theory) in the case⁸ of Menenius. But we are told that he would not endure the disgrace put upon him, and died of a broken heart. So too Livius Salinator⁹ would not bear

¹ Cato apud Gellium VI (VII) 3 § 37, Festus p 246, see Madvig II p 295, Lange II § 43, Mommsen I p 156.

² See Dionys XIII § of Camillus.

³ Probably confirming a preceding multae dictio, and following the pattern of the older capital jurisdiction of the centuries. See Introd C (n), appendix B, and Maine's Ancient Law c 10.

⁴ Huschke p 245.

⁵ Huschke pp 172-4. Compare pro Cluent § 29 qui et naturae et legibus in- iuscit: quem leges exilio natura morte multavit.

⁶ See Huschke pp 175-6, 245.

⁷ See Zumpt I 2 pp 292-4.

⁸ Liv II 52 § 5, Dionys IX 27. See case of two consuls in Liv III 31 §§ 5, 6.

⁹ Suet Tib 3, Liv XXVII 34 §§ 4, 5, Valer Max II 9 § 6. He was fetched back to Rome and afterwards elected consul and censor, Liv XXVII 34 §§ 6 15, XXIX 37.

the disgrace of a similar condemnation, which he lived to avenge. So L Iunius¹⁰ the colleague of P Claudius Pulcher died by his own hand to avoid the disgrace of a condemnation. In all these cases the word used by the Latin writers is ignominia in its general sense. There is no infamia, nothing with which legal consequences are bound up. But it seems clear that when a fine-process was regarded as of an essentially criminal nature the matter would probably be taken up by the next censors¹¹ and a real technical ignominia imposed on the offender. Gradually popular sentiment¹² came to regard these criminal fine-processes as necessarily bringing disgrace on the condemned. At last we find a step taken towards the direct recognition of this. In 104 BC was passed the lex Cassia of the tribune L Cassius Longinus of which Asconius¹³ says quae populi iudicia firmavit. He adds that Cassius carried a number of laws to weaken the power of the nobles, *in quibus hanc etiam ut, quem populus damnasset cuive imperium abrogasset*¹⁴, in senatu non esset. The law was aimed chiefly at Q Servilius [Caepio] consul two years before, who had been deprived of his command by the people because of his defeat by the Cimbri. It manifestly imposed a certain degree of infamia. We shall now I think be justified in declaring it probable that in the later times of the Republic men fined by sentence of the tribes—at least for heinous offences—lost somewhat of their repute and standing as citizens and became so far infames.

¹⁰ Cic de nat deor II § 7, Valer Max I 4 § 4.

¹¹ Thus in Livy XXIX 37 § 9 M Livium, quia populi iudicio esset damnatus, equum vendere iussit. See Huschke p 244.

¹² How great reliance was placed on this in early times may be seen from improbe factum in Livy X 9 (quoted at head of appendix F).

¹³ Ascon in Cornel (Orelli p 78), Huschke p 245. So in the lex Julia municipalis (included in Wordsworth)

II 108 foll we find mentioned, as causes of exclusion from the local senate, cases, 'almost exactly those which were visited legally with infamia', and among them queive iudicio publico Romae condemnatus est erit, quocirca eum in Italia esse non liceat etc. See Mommsen I p 464.

¹⁴ That this was done by the tribe-assembly is well known. See Lange II 659—60. A good instance in the present connexion is found in Cic de domo §§ 83, 84.

It will be observed that in the cases of Menenius and Livius cited above we are told that the victim withdrew indignantly into voluntary exile. The same is reported¹⁵ of Camillus. And it is surely probable that, as the tribe assembly came to be more and more employed as a court of criminal jurisdiction, means would be found to drive the condemned into exile. This was most likely at first accomplished by imposing a fine of great amount, in the hope that the offender would be unable¹⁶ either to pay or find sureties (praedes) for payment of the same, and so become liable to arrest and imprisonment. To avoid this he would probably fly from Roman territory. The practice once begun would then by these or other means be kept up and become regular through use.

Further, I would in dealing with this question generally follow the line of argument taken by a great modern authority¹⁷ in speaking of the competence of the jury courts and their relation to the tribe assembly.

Now the decline of the Republic was exactly the period during which the Quaestiones Perpetuae were established, so that the statutes creating them were all passed by a legislative assembly which itself could not, at its ordinary sittings, punish a criminal with death. It followed that the Permanent Judicial Commissions, holding a delegated authority, were circumscribed in their attributes and capacities by the limits of the powers residing with the body which deputed them. They could do nothing which the Assembly of the Tribes could not have done; and, as the Assembly could not sentence to death, the Quaestiones were equally incompetent to award capital punishment.

Though the notion of delegated authority is here perhaps too definitely and strictly conceived¹⁸ to be quite accurate, it ¹⁵ Liv. v. 32 §§ 8, 9. Dionys. xiii. 5. Livy makes the fine inflicted on him absent.

¹⁶ See Gellius vi. (vii) 19 § 5, Dionys. xiii. 5, Huschke pp. 245, 526. Lange ii. 543 refers to Livy xxv. 2 § 9. The contrary arguments of Zumpt i. 2 pp.

293—6 go far enough to shew that the practice must have grown up gradually.

¹⁷ Maine's Ancient Law c. 10. What the words 'at its ordinary sittings' mean, I cannot tell.

¹⁸ See Zumpt ii. 1 p. 353.

is sufficiently so for my purpose. If the power of the juries could not be more than that of the tribe assembly, then conversely the power of the latter could not be less than that of the former. Now we know¹⁹ that infamia and exile followed upon conviction in certain cases before the jury courts. If so, how great is the probability that similar consequences²⁰ attended upon condemnation by the tribe assembly itself.

Moreover, if we reflect that a fine was at first contemplated in the case of Cn Fulvius, which must even from the beginning have been regarded as very serious, and that a fine was eventually imposed upon P Claudius Pulcher, we shall have the utmost difficulty in believing that no infamia attached to these culprits.

I can say no more on this subject. The deficiency of direct evidence is not peculiar to this question. Many of the most important points in the constitutional history of Rome present the same difficulty. Nor is this to be wondered at: for the writers who might have made such questions clear generally content themselves with passing reference or allusion to matters that everyone would know, and of course they could not tell to what details the interest of posterity would turn.

¹⁹ Huschke p 516 refers to Cic pro Rosc com § 16 (of civil cases), pro Cluent §§ 119, 120, de orat 1 §§ 182—3, 11 in Verr 11 § 98, which shew that these are causae capitales. See appendix C, and compare Digest xxxvii 14 10 Labco existimabat capitis accusationem eam esse cuius poena mors aut exilium esset.

²⁰ It is to be remembered that from very early times the tribes decreed outlawry against political criminals in their absence. See Introd C (i).

INDEX

[The numbers refer to pages, and efforts have been made to include every place where anything is to be found that may throw any light on the matter of each heading]

- ab* after gerundive 48
- abstract for concrete 46
- abstract of speech 39—42
- accuser 10
- accuser, choice of procedure by 4, 19
- accuser, withdrawal of 18
- acta actas* 62
- actio* 59
- actio (perduellionis)* 1, 3
- actio regia, tribunicia* 63
- ad salutem (vocare)* 71
- adesse iussus* 2, 13
- adfectatio regni* 7
- adhibere* 67
- aediles* 6, 10
- aerarium facere* 117—8
- ager Picenus* 71
- agere* 80
- agnoscere* 64
- aliquod vestigium* 62
- annales* 61
- anquirere, anquisitio* 3, 4, 14
- Antonius, M, the orator 75
- Appulia* 53
- aqueduct (Tepula) 79
- arbori*, ablative 58
- arms, served out to the people 67—8
- arx* 81, 119
- asyndeton 50
- at* (read for et) 64
- at quorum*.....! 68
- attulit* (reading) 74
- auctor iudici* 39, 80
- auctoritas* 63
- auctoritas senatus* 34, 46, 63
- auspicia* 2, 5, 17, 56, 63
- auxilium* 45, 55
- biduom* 53
- boni* 46
- Caesar, C Julius 29, 30, 32, 112, 114
- Caesar, L Julius 29, 32
- Campaniae* 53
- campus (Martius)* 15, 56
- capital charge not to be renewed 3, 16, 26, 33—4
- capital jurisdiction belonged to the centuries 11, 18, 19, 21, 113
- capital penalty 94—8
- capital penalty not joined with money penalty 2, 3, 98
- capitolium atque arx* 81
- caput* 18, 19, 38, 44, 94—5
- carcer* 5, 13, 25, 27, 81
- carmen* 58
- carnufex* 55, 60
- Cassius, Sp, case of 3, 9, 25
- Catulus, Q Lutatius, the elder 70
- Catulus, Q Lutatius, the younger 70
- causa* 74
- causa necessitudinis* 43
- causam dicere* 4, 13
- censoria notio, nota* etc 117—8, 121
- censoriae leges* 60
- censors, case of the two 4, 27

- centuries, comitia of 3, 4, 5, 11, 14, 16, 17, 18, 26, 27, 30, 118—9
- certare, certatio* 5, 15, 18
- cicatrices* 81
- Cicero, M. Tullius
audacious in statements 80, 108, 110 delivery of 65
edited a speech 34, 65 joined senatorial party 32, 45, 55, 71 justifies his defence of Rabirius 43—4 metaphors of 74 opposed the trial 32, 36, 55, 63 pleads as consul 45, 47 practice of, to defend 44—5 skill of 73, 112, 113 spoke in defence of Rabirius 34, 35, 37 unwilling to refer to Caesar 39 used extravagant language 35, 38, 46 would gladly admit that Rabirius killed Saturninus 64, 65
- citatus, citatio* 2, 5, 13, 15
- crues Romani*, immunities of 57, 62, 100—8
- civitas* 95, 107, 117—8
- Claudius, P. Pulcher, case of 3, 21, 26, 34, 123
- coegit* 57
- coire societatem* 71
- commentarii regum* 61
- commoda vestra* 60
- commovere* 65
- comparatum spatium* 50
- condicio* 50, 61, 78
- confiteri* 64, 65
- conquerendum* 51
- conservare* 48
- conservare maiestatem* 67
- connium* 47, 48, 63
- constituere rem publicam* 49
- consulare officium* 45
- consulis auxilium* 55
- contio, contiones* 3, 12—17, 27, 37, 56, 60, 65, 74
- Crassus, L., the orator 75
- crimen* 51, 64
- crucifixion 56, 62
- crudelitas* 56
- cum*, 'merely because' 53
- cum* (reading) 74
- cum telo esse* 66
- cunctus* 68
- Curio, C. Scribonius 70
- Curtius, C., trial of 36, 52, 53
- dabitur (tempus)* 64
- danger within not without 80—1
- death the end of feeling 77
- debet* 44
- debilis* 70
- Decianus, C. 72—3
- decuriae (iudicium)* 114—6
- defendere* emphatic 43
- defendere rem* 48
- delictum* 45
- diem dicendo consumere* 17
- diem dicere* 1, 3, 4, 5, 13, 14
- diem prodicere* 2, 13
- dies comitalis* 14, 19
- diligentia* 50
- disceptatio* 64
- disciplina* 58
- dualism in ancient times 8, 9
- duumvirs* 2, 3, 8, 9, 21, 25, 26, 29, 31, 32, 33, 39, 57, 113
- eam cum* (reading) 74
- eius contio* 60
- Epicurean view of death 77
- equites* 69, 75, 114—6
- esses* or es (reading) 74
- eventus* 62
- ex aetate coniecturam facere* 79
- excusatio* 2, 5, 17, 53
- execution of sentence 16
- exilium* 4, 5, 17, 38, 61, 93—8, 120—3
- expectatio* 62
- 'extraordinary', see 'ordinary'
- facto* (?) word genuine 51
- facultates* 59

- fateor...profiteor* 62
fecisset...si arbitraretur 63 fides 47
fides (publica) 76
finis, see multa fistula 79
flagellum 57
forum, executions in 55, 60 fraus 74
fuert 72
fuissent...putarentur 59
Fulvius, Cn, case of 3, 21, 26, 123
funus familiare 52—3 Furius, P 73
- genitive 43, 49, 78
 gerundive with ab 48
Glaucia, C Servilius 67 gods support Rome 49
Gracchus, C Sempronius 57, 108—13
Gracchus (Equitius) 67, 68, 81 great men look beyond the grave 77
- haec fuisse, ut* 72 hearings, the four 2, 3, 12, 13, 14—9, 26, 31, 33, 37
hominis 44
honestas 72
Horatius, case of 2, 8, 9, 25, 39
Hortensius, Q 64, 82
hospes...peregrinari 77 hostis 6
huius (use of demonstrative) 58 humanitas 44
- iam* 65
Ianiculum 118—9
ignominia 61, 117—8, 121
ii (form) 76
illam or ad illam (reading) 55 imago 73 immortality, limited 78
imperitus 65
imperium 8, 11, 46, 47, 55, 103, 104, 105 imperium abrogare 121 imprisonment 5, 13, 25, 27, 81
- improbi* 48
imprudencia labi 74 in = 'in dealing with' 50, 51 in his rebus evertendis 47 in iudicio proceeding 10, 12 in iure proceeding 10, 12, 16 in patria mori 82 in re publica 76 incenso 52
index, indicare 65
indicta causa 57
inducere 72
infamia, infamis 91, 99, 117—8, 120
 —3
infelix of trees 58
infestus 56
ingenia 75 ingredi 69 instar 72
integrum 64
 intent constitutes crime 66 intercessio 17, 37
intercludere 47
interdicere aqua et igni and aquae et ignis interdictio 5, 23, 32, 93—8 intervals between hearings 13, 14 invidia vitae 45 invocation of gods 49
ire ad arma 76
indicare, indicium 2, 4, 5, 15, 18, 20, 21
iudicia populi 2, 10—12, 50, 61, 90, 94, 97, 99, 100, 105, 110—3 iudicia publica 24, 61, 91, 97, 99 ius honorum 107, 118 ius suffragi 117—8
iustae inimicitiae 45
iusti triginta dies 14, 119
iustior condicio 78
- labem ignominiamque* 76
labi imprudentia 74
Labienus, Q 68
Labienus, T Attius 28, 30, 31, 37, 38—9, 50
laudationes 54
laut 78

- leges* 63
leges censoriae 60
leges Valeriae 33, 100, 101
legibus)(moribus 4 legislation in view of special cases 24, 32
lex Aelia repetundarum 92
lex Aelia et Fufia 64
lex agraria of Rullus 41, 80
lex Appuleia de maiestate 23, 28, 66—7
lex Aurelia iudiciaria 114—6 lex Caelia tabellaria 2, 16 lex Cassia tabellaria 2, 16 lex Cassia of 104 B.C. 121
lex Cornelia de maiestate 23 lex Cornelia (?) de peculatu 91 lex Cornelia of 67 B.C. 85
lex Fabia de plagiaris 53, 99 lex Hortensia 12, 14, 19
lex Julia de maiestate 24
lex Julia de peculatu 92
lex Julia de repetundis 92 lex Julia municipalis 121
lex Plautia de vi 24
lex Pompeia 115
lex Porcia pro tergo civium 53, 100—8 lex Sempronia 57, 108—13
lex Tullia de ambitu 95
lex Varia de maiestate 23, 24 libertas, slave's reward 79 licitor 58
litis aestimatio 92
lux libertatis 59

 Macer, C. Licinius 51
maiestas 6, 22, 23, 24, 27, 28, 31, 35, 46, 66—7, 81
manibus (infragis) 50, 80
 Manlius, M., case of 3, 8, 26
 Marius, C. 66—81
me agente 80
 Metellus Celer 29, 32, 33, 63
 Metellus, I. 70
 Milo, accusation of 13
moreretur.....consisteret 60 moribus)(legibus 4

multa 4, 5, 120
multae dictio 21, 120
multam irrogare and multae irrogatio 1, 3, 19, 20, 26, 35—7, 54, 120—3

natio 80
 Niebuhr 33, 80
nobilitas ac iuventus 70
nullus est reliquus rex.....etc 80

obnubito 58
obsidio 77
occidendi hominis causa 66 one day allowed for voting 16 opes 59
 Opimius, L., case of 27
 'ordinary' and 'extraordinary' trials, distinguished by Zumpt 11, 12, 13, 22, 25, 33
ordines (use of ordo) 75, 114—6 outlawry 18, 93—8

pacem ac veniam 49
paricidium 6, 25, 76
patrium sepulcrum 82
peculatus 5, 24, 26, 28, 36, 51, 88—93 penalty 32, 37, 38
perduellio 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 11, 21, 22, 24, 120
perduellio, cases of 25—8 perduellis 6
perduellis esto 107—8, 113 peregrinari 77 perfect, use of 36 pericula 43
periculum amici 82
perscriptum or praescriptum (reading) 36, 54
persequi 59
perturbari 65
pestem ac perniciem 46
plagiarius 99
 Pleminius, Q., case of 18, 17
 Popillius, C., case of 27
 Popillius, P., case of 27, 108—13 populares, popularis 9, 31, 56

- Porcius, M Cato 101—6
 Porcius, P Laeca 103—4
 Porcius, L Licinus 105
postulare 54
 Postumius, M Pyrgensis, case of 5, 26
potestas 49, 50
praedico 80 praefectura 71 praescriptio 51
praesidia 47
praetor urbanus 4, 14, 19, 32
privatus (reus) 4, 13
prius quam 60 proditio 6 profiteri 61—3 propinquos 52
proponitur.....moriamur 61 provocatio 2, 5, 8, 11, 20, 21, 25, 29, 85, 100, 101, 102, 103
publica, publicanus 26, 69 publica iura 64
publicum consilium 48

quaestiones extraordinariae 109—13 quaestiones perpetuae 22, 23, 31, 122 quaestores 3, 9, 10, 25 quaestorship of Saturninus 69
quam ob rem repeated 62 qui hos patres.....(reading) 68 qui in salute etc 69
qui rem publicam salvam esse vellent 67 qui tum.....tenebat 69
quid futurum est de...? 76 quod.....id 55
quoniam ita vis 68

 Rabirius, case of, discussed 28—39 ratio 44, 71
ratis (reading) 74
 red flag 17, 29, 30, 33, 118—9 relictus ab 72 religionem 78 religiones 63 religiosis locis 51
relinquere 59
repetundae 23, 24, 28, 92

reus 13
rex, regius 63
rogatio 20, 39, 63
rostra.....contionem 74
 Rutilius, P Rufus 70

sacerdotium 76
salus rei publicae 45, 50, 69
salutis perfugium 49
sanctio 100, 101
Saturnini crimen 64
 Saturninus, L. Appuleius 22, 23, 28, 30, 31, 64—79, 97
 Scaevius 68
 Scaeva, the slave 79
 Scaevola, Q Mucius 69
 Scaurus, M Aemilius 69
scopuli 74
scutum preceding trial 11, 12 scutum ultimum 9, 27, 29, 30, 45, 77, 83—8, 112, 113
scutum ultimum, form of 66—7, 86 semihora 37, 50, 51
sempiternum 78
senatus auctoritas, see auctoritas senatus consultum, see scutum sepulcrum 82
servi publici 4, 55, 60
 Servilius, P Vatia 70 si proponitur.....moriamur 61 slaves 53, 61, 99
sororis filius 52
spatium 50
spe posteritatis 78
 Stoic view of immortality 78 suffragiis 50
suspendio 59

tabella (ballot), see 'voting' tabularium 4, 51, 93
tam and quam bracketed 53 Tarquin 58
tempora 47
temptare 58
 Titius, Sex 73
 title of speech 34—5
traditum 46

- tribes, comitia of 11, 18, 19, 20, 31, 120, 121—3
 tribes and centuries 5, 11, 12, 14, 19, 20, 26, 27, 120
tribu movere 117, 118
tribuni aerarii 75, 114—6 tribuni plebis 3, 4, 5, 9—19, 22, 23, 26, 27, 29, 110
tribunicium furorem 71 trinundinum, trinum nundinum 2, 14 tu horum libertatis (reading) 57—8 tumultus 77, 84
vades dare 5, 13 valere ad 65
 Valerius, L. Flaccus 76
 veiling the head 58
venia 49
verbera 62, 100, 101, 102, 105
 Verres, accusation of 28, 45 vester not=tuus 59
vicinitas concrete 54
vicinitatis 54
vindicta 62
virga 57, 105
virtus 63
vitis 57, 105
una a vobis (order) 45
uncus 62
 voting in assemblies 2, 16, 28, 50

UNIVERSITY PRESS, CAMBRIDGE.
August, 1889.

CATALOGUE OF WORKS

PUBLISHED FOR THE SYNDICS

OF THE

Cambridge University Press.

London: C. J. CLAY AND SONS,
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,
AVE MARIA LANE.

GLASGOW: 263, ARGYLE STREET.

Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL AND CO.
Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS.

PUBLICATIONS OF
The Cambridge University Press.

THE REVISED VERSION
OF THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

The Revised Version is the Joint Property of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

(The Cambridge & Oxford Editions are uniform in Type, Size, & Price.)

The following Editions of the Revised Version of the Holy Bible and New Testament have been already published and may be had in a great variety of cloth and leather bindings of all booksellers.

THE HOLY BIBLE.

N.B. The Pearl 16mo., the Ruby 16mo., and the Minion 8vo., are facsimile editions and correspond page for page with each other.

Cheap edition for use in Schools.

- | | | |
|----------------------|-------------|-----|
| 1. Pearl type, 16mo. | prices from | 1/6 |
| 2. Ruby type, 16mo. | do. | 4/6 |
| 3. Minion type, 8vo. | do. | 7/6 |

A large type edition in one volume.

4. Small Pica type, Imperial 8vo. prices from 18/-

LIBRARY EDITIONS.

In five vols., or the Old Testament only, in four volumes.

- | | | |
|---|----------------------|-----------------|
| 5. Pica type, Demy 8vo. | 5 vols., prices from | £2 |
| 6. Pica type, Demy 8vo. Old Testament only, 4 vols., | do. | £1. 12s. |
| 7. Pica type, Royal 8vo. | 5 vols., | do. £3. 2s. 6d. |
| 8. Pica type, Royal 8vo. Old Testament only, 4 vols., | do. | £2. 10s. |

THE PARALLEL BIBLE.

Being the AUTHORISED VERSION arranged in Parallel columns with
the REVISED VERSION.

9. Minion type, Crown 4to. prices from £1. 6s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE REVISED VERSION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Cheap editions for use in Schools.

- | | | |
|---------------------------|-------------|-----|
| 1. Nonpareil type, 32mo. | prices from | -/6 |
| 2. Brevier type, 16mo. | do. | 1/- |
| 3. Long Primer type, 8vo. | do. | 1/6 |

LIBRARY EDITIONS.

- | | | |
|--------------------------|-------------|------|
| 4. Pica type, Demy 8vo. | prices from | 8/- |
| 5. Pica type, Royal 8vo. | do. | 12/6 |

THE PARALLEL NEW TESTAMENT.

Giving the Authorised and Revised Versions side by side.

- | | | |
|---------------------------------------|-------------|-----|
| 6. Pearl type, 16mo. (Pocket Edition) | prices from | 1/6 |
| 7. Minion type, 8vo. | do. | 4/6 |
| 8. Long Primer type, 4to. | do. | 7/6 |

STUDENT'S LARGE PAPER EDITION.

- | | | |
|----------------------------|-------------|------|
| 9. Minion type, Crown 4to. | prices from | 10/6 |
|----------------------------|-------------|------|

All Editions of the Parallel New Testament correspond page for page with each other.

THE PARALLEL NEW TESTAMENT, Greek and English. The Greek Text edited by the Rev. F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., LL.D., and printed on alternate pages with the English Parallel Minion Edition of the Revised Version.

Minion type, Crown 8vo. prices from 12/6

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN GREEK, according to the Text followed in the Authorised Version with the variations adopted in the Revised Version. Edited by the Rev. F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., LL.D.

Crown 8vo. prices from 6/-

Specimens of type and size of pages with prices sent on application.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, &c.

THE CAMBRIDGE PARAGRAPH BIBLE of the Authorized English Version, with the Text Revised by a Collation of its Early and other Principal Editions, the Use of the Italic Type made uniform, the Marginal References remodelled, and a Critical Introduction prefixed, by F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., LL.D., Editor of the Greek Testament, Codex Augiensis, &c., and one of the Revisers of the Authorized Version. Crown 4to. gilt. 21s.

From the Times

"Students of the Bible should be particularly grateful (to the Cambridge University Press) for having produced, with the able assistance of Dr Scrivener, a complete critical edition of the Authorized Version of the English Bible, an edition such as, to use the words of the Editor, 'would have been executed long ago had this version been nothing more than the greatest and best known of English classics.' Falling at a time when the formal revision of this version has been undertaken by a distinguished company of scholars and divines, the publication of this edition must be considered most opportune."

From the Athenæum

"Apart from its religious importance, the English Bible has the glory, which but few sister versions indeed can claim, of being the chief classic of the language, and having, in conjunction with Shakespeare, and in an immeasurable degree more than he, fixed the language beyond any possibility of important change. Thus the recent contributions to the literature of the subject, by such workers as Mr Francis Fry and Canon Westcott, appeal to a wide range of sympathies; and to these may now be added Dr Scrivener, well known for his labours in the cause of the Greek Testament criticism, who has brought out, for the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press, an edition of the English Bible, according to the text of 1611, revised by a comparison with later issues on principles stated by him in his Introduction. Here he enters at length into the history of the chief editions of the version, and of such features as the marginal notes, the use of italic type, and the changes of orthography, as well as into the most interesting question as to the original texts from which our translation is produced."

From the London Quarterly Review.

"The work is worthy in every respect of the editor's fame, and of the Cambridge University Press. The noble English Version, to which our country and religion owe so much, was probably never presented before in so perfect a form."

THE CAMBRIDGE PARAGRAPH BIBLE. STUDENT'S EDITION, on good writing paper, with one column of print and wide margin to each page for MS. notes. This edition will be found of great use to those who are engaged in the task of Biblical criticism. Two Vols. Crown 4to. gilt. 31s. 6d.

THE AUTHORIZED EDITION OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE (1611), ITS SUBSEQUENT REPRINTS AND MODERN REPRESENTATIVES. Being the Introduction to the Cambridge Paragraph Bible (1873), re-edited with corrections and additions. By F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., D.C.L., LL.D., Prebendary of Exeter and Vicar of Hendon. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE LECTIONARY BIBLE, WITH APOCRYPHA, divided into Sections adapted to the Calendar and Tables of Lessons of 1871. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN GREEK according to the text followed in the Authorised Version, with the Variations adopted in the Revised Version. Edited by F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., D.C.L., LL.D. Crown 8vo. 6s. Morocco boards or limp. 12s.

The Revised Version is the Joint Property of the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford.

PREVIARIUM ROMANUM a FRANCISCO CARDINALI QUIGNONIO editum et recognitum iuxta editionem Venetiis A.D. 1535 impressam curante JOHANNE WICKHAM LEGG Societatis Antiquariorum atque Coll. Reg. Medicorum Londin. Socio. Demy 8vo. 12s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

BREVIARIUM AD USUM INSIGNIS ECCLESIAE SARUM. Juxta Editionem maximam pro CLAUDIO CHEVALLON ET FRANCISCO REGNAULT A.D. MDXXXI. in Alma Parisiorum Academia impressam: labore ac studio FRANCISCI PROCTER, A.M., ET CHRISTOPHORI WORDSWORTH, A.M.

FASCICULUS I. In quo continentur KALENDARIVM, et ORDO TEMPORALIS sive PROPRIUM DE TEMPORE TOTIUS ANNI, una cum ordinali suo quod usitato vocabulo dicitur PICA SIVE DIRECTORIUM SACERDOTUM. Demy 8vo. 18s.

"The value of this reprint is considerable to liturgical students, who will now be able to consult in their own libraries a work absolutely indispensable to a right understanding of the history of the Prayer-Book, but which till now usually necessitated a visit to some public library, since the rarity of the volume made its cost prohibitory to all but a few."—Literary Churchman.

FASCICULUS II. In quo continentur PSALTERIVM, cum ordinario Officii totius hebdomadae juxta Horas Canonicas, et proprio Completorii, LITANIA, COMMUNE SANCTORUM, ORDINARIUM MISSAE CUM CANONE ET XIII MISSIS, &c. &c. Demy 8vo. 12s.

"Not only experts in liturgy, but all persons interested in the history of the Anglican Book of Common Prayer, will be grateful to the Syndicate of the Cambridge University Press for forwarding the publication of the volume which bears the above title."—Notes and Queries.

"Cambridge has worthily taken the lead with the Breviary, which is of especial value for that part of the reform of the Prayer-Book which will fit it for the wants of our time."—Church Quarterly Review.

FASCICULUS III. In quo continetur PROPRIUM SANCTORUM quod et sanctorale dicitur, una cum accentuario. Demy 8vo. 15s.

. An Introduction of 130 pages, prefixed to this volume, contains (besides other interesting information as to the Breviary and its contents) Mr BRADSHAW'S exhaustive lists of editions and copies of the Breviary and allied liturgical books.

FASCICULI I. II. III. complete, £2. 2s.

GREEK AND ENGLISH TESTAMENT, in parallel Columns on the same page. Edited by J. SCHOLEFIELD, M.A. Small Octavo. New Edition, with the Marginal References as arranged and revised by Dr SCRIVENER. Cloth, red edges. 7s. 6d.

GREEK AND ENGLISH TESTAMENT. THE STUDENT'S EDITION of the above, on large writing paper. 4to. 12s.

GREEK TESTAMENT, ex editione Stephani tertia, 1550. Small 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE PARALLEL NEW TESTAMENT, GREEK AND ENGLISH, being the Authorised Version set forth in 1611 arranged in Parallel Columns with the Revised Version of 1881, and with the original Greek, as edited by F. H. A. SCRIVENER, M.A., D.C.L., LL.D. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d. The Revised Version is the Joint Property of the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford.

THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES, with Notes and Introduction. By the Very Rev. E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D., Dean of Wells. Large Paper Edition. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

London: C. F. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN GREEK ACCORDING TO THE SEPTUAGINT. Edited by H. B. SWETE, D.D., Honorary Fellow of Gonville and Caius College. Vol. I. Genesis—IV Kings. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Volume II. By the same Editor.

[In the Press.

"Der Zweck dieser Ausgabe, den ganzen in den erwähnten Hss. vorliegenden kritischen Stoff übersichtlich zusammenzustellen und dem Benutzer das Nachschlagen in den Separat-Ausgaben jener Codices zu ersparen, ist hier in compendiosester Weise vortrefflich erreicht. Bezüglich der Klarheit, Schönheit und Correctheit des Drucks gebührt der Ausgabe das höchste Lob. Da zugleich der Preis sehr niedrig gestellt ist, so ist zu hoffen und zu wünschen, dass sie auch außerhalb des englischen Sprachkreises ihre Verbreitung finden werde.

Bezüglich der Accente und Spiritus der Eigennamen sind die Herausg. ihre eigenen Wege gegangen."—Deutsche Literaturzeitung.

"The Edition has been executed in the very best style of Cambridge accuracy, which has no superior anywhere, and this is enough to put it at the head of the list of editions for manual use."—Academy.

"An edition, which for ordinary purposes will probably henceforth be that in use by readers of the Septuagint."—Guardian.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MATTHEW in Anglo-Saxon and Northumbrian Versions, synoptically arranged: with Collations exhibiting all the Readings of all the MSS. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SKEAT, Litt.D., Elrington and Bosworth Professor of Anglo-Saxon. New Edition. Demy 4to. 10s.

"By the publication of the present volume Prof. Skeat has brought to its conclusion a work planned more than a half century ago by the late J. M. Kemble... Students of English have every reason to be grateful to Prof. Skeat for the scholarly and accurate way in which he has performed his laborious task. Thanks to him we now possess a reliable edition of all the existing MSS. of the old English Gospels."—Academy.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MARK, uniform with the preceding, by the same Editor. Demy 4to. 10s.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST LUKE, uniform with the preceding, by the same Editor. Demy 4to. 10s.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN, uniform with the preceding, by the same Editor. Demy 4to. 10s.

"The Gospel according to St John, in Anglo-Saxon and Northumbrian Versions: completes an undertaking designed and commenced by that distinguished scholar, J. M. Kemble, some forty years ago. Of the particular volume now before us, we can only say it is worthy of its two predecessors. We repeat that the service rendered to the study of Anglo-Saxon by this Synoptic collection cannot easily be overstated."—Contemporary Review.

THE FOUR GOSPELS (as above) bound in one volume, price 30s.

THE POINTED PRAYER BOOK, being the Book of Common Prayer with the Psalter or Psalms of David, pointed as they are to be sung or said in Churches. Royal 24mo. 1s. 6d.

The same in square 32mo. cloth. 6d.

THE CAMBRIDGE PSALTER, for the use of Choirs and Organists. Specially adapted for Congregations in which the "Cambridge Pointed Prayer Book" is used. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. cloth limp, cut flush. 2s. 6d.

THE PARAGRAPH PSALTER, arranged for the use of Choirs by BROOKE FOSS WESTCOTT, D.D., Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Fcap. 4to. 5s.

The same in royal 32mo. Cloth 1s. Leather 1s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE MISSING FRAGMENT OF THE LATIN TRANSLATION OF THE FOURTH BOOK OF EZRA, discovered, and edited with an Introduction and Notes, and a facsimile of the MS., by ROBERT L. BENSLEY, M.A., Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic. Demy 4to. 10s.

"It has been said of this book that it has added a new chapter to the Bible, and, startling as the statement may at first sight appear, it is no exaggeration of the actual fact, if by the Bible we understand that of the larger size which contains the Apocrypha, and if the Second Book of Esdras can be fairly called a part of the Apocrypha."—Saturday Review.

THE ORIGIN OF THE LEICESTER CODEX OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. By J. RENDEL HARRIS, M.A. With 3 plates. Demy 4to. 10s. 6d.

CODEx S. CEADDAE LATINUS. Evangelia SSS. Matthaei, Marci, Lucae ad cap. III. 9 complectens, circa septimum vel octavum saeculum scriptus, in Ecclesia Cathedrali Lichfieldiensi servatus. Cum codice versionis Vulgatae Amiatino contulit, prolegomena conscripsit, F. H. A. SCRIVENER, A.M., D.C.L., LL.D., With 3 plates. £1. 1s.

THEOLOGY—(ANCIENT).

THE GREEK LITURGIES. Chiefly from original Authorities. By C. A. SWAINSON, D.D., late Master of Christ's College, Cambridge. Crown 4to. Paper covers. 15s.

"Jeder folgende Forscher wird dankbar anerkennen, dass Swainson das Fundament zu einer historisch-kritischen Geschichte der Griechischen Liturgien sicher gelegt hat."—ADOLPH HARNACK, Theologische Literaturzeitung.

THEODORE OF MOPSUESTIA'S COMMENTARY ON THE MINOR EPISTLES OF S. PAUL. The Latin Version with the Greek Fragments, edited from the MSS. with Notes and an Introduction, by H. B. SWETE, D.D. In Two Volumes. Volume I., containing the Introduction, with Facsimiles of the MSS., and the Commentary upon Galatians—Colossians. Demy 8vo. 12s.

"It is the result of thorough, careful, and patient investigation of all the points bearing on the subject, and the results are presented with admirable good sense and modesty."—Guardian.

"In dem oben verzeichneten Buche liegt uns die erste Hälfte einer vollständigen, ebenso sorgfältig gearbeiteten wie schön ausgestatteten Ausgabe des Commentars mit ausführlichen Prolegomena und reichhaltigen kritischen und erläuternden Anmerkungen vor."—Literarisches Centralblatt.

"Auf Grund dieser Quellen ist der Text bei Swete mit musterhafter Akribie hergestellt. Aber auch sonst hat der Herausgeber mit unermüdlichem Fleisse und eingehendster Sachkenntniss sein Werk mit allen denjenigen Zugaben ausgerüstet, welche bei einer solchen Text-Ausgabe nur irgend erwartet werden können. . . . Von den drei Haupt-handschriften . . . sind vortreffliche photographische Facsimile beigegeben, wie überhaupt das ganze Werk von der University Press zu Cambridge mit bekannter Eleganz ausgestattet ist."—Theologische Literaturzeitung.

"Herrn Swete's Leistung ist eine so tüchtige dass wir das Werk in keinen besseren Händen wissen möchten, und mit den sichersten Erwartungen auf das Gelingen der Fortsetzung entgegen sehen."—Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen (Sept. 1881)

VOLUME II., containing the Commentary on 1 Thessalonians—Philemon, Appendices and Indices. 12s.

"Eine Ausgabe . . . für welche alle zugänglichen Hilfsmittel in musterhafter Weise benützt wurden . . . eine reife Frucht nebenjähri-gen Fleisses."—Theologische Literaturzeitung

(Sept. 23, 1882)

"Mit derselben Sorgfalt bearbeitet die wir bei dem ersten Theile gerühmt haben."—Literarisches Centralblatt (July 29, 1882)

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

SAYINGS OF THE JEWISH FATHERS, comprising Pirke Aboth and Pereq R. Meir in Hebrew and English, with Critical and Illustrative Notes. By CHARLES TAYLOR, D.D., Master of St John's College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 10s.

"The 'Masseketh Aboth' stands at the head of Hebrew non-canonical writings. It is of ancient date, claiming to contain the dicta of teachers who flourished from B.C. 200 to the same year of our era. Mr Taylor's explanatory and illustrative commentary is very full and satisfactory."—Spectator.

"A careful and thorough edition which does credit to English scholarship, of a short treatise from the Mishna, containing a series of sentences or maxims ascribed mostly to Jewish teachers immediately preceding, or immediately following the Christian era. . . ."—Contemporary Review.

A COLLATION OF THE ATHOS CODEX OF THE SHEPHERD OF HERMAS. Together with an Introduction by SPYR. P. LAMBROS, PH. D., translated and edited with a Preface and Appendices by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, M.A., Fellow and Dean of Christ's College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE PALESTINIAN MISHNA. By W. H. LOWE, M.A., Lecturer in Hebrew at Christ's College, Cambridge. Royal 8vo. 21s.

SANCTI IRENÆI EPISCOPI LUGDUNENSIS libros quinque adversus Hæreses, versione Latina cum Codicibus Claromontano ac Arundeliano denuo collata, præmissa de placitis Gnosticorum prolusione, fragmenta necnon Græce, Syriace, Armeniace, commentatione perpetua et indicibus variis edidit W. WIGAN HARVEY, S.T.B. Collegii Regalis olim Socius. 2 Vols. 8vo. 18s.

M. MINUCII FELICIS OCTAVIUS. The text revised from the original MS., with an English Commentary, Analysis, Introduction, and Copious Indices. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. Examiner in Greek to the University of London. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THEOPHILI EPISCOPI ANTIOCHENSIS LIBRI TRES AD AUTOLYCEUM edidit, Prolegomenis Versione Notulis Indicibus instruxit G. G. HUMPHRY, S.T.B. Post 8vo. 5s.

THEOPHYLACTI IN EVANGELIUM S. MATTHÆI COMMENTARIUS, edited by W. G. HUMPHRY, B.D. Prebendary of St Paul's, late Fellow of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

TERTULLIANUS DE CORONA MILITIS, DE SPECTACULIS, DE IDOLOLATRIA, with Analysis and English Notes, by GEORGE CURREY, D.D. Preacher at the Charter House, late Fellow and Tutor of St John's College. Crown 8vo. 5s.

FRAGMENTS OF PHILO AND JOSEPHUS. Newly edited by J. RENDEL HARRIS, M.A., Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge. With two Facsimiles. Demy 4to. 12s. 6d.

THE TEACHING OF THE APOSTLES. Newly edited, with Facsimile Text and Commentary, by J. RENDEL HARRIS, M.A. Demy 4to. £1. 1s.

THEOLOGY—(ENGLISH).

WORKS OF ISAAC BARROW, compared with the Original MSS., enlarged with Materials hitherto unpublished. A new Edition, by A. NAPIER, M.A. 9 Vols. Demy 8vo. £3. 3s.

TREATISE OF THE POPE'S SUPREMACY, and a Discourse concerning the Unity of the Church, by ISAAC BARROW. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

PEARSON'S EXPOSITION OF THE CREED, edited by TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, B.D. New Edition. Revised by R. SINKER, B.D., Librarian of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 12s.

"A new edition of Bishop Pearson's famous work On the Creed has just been issued by the Cambridge University Press. It is the well-known edition of Temple Chevallier, thoroughly overhauled by the Rev. R. Sinker, of Trinity College. Altogether this appears to be the most complete and convenient edition as yet published of a work which has long been recognised in all quarters as a standard one."—Guardian.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE EXPOSITION OF THE CREED written by the Right Rev. JOHN PEARSON, D.D. late Lord Bishop of Chester, by W. H. MILL, D.D. Demy 8vo. 5s.

WHEATLY ON THE COMMON PRAYER, edited by G. E. CORRIE, D.D. late Master of Jesus College. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

TWO FORMS OF PRAYER OF THE TIME OF QUEEN ELIZABETH. Now First Reprinted. Demy 8vo. 6d.

CÆSAR MORGAN'S INVESTIGATION OF THE TRINITY OF PLATO, and of Philo Judæus, and of the effects which an attachment to their writings had upon the principles and reasonings of the Fathers of the Christian Church. Revised by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 4s.

SELECT DISCOURSES, by JOHN SMITH, late Fellow of Queens' College, Cambridge. Edited by H. G. WILLIAMS, B.D. late Professor of Arabic. Royal 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"The 'Select Discourses' of John Smith, collected and published from his papers after his death, are, in my opinion, much the most considerable work left to us by this Cambridge School (the Cambridge Platonists). They have a right to a place in English literary history."—MR. MATTHEW ARNOLD, in the Contemporary Review.

"Of all the products of the Cambridge School, the 'Select Discourses' are perhaps the highest, as they are the most accessible and the most widely appreciated...and indeed no spiritually thoughtful mind can read them unmoved. They carry us so directly into an atmosphere of divine philosophy, luminous with the richest lights of meditative genius... He was one of those rare thinkers in whom largeness of view, and depth, and wealth of poetic and speculative insight, only served to evoke more fully the religious spirit, and while he drew the mould of his thought from Plotinus, he vivified the substance of it from St Paul."—Principal TULLOCH, Rational Theology in England in the 17th Century.

THE HOMILIES, with Various Readings, and the Quotations from the Fathers given at length in the Original Languages. Edited by the late G. E. CORRIE, D.D. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

DE OBLIGATIONE CONSCIENTIÆ PRÆLECTIONES decem Oxonii in Schola Theologica habitæ a ROBERTO SANDERSON, SS. Theologiæ ibidem Professore Regio. With English Notes, including an abridged Translation, by W. WHEWELL, D.D. late Master of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

ARCHBISHOP USHER'S ANSWER TO A JESUIT, with other Tracts on Popery. Edited by J. SCHOLEFIELD, M.A. late Regius Professor of Greek in the University. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

WILSON'S ILLUSTRATION OF THE METHOD OF explaining the New Testament, by the early opinions of Jews and Christians concerning Christ. Edited by T. TURTON, D.D. 8vo. 5s.

LECTURES ON DIVINITY delivered in the University of Cambridge, by JOHN HEY, D.D. Third Edition, revised by T. TURTON, D.D. late Lord Bishop of Ely. 2 vols. Demy 8vo. 15s.

S. AUSTIN AND HIS PLACE IN THE HISTORY OF CHRISTIAN THOUGHT. Being the Hulsean Lectures for 1885. By W. CUNNINGHAM, D.D. Demy 8vo. Buckram, 12s. 6d.

ARABIC, SANSKRIT, SYRIAC, &c.

THE DIVYĀVADĀNA, a Collection of Early Buddhist Legends, now first edited from the Nepalese Sanskrit MSS. in Cambridge and Paris. By E. B. COWELL, M.A., Professor of Sanskrit in the University of Cambridge, and R. A. NEIL, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Pembroke College. Demy 8vo. 18s.

POEMS OF BEHĀ ED DĪN ZOHEIR OF EGYPT. With a Metrical Translation, Notes and Introduction, by E. H. PALMER, M.A., Barrister-at-Law of the Middle Temple, late Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic, formerly Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge. 2 vols. Crown 4to.

Vol. I. The ARABIC TEXT. 10s. 6d.

Vol. II. ENGLISH TRANSLATION. 10s. 6d.

"We have no hesitation in saying that in both Prof. Palmer has made an addition to Oriental literature for which scholars should be grateful: and that, while his knowledge of Arabic is a sufficient guarantee for his mastery of the original, his English compositions are distinguished by versatility, command of language, rhythmical cadence, and, as we have remarked, by not unskilful imitations of the styles of several of our own favourite poets, living and dead."—Saturday Review.

"This sumptuous edition of the poems of Behā-ed-dīn Zoheir is a very welcome addition to the small series of Eastern poets accessible to readers who are not Orientalists."—Academy.

THE CHRONICLE OF JOSHUA THE STYLITE, composed in Syriac A.D. 507, with an English translation and notes, by the late W. WRIGHT, LL.D., Professor of Arabic. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Die lehrreiche kleine Chronik Josuas hat nach Assemani und Martin in Wright einen dritten Bearbeiter gefunden, der sich um die Emendation des Textes wie um die Erklärung der Realien wesentlich verdient gemacht hat. ... Ws. Josua-Ausgabe ist eine sehr dankenswerte Gabe und besonders empfehlenswert als ein Lehrmittel für den syrischen Unterricht: es erscheint auch gerade zur rechten Zeit, da die zweite Ausgabe von Roedigers syrischer Christomathie im Buchhandel vollständig vergriffen und diejenige von Kirsch-Bernstein nur noch in wenigen Exemplaren vorhanden ist."—Deutsche Literaturzeitung.

KALILAH AND DIMNAH, OR, THE FABLES OF BIDPAI; being an account of their literary history, together with an English Translation of the same, with Notes, by I. G. N. KEITH-FALCONER, M.A., late Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

NALOPĀKHYĀNAM, OR, THE TALE OF NALA; containing the Sanskrit Text in Roman Characters, followed by a Vocabulary and a sketch of Sanskrit Grammar. By the late Rev. THOMAS JARRETT, M.A. Trinity College, Regius Professor of Hebrew. Demy 8vo. 10s.

NOTES ON THE TALE OF NALA, for the use of Classical Students, by J. PEILE, Litt. D., Master of Christ's College. Demy 8vo. 12s.

CATALOGUE OF THE BUDDHIST SANSKRIT MANUSCRIPTS in the University Library, Cambridge. Edited by C. BENDALL, M.A., Fellow of Gonville and Caius College. Demy 8vo. 12s.

"It is unnecessary to state how the compilation of the present catalogue came to be placed in Mr Bendall's hands: from the character of his work it is evident the selection was judicious, and we may fairly congratulate those concerned in it on the result. . . Mr Bendall has entitled himself to the thanks of all Oriental scholars, and we hope he may have before him a long course of successful labour in the field he has chosen."—Athenaeum.

THE HISTORY OF ALEXANDER THE GREAT, being the Syriac version of the Pseudo-Callisthenes. Edited from Five Manuscripts, with an English Translation and Notes, by E. A. W. BUDGE, M.A., Christ's College. [Nearly ready.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

GREEK AND LATIN CLASSICS, &c.

SOPHOCLES: The Plays and Fragments, with Critical Notes, Commentary, and Translation in English Prose, by R. C. JEBB, Litt.D., LL.D., Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge.

Part I. Oedipus Tyrannus. Demy 8vo. New Edition. 12s. 6d.

Part II. Oedipus Coloneus. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

[New Edition. In the Press.]

Part III. Antigone. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

Part IV. Philoctetes.

[In the Press.]

"Of his explanatory and critical notes we can only speak with admiration. Thorough scholarship combines with taste, erudition, and boundless industry to make this first volume a pattern of editing. The work is made complete by a prose translation, upon pages alternating with the text, of which we may say shortly that it displays sound judgment and taste, without sacrificing precision to poetry of expression."—The Times.

"Professor Jebb's edition of Sophocles is already so fully established, and has received such appreciation in these columns and elsewhere, that we have judged this third volume when we have said that it is of a piece with the others. The whole edition so far exhibits perhaps the most complete and elaborate editorial work which has ever appeared."—Saturday Review.

"Prof. Jebb's keen and profound sympathy, not only with Sophocles and all the best of ancient Hellenic life and thought, but also with modern European culture, constitutes him an ideal interpreter between the ancient writer and the modern reader."—Athenaeum.

"It would be difficult to praise this third instalment of Professor Jebb's unequalled edition of Sophocles too warmly, and it is almost a work of supererogation to praise it at all. It is equal, at least, and perhaps superior, in merit, to either of his previous instalments: and when this is said, all is said. Yet we cannot refrain from formally recognising once more the consummate Greek scholarship of the editor, and from once more doing grateful homage to his masterly tact and literary skill, and to his unwearied and marvellous industry."—Spectator.

AESCHYLI FABULAE.—ΙΚΕΤΙΔΕΣ ΧΟΗΦΟΡΟΙ IN LIBRO MEDICEO MENDOSE SCRIPTAE EX VV. DD. CONIECTURIS EMENDATIUS EDITAE cum Scholiis Graecis et brevi adnotatione critica, curante F. A. PALEY, M.A., LL.D. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE AGAMEMNON OF AESCHYLUS. With a Translation in English Rhythm, and Notes Critical and Explanatory. New Edition Revised. By the late BENJAMIN HALL KENNEDY, D.D., Regius Professor of Greek. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the best editions of the masterpiece of Greek tragedy."—Athenaeum.

THE THEÆTETUS OF PLATO with a Translation and Notes by the same Editor. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

ARISTOTLE.—ΠΕΡΙ ΨΥΧΗΣ. ARISTOTLE'S PSYCHOLOGY, in Greek and English, with Introduction and Notes, by EDWIN WALLACE, M.A., late Fellow and Tutor of Worcester College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. 18s.

"The notes are exactly what such notes ought to be,—helps to the student, not mere displays of learning. By far the more valuable parts of the notes are neither critical nor literary, but philosophical and expository of the thought, and of the connection of thought, in the treatise itself. In this relation the notes are invaluable. Of the translation, it may be said that an English reader may fairly master by means of it this great treatise of Aristotle."—Spectator.

"Wallace's Bearbeitung der Aristotelischen Psychologie ist das Werk eines denkenden und in allen Schriften des Aristoteles und grösstentheils auch in der neueren Literatur zu denselben lesenden Mannes. Der schwächste Teil der Arbeit ist der kritische. Aber in allen diesen Dingen liegt auch nach der Absicht des Verfassers nicht der Schwerpunkt seiner Arbeit, sondern."—Prof. Susemihl in Philologische Wochenschrift.

ARISTOTLE.—ΠΕΡΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΟΣΤΗΝΗΣ. THE FIFTH BOOK OF THE NICOMACHEAN ETHICS OF ARISTOTLE. Edited by HENRY JACKSON, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 6s.

"It is not too much to say that some of the points he discusses have never had so much light thrown upon them before. . . . Scholars will hope that this is not the only portion of the Aristotelian writings which he is likely to edit."—Athenaeum

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

ARISTOTLE. THE RHETORIC. With a Commentary by the late E. M. COPE, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, revised and edited by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. With a biographical Memoir by the late H. A. J. MUNRO, Litt.D. 3 Vols., Demy 8vo. Now reduced to 21s. (originally published at 31s. 6d.)

"This work is in many ways creditable to the University of Cambridge. If an English student wishes to have a full conception of what is contained in the Rhetoric of Aristotle, to Mr Cope's edition he must go"—Academy.

"Mr Sandys has performed his arduous duties with marked ability and admirable tact. . . . In every part of his work—revising, supplementing, and completing—he has done exceedingly well."—Examiner.

PINDAR. OLYMPIAN AND PYTHIAN ODES. With Notes Explanatory and Critical, Introductions and Introductory Essays. Edited by C. A. M. FENNELL, Litt.D., late Fellow of Jesus College. Crown 8vo. 9s.

"Mr Fennell deserves the thanks of all classical students for his careful and scholarly edition of the Olympian and Pythian odes. He brings to his task the necessary enthusiasm for his author, great industry, a sound judgment, and, in particular, copious and minute learning in comparative philology."—Athenæum.

— THE ISTHMIAN AND NEMEAN ODES. By the same Editor. Crown 8vo. 9s.

"As a handy and instructive edition of a difficult classic no work of recent years surpasses Mr Fennell's 'Pindar.'"—Athenæum.

"This work is in no way inferior to the previous volume. The commentary affords valuable help to the study of the most difficult of Greek authors, and is enriched with notes on points of scholarship and etymology which could only have been written by a scholar of very high attainments."—Saturday Review.

PRIVATE ORATIONS OF DEMOSTHENES, with Introductions and English Notes, by the late F. A. PALEY, M.A. and J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. Fellow and Tutor of St John's College, and Public Orator in the University of Cambridge.

PART I. Contra Phormionem, Lacritum, Pantaenetum, Boeotum de Nomine, Boeotum de Dote, Dionysodorum. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr Paley's scholarship is sound and accurate, his experience of editing wide, and if he is content to devote his learning and abilities to the production of such manuals as these, they will be received with gratitude throughout the higher schools of the country. Mr Sandys is deeply read in the German literature which bears upon his author, and the elucidation of matters of daily life, in the delineation of which Demosthenes is so rich, obtains full justice at his hands. . . . We hope this edition may lead the way to a more general study of these speeches in schools than has hitherto been possible."—Academy.

PART II. Pro Phormione, Contra Stephanum I. II.; Nicostratum, Cononem, Calliclem. New Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"It is long since we have come upon a work evincing more pains, scholarship, and varied research and illustration than Mr Sandys's contribution to the 'Private Orations of Demosthenes'."—Saturday Review.

" . . . the edition reflects credit on Cambridge scholarship, and ought to be extensively used."—Athenæum.

DEMOSTHENES AGAINST ANDROTON AND AGAINST TIMOCRATES, with Introductions and English Commentary, by WILLIAM WAYTE, M.A., late Professor of Greek, University College, London. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"These speeches are highly interesting, as illustrating Attic Law, as that law was influenced by the exigencies of politics. . . . As vigorous examples of the great orator's style, they are worthy of all admiration. . . . Besides a most lucid and interesting introduction, Mr Wayte has given the student effective help in his running commentary."—Spectator.

PLATO'S PHÆDO, literally translated, by the late E. M. COPE, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, revised by HENRY JACKSON, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 5s.

P. VERGILI MARONIS OPERA, cum Prolegomenis et Commentario Critico edidit B. H. KENNEDY, S.T.P., Extra Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE BACCHAE OF EURIPIDES. With Introduction, Critical Notes, and Archæological Illustrations, by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. New and Enlarged Edition. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

"Of the present edition of the Bacchæ by Mr Sandys we may safely say that never before has a Greek play, in England at least, had fuller justice done to its criticism, interpretation, and archæological illustration, whether for the young student or the more advanced scholar. The Cambridge Public Orator may be said to have taken the lead in issuing a complete edition of a Greek play, which is destined perhaps to gain redoubled favour now that the study of ancient monuments has been applied to its illustration."—Saturday Review.

"The volume is interspersed with well-executed woodcuts, and its general attractiveness of form reflects great credit on the University Press. In the notes Mr Sandys has more than sustained his well-earned reputation as a careful and learned editor, and shows considerable advance in freedom and lightness of style. . . . Under such circumstances it is superfluous to say that for the purposes of teachers and advanced students this handsome edition far surpasses all its predecessors."—Athenæum.

THE TYPES OF GREEK COINS. By PERCY GARDNER, Litt. D., F.S.A. With 16 Autotype plates, containing photographs of Coins of all parts of the Greek World. Impl. 4to. Cloth extra, £1. 11s. 6d.; Roxburgh (Morocco back), £2. 2s.

"Professor Gardner's book is written with such lucidity and in a manner so straightforward that it may well win converts, and it may be distinctly recommended to that omnivorous class of readers—"men in the schools."—Saturday Review.

ESSAYS ON THE ART OF PHEIDIAS. By C. WALDSTEIN, Litt. D., Phil. D., Reader in Classical Archæology in the University of Cambridge. Royal 8vo. With numerous Illustrations. 16 Plates. Buckram, 30s.

"His book will be universally welcomed as a very valuable contribution towards a more thorough knowledge of the style of Pheidias."—The Academy.

"'Essays on the Art of Pheidias' form an extremely valuable and important piece of work. . . . Taking it for the illustrations alone, it is an exceedingly fascinating book."—Times.

AN INTRODUCTION TO GREEK EPIGRAPHY.

Part I. The Archaic Inscriptions and the Greek Alphabet by E. S. ROBERTS, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Gonville and Caius College. Demy 8vo. With illustrations. 18s.

"We will say at once that Mr Roberts appears to have done his work very well. The book is clearly and conveniently arranged. The inscriptions are naturally divided according to the places to which they belong. Under each head are given illustrations sufficient to show the characteristics of the writing, one copy in letters of the original form (sometimes a facsimile) being followed by another in the usual cursive. References, which must have cost great labour, are given to the scattered notices bearing on each document. Explanatory remarks either accompany the text or are added in an appendix. To the whole is prefixed a sketch of the history of the alphabet up to the terminal date. At the end the result is resumed in general tables of all the alphabets, classified according to their connexions; and a separate table illustrates the alphabet of Athens. The volume contains about five hundred inscriptions, and forms a moderate octavo of about four hundred pages."—Saturday Review.

M. TULLI CICERONIS AD M. BRUTUM ORATOR.

A revised text edited with Introductory Essays and with critical and explanatory notes, by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. Demy 8vo. 16s.

"This volume, which is adorned with several good woodcuts, forms a handsome and welcome addition to the Cambridge editions of Cicero's works."—Athenæum.

"A model edition."—Spectator.

"The commentary is in every way worthy of the editor's high reputation."—Academy.

M. TULLI CICERONIS DE FINIBUS BONORUM ET MALORUM LIBRI QUINQUE. The text revised and explained; with a Translation by JAMES S. REID, Litt. D., Fellow and Tutor of Gonville and Caius College. 3 Vols. [In the Press.] VOL. III. Containing the Translation. Demy 8vo. 8s.

M. T. CICERONIS DE OFFICIIS LIBRI TRES. with Marginal Analysis, English Commentary, and copious Indices, by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. Sixth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Cr. 8vo. 9s.

"Few editions of a classic have found so much favour as Dr Holden's De Officiis, and the present revision (sixth edition) makes the position of the work secure."—American Journal of Philology.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

- M. T. CICERONIS DE OFFICIIS LIBER TERTIUS, with Introduction, Analysis and Commentary, by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 2s.
- M. TVLLI CICERONIS PRO C. RABIRIO [PERDVELLIONIS REO] ORATIO AD QVIRITES, with Notes, Introduction and Appendices by W. E. HEITLAND, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of St John's College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.
- M. TULLII CICERONIS DE NATURA DEORUM Libri Tres, with Introduction and Commentary by JOSEPH B. MAYOR, M.A., together with a new collation of several of the English MSS. by J. H. SWAINSON, M.A.
- Vol. I. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. Vol. II. 12s. 6d. Vol. III. 10s.

"Such editions as that of which Prof. Mayor has given us the first instalment will doubtless do much to remedy this undeserved neglect. It is one on which great pains and much learning have evidently been expended, and is in every way admirably suited to meet the needs of the student . . . The notes of the editor are all that could be expected from his well-known learning and scholarship."—Academy.

See also Pitt Press Series, pp. 27—31.

MATHEMATICS, PHYSICAL SCIENCE, &c.

- MATHEMATICAL AND PHYSICAL PAPERS. By Sir W. THOMSON, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of Glasgow. Collected from different Scientific Periodicals from May 1841, to the present time. Vol. I. Demy 8vo. 18s. Vol. II. 15s. [Volume III. In the Press.]
- MATHEMATICAL AND PHYSICAL PAPERS, by G. G. STOKES, Sc.D., LL.D., F.R.S., Lucasian Professor of Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. Reprinted from the Original Journals and Transactions, with Additional Notes by the Author. Vol. I. Demy 8vo. 15s. Vol. II. 15s. [Vol. III. In the Press.]
- A HISTORY OF THE THEORY OF ELASTICITY AND OF THE STRENGTH OF MATERIALS, from Galilei to the present time. VOL. I. Galilei to Saint-Venant, 1639–1850. By the late I. TODHUNTER, Sc.D., F.R.S., edited and completed by Professor KARL PEARSON, M.A. Demy 8vo. 25s. Vol. II. By the same Editor. [In the Press.]
- THE ELASTICAL RESEARCHES OF BARRÉ DE SAINT-VENANT (Extract from Vol. II. of TODHUNTER'S History of the Theory of Elasticity), edited by Professor KARL PEARSON, M.A. Demy 8vo. 9s.
- A TREATISE ON GEOMETRICAL OPTICS. By R. S. HEATH, M.A., Professor of Mathematics in Mason Science College, Birmingham. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.
- AN ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON GEOMETRICAL OPTICS. By R. S. HEATH, M.A. Crown 8vo. 5s.
- A TREATISE ON DYNAMICS. By S. L. LONEY, M.A., Fellow of Sidney Sussex College. Crown 8vo. [Nearly ready.]

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

CATALOGUE OF SCIENTIFIC PAPERS COMPILED BY THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF LONDON: Vols. 1—6 for the years 1800—1863, Royal 4to cloth (vol. 1 in half morocco) £4 (net); half morocco £5. 5s. (net). Vols. 7—8 for the years 1864—1873, cloth £1. 11s. 6d. (net); half morocco £2. 5s. (net). Single volumes cloth 20s. or half-morocco 28s. (net). New Series for the years 1874—1883 in preparation.

THE COLLECTED MATHEMATICAL PAPERS OF ARTHUR CAYLEY, Sc.D., F.R.S., Sadlerian Professor of Pure
 Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. Demy 4to. 10 vols.
 Volume I. 25s. [In the Press.]

THE SCIENTIFIC PAPERS OF THE LATE PROF.
 J. CLERK MAXWELL. Edited by W. D. NIVEN, M.A. In 2 vols.
 Royal 4to. [Nearly ready.]

A HISTORY OF THE STUDY OF MATHEMATICS
 AT CAMBRIDGE. By W. W. ROUSE BALL, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer on Mathematics of Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

A CATALOGUE OF THE PORTSMOUTH COL-LECTION OF BOOKS AND PAPERS written by or belonging to SIR ISAAC NEWTON. Demy 8vo. 5s.

A TREATISE ON NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. By Sir W. THOMSON, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., and P. G. TAIT, M.A.
Part I. Demy 8vo. 16s. Part II. Demy 8vo. 18s.

ELEMENTS OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. By Professors Sir W. THOMSON and P. G. TAIT. Demy 8vo. 9s.

AN ATTEMPT TO TEST THE THEORIES OF CAPILLARY ACTION, by FRANCIS BASHFORTH, B.D., and J. C. ADAMS, M.A., F.R.S. Demy 4to. £1. 1s.

A TREATISE ON THE THEORY OF DETERMI-NANTS and their applications in Analysis and Geometry, by R. F.
 SCOTT, M.A., Fellow of St John's College. Demy 8vo. 12s.

HYDRODYNAMICS, a Treatise on the Mathematical Theory of the Motion of Fluids, by H. LAMB, M.A. Demy 8vo. 12s.

THE ANALYTICAL THEORY OF HEAT, by JOSEPH FOURIER. Translated, with Notes, by A. FREEMAN, M.A., formerly Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 12s.

PRACTICAL WORK AT THE CAVENDISH LABORA-TORY. HEAT. Edited by W. N. SHAW, M.A. Demy 8vo. 3s.

THE ELECTRICAL RESEARCHES OF THE Hon. H.
 CAVENDISH, F.R.S. Written between 1771 and 1781. Edited from the original MSS. in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire, K. G., by the late J. CLERK MAXWELL, F.R.S. Demy 8vo. 18s.

AN ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON QUATERNIONS.By P. G. TAIT, M.A. Demy 8vo. 14s. [New Edition. In the Press.]COUNTERPOINT. A Practical Course of Study, by the late Professor Sir G. A. MACFARREN, M.A., Mus. Doc. New Edition, revised. Crown 4to. 7s. 6d.

A TREATISE ON THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF CHEMISTRY, by M. M. PATTISON MUIR, M.A. Second Edition.

Demy 8vo. 15s.

"The value of the book as a digest of the historical developments of chemical thought is immense."—Academy.

"Theoretical Chemistry has moved so rapidly of late years that most of our ordinary text books have been left far behind. German students, to be sure, possess an excellent guide to the present state of the science in 'Die Modernen Theorien der Chemie' of Prof.

Lothar Meyer; but in this country the student has had to content himself with such works as Dr Tilden's 'Introduction to Chemical Philosophy', an admirable book in its way, but rather slender. Mr Pattison Muir having aimed at a more comprehensive scheme, has produced a systematic treatise on the principles of chemical philosophy which stands far in advance of any kindred work in our language."—Athenæum.

ELEMENTARY CHEMISTRY. By M. M. PATTISON

MUIR, M.A., and CHARLES SLATER, M.A., M.B. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PRACTICAL CHEMISTRY. A Course of Laboratory

Work. By M. M. PATTISON MUIR, M.A., and D. J. CARNEGIE, B.A. Crown 8vo. 3s.

NOTES ON QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS. Concise andExplanatory. By H. J. H. FENTON, M.A., F.I.C., Demonstrator of Chemistry in the University of Cambridge. Cr. 4to. New Edition. 6s.LECTURES ON THE PHYSIOLOGY OF PLANTS, by S. H. VINES, Sc.D., Professor of Botany in the University of Oxford. Demy 8vo. With Illustrations. 21s.

"To say that Dr Vines' book is a most valuable addition to our own botanical literature is but a narrow need of praise: it is a work which will take its place as cosmopolitan; no more clear or concise discussion of the difficult chemistry of metabolism has appeared....

In erudition it stands alone among English books, and will compare favourably with any foreign competitors."—Nature.

"The work forms an important contribution to the literature of the subject....It will be eagerly welcomed by all students."—Academy.

A SHORT HISTORY OF GREEK MATHEMATICS.

By J. GOW, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

DIOPHANTOS OF ALEXANDRIA; a Study in the History of Greek Algebra. By T. L. HEATH, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"This study in the history of Greek Algebra is an exceedingly valuable contribution to the history of mathematics."—Academy.

"The most thorough account extant of Diophantus' place, work, and critics."—Athenæum.

THE MATHEMATICAL WORKS OF ISAAC BAR-

ROW, D.D. Edited by W. WHEWELL, D.D. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE FOSSILS AND PALÆONTOLOGICAL AFFIN-

ITIES OF THE NEOCOMIAN DEPOSITS OF UPWARE AND BRICKHILL with Plates, being the Sedgwick Prize Essay for 1879. By the late W. KEEPING, M.A. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

A CATALOGUE OF BOOKS AND PAPERS ON PROTOZOA, CÉLENTERATES, WORMS, and certain smaller groups of animals, published during the years 1861—1883, by D'ARCY W. THOMPSON, M.A. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS made at the Observatory of Cambridge by the late Rev. J. CHALLIS, M.A. from 1846 to 1860.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS from 1861 to 1865. Vol. XXI. Royal 4to. 15s. From 1866 to 1869. Vol. XXII. Royal 4to. [Nearly ready.]

A CATALOGUE OF THE COLLECTION OF BIRDS formed by the late H. E. STRICKLAND, now in the possession of the University of Cambridge. By O. SALVIN, M.A. Demy 8vo. £1. 1s.

A CATALOGUE OF AUSTRALIAN FOSSILS, Strati-graphically and Zoologically arranged, by R. ETHERIDGE, Jun., F.G.S. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF COMPARATIVE ANATOMY, VERTEBRATE AND INVERTEBRATE, for the Use of Students in the Museum of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 2s. 6d.

A CATALOGUE OF THE COLLECTION OF CAMBRIAN AND SILURIAN FOSSILS contained in the Geological Museum of the University of Cambridge, by J. W. SALTER, F.G.S. With a Portrait of PROFESSOR SEDGWICK. Royal 4to. 7s. 6d.

CATALOGUE OF OSTEOLOGICAL SPECIMENS contained in the Anatomical Museum of the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LAW.

ELEMENTS OF THE LAW OF TORTS. A Text-book for Students. By MELVILLE M. BIGELOW, Ph.D., Lecturer in the Law School of the University of Boston, U.S.A. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"It is based on the original American edition, but it is an English Text-book with English authorities and statutes and illustrations substituted very generally for the American. . . The style is easy and lucid, though condensed, showing great grasp of subject. . . A very full index enhances the value of this book, which should take a prominent place among the really trustworthy text-books for the use of students."—Law Times.

A SELECTION OF CASES ON THE ENGLISH LAW OF CONTRACT. By GERARD BROWN FINCH, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law. Royal 8vo. 28s.

"An invaluable guide towards the best method of legal study."—Law Quarterly Review.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE ROMAN LAW ON THE LAW OF ENGLAND. Being the Yorke Prize Essay for 1884. By T. E. SCRUTTON, M.A. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Legal work of just the kind that a learned University should promote by its prizes."—Law Quarterly Review.

LAND IN FETTERS. Being the Yorke Prize Essay for 1885. By T. E. SCRUTTON, M.A. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

COMMONS AND COMMON FIELDS, OR THE HISTORY AND POLICY OF THE LAWS RELATING TO COMMONS AND ENCLOSURES IN ENGLAND. Being the Yorke Prize Essay for 1886. By T. E. SCRUTTON, M.A. 10s. 6d.

HISTORY OF THE LAW OF TITHES IN ENGLAND. Being the Yorke Prize Essay for 1887. By W. EASTERBY, B.A., LL.B., St John's College and the Middle Temple. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

HISTORY OF LAND TENURE IN IRELAND. Being the Yorke Prize Essay for 1888. By W. E. MONTGOMERY, M.A., LL.M. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

AN ANALYSIS OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY. By E. C. CLARK, LL.D., Regius Professor of Civil Law in the University of Cambridge, also of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

PRACTICAL JURISPRUDENCE, a Comment on AUSTIN. By E. C. CLARK, LL.D. Crown 8vo. 9s.

"Damit schliesst dieses inhaltreiche und nach allen Seiten anregende Buch über Practical Jurisprudence."—König. Centralblatt für Rechtswissenschaft.

A SELECTION OF THE STATE TRIALS. By J. W. WILLIS-BUND, M.A., LL.B., Professor of Constitutional Law and History, University College, London. Crown 8vo. Vols. I. and II. In 3 parts. Now reduced to 30s. (originally published at 46s.)

"This work is a very useful contribution to that important branch of the constitutional history of England which is concerned with the growth and development of the law of treason, as it may be gathered from trials before the ordinary courts."—The Academy.

THE FRAGMENTS OF THE PERPETUAL EDICT OF SALVIUS JULIANUS, collected, arranged, and annotated by BRYAN WALKER, M.A., LL.D., late Law Lecturer of St John's College, and Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"In the present book we have the fruits of the same kind of thorough and well-ordered study which was brought to bear upon the notes to the Commentaries and the Institutes. . . . Hitherto the Edict has been almost inaccessible to the ordinary English student, and such a student will be interested as well as perhaps surprised to find how abundantly the extant fragments illustrate and clear up points which have attracted his attention in the Commentaries, or the Institutes, or the Digest."—Law Times.

BRACTON'S NOTE BOOK. A Collection of Cases decided in the King's Courts during the reign of Henry the Third, annotated by a Lawyer of that time, seemingly by Henry of Bratton. Edited by F. W. MATTLAND of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law, Downing Professor of the Laws of England. 3 vols. Demy 8vo. Buckram. £3. 3s. Net.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF JUSTINIAN'S DIGEST. Containing an account of its composition and of the Jurists used or referred to therein. By HENRY JOHN ROBY, M.A., formerly Prof. of Jurisprudence, University College, London. Demy 8vo. 9s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

JUSTINIAN'S DIGEST. Lib. VII., Tit. I. De Usufructu, with a Legal and Philological Commentary. By H. J. ROBY, M.A. Demy 8vo. 9s.

Or the Two Parts complete in One Volume. Demy 8vo. 18s.

"Not an obscurity, philological, historical, or legal, has been left unsifted. More informing aid still has been supplied to the student of the Digest at large by a preliminary account, covering nearly 300 pages, of the mode of composition of the Digest, and of the jurists whose decisions and arguments constitute its substance. Nowhere else can a clearer view be obtained of the personal succession by which the tradition of Roman legal science was sustained and developed."—The Times.

THE COMMENTARIES OF GAIUS AND RULES OF ULPIAN. With a Translation and Notes, by J. T. ABDY, LL.D., Judge of County Courts, late Regius Professor of Laws in the University of Cambridge, and the late BRYAN WALKER, M.A., LL.D., New Edition by BRYAN WALKER. Crown 8vo. 16s.

"As scholars and as editors Messrs Abdy and Walker have done their work well . . . For one thing the editors deserve special commendation. They have presented Gaius to the reader with few notes and those merely by way of reference or necessary explanation. Thus the Roman jurist is allowed to speak for himself, and the reader feels that he is really studying Roman law in the original, and not a fanciful representation of it."—Athenæum.

THE INSTITUTES OF JUSTINIAN, translated with Notes by J. T. ABDY, LL.D., and the late BRYAN WALKER, M.A., LL.D. Crown 8vo. 16s.

"We welcome here a valuable contribution to the study of jurisprudence. The text of the Institutes is occasionally perplexing, even to practised scholars, whose knowledge of classical models does not always avail them in dealing with the technicalities of legal phraseology. Nor can the ordinary dictionaries be expected to furnish all the help that is wanted. This translation will then be of great use. To the ordinary student, whose attention is distracted from the subject-matter by the difficulty of struggling through the language in which it is contained, it will be almost indispensable."—Spectator.

"The notes are learned and carefully compiled, and this edition will be found useful to students."—Law Times.

SELECTED TITLES FROM THE DIGEST, annotated by the late B. WALKER, M.A., LL.D. Part I. Mandati vel Contra. Digest XVII. 1. Crown 8vo. 5s.

— Part II. De Adquirendo rerum dominio and De Adquirenda vel amittenda possessione. Digest XLI. 1 and 11. Crown 8vo. 6s.

— Part III. De Conditionibus. Digest XII. 1 and 4—7 and Digest XIII. 1—3. Crown 8vo. 6s.

GROTIUS DE JURE BELLI ET PACIS, with the Notes of Barbeyrac and others; accompanied by an abridged Translation of the Text, by W. WHEWELL, D.D. late Master of Trinity College. 3 Vols. Demy 8vo. 12s. The translation separate, 6s.

HISTORICAL WORKS, &c.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF THE REVEREND ADAM SEDGWICK, LL.D., F.R.S., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Woodwardian Professor of Geology from 1818 to 1873. (Dedicated, by special permission, to Her Majesty the Queen.) By JOHN WILLIS CLARK, M.A., F.S.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, and THOMAS McKENNY HUGHES, M.A., Woodwardian Professor of Geology. 2 vols. Demy 8vo. [In the Press].

THE DESPATCHES OF EARL GOWER, English Ambassador at the court of Versailles from June 1790 to August 1792, to which are added the Despatches of Mr Lindsay and Mr Munro, and the Diary of Lord Palmerston in France during July and August 1791. Edited by OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. Demy 8vo. 15s.

London: C. F. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

LIFE AND TIMES OF STEIN, OR GERMANY AND PRUSSIA IN THE NAPOLEONIC AGE, by J. R. SEELEY, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge, with Portraits and Maps. 3 Vols. Demy 8vo. 30s.

"Dr Buscari's volume has made people think and talk even more than usual of Prince Bismarck, and Professor Seeley's very learned work on Stein will turn attention to an earlier and an almost equally eminent German statesman.... He was one, perhaps the chief, of the illustrious group of strangers who came to the rescue of Prussia in her darkest hour, about the time of the inglorious Peace of Tilsit, and who laboured to put life and order into her dispirited army, her impoverished finances, and her inefficient Civil Service. Englishmen will feel very pardonable pride at seeing one of their countrymen undertake to write the history of a period from the investigation of which even laborious Germans are apt to shrink."—Times.

"In a notice of this kind scant justice can be done to a work like the one before us; no short résumé can give even the most meagre notion of the contents of these volumes, which contain no page that is superfluous, and none that is uninteresting.... To understand the Germany of to-day one must study the Germany of many yesterdays, and now that study has been made easy by this work, to which no one can hesitate to assign a very high place among those recent histories which have aimed at original research."—Athenæum.

THE GROWTH OF ENGLISH INDUSTRY AND COMMERCE. By W. CUNNINGHAM, D.D. With Maps and Charts. Crown 8vo. 12s.

"Mr Cunningham is not likely to disappoint any readers except such as begin by mistaking the character of his book. He does not promise, and does not give, an account of the dimensions to which English industry and commerce have grown. It is with the process of growth that he is concerned; and this process he traces with the philosophical insight which distinguishes between what is important and what is trivial."—Guardian.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLES OF GREEK HISTORY.

Accompanied by a short narrative of events, with references to the sources of information and extracts from the ancient authorities, by CARL PETER. Translated from the German by G. CHAWNER, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Demy 4to. 10s.

KINSHIP AND MARRIAGE IN EARLY ARABIA, by W. ROBERTSON SMITH, M.A., LL.D., Professor of Arabic and Fellow of Christ's College. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"It would be superfluous to praise a book so learned and masterly as Professor Robertson Smith's; it is enough to say that no student of early history can afford to be without Kinship in Early Arabia."—Nature.

TRAVELS IN NORTHERN ARABIA IN 1876 AND 1877. BY CHARLES M. DOUGHTY, of Gonville and Caius College. With Illustrations and a Map. 2 vols. Demy 8vo. £3. 3s.

"This is in several respects a remarkable book. It records the ten years' travels of the author throughout Northern Arabia, in the Hejaz and Nejd, from Syria to Mecca. No doubt this region has been visited by previous travellers, but none, we venture to think, have done their work with so much thoroughness or with more enthusiasm and love."—Times.

"We judge this book to be the most remarkable record of adventure and research which has been published to this generation."—Spectator.

"Its value as a storehouse of knowledge simply cannot be exaggerated."—Saturday Review.

THE ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE AND OF THE COLLEGES OF CAMBRIDGE AND ETON, by the late ROBERT WILLIS, M.A. F.R.S., Jacksonian Professor in the University of Cambridge. Edited with large Additions and brought up to the present time by JOHN WILLIS CLARK, M.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Four Vols. Super Royal 8vo. £6. 6s.

Also a limited Edition of the same, consisting of 120 numbered Copies only, large paper Quarto; the woodcuts and steel engravings mounted on India paper; price Twenty-five Guineas net each set.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE ROYAL INJUNCTIONS OF 1535, by J. B. MULLINGER, M.A., Lecturer on History and Librarian to St John's College. Part I. Demy 8vo. (734 pp.), 12s.

Part II. From the Royal Injunctions of 1535 to the Accession of Charles the First. Demy 8vo. 18s.

"He shews in the statutes of the Colleges, the internal organization of the University, its connection with national problems, its studies, its social life. All this he combines in a form which is eminently readable."—PROF. CREIGHTON in Cont. Review.

"Mr Mullinger displays an admirable thoroughness in his work. Nothing could be more exhaustive and conscientious than his method; and his style...is picturesque and elevated."—Times.

SCHOLAE ACADEMICAE: some Account of the Studies at the English Universities in the Eighteenth Century. By C. WORDSWORTH, M.A., Fellow of Peterhouse. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Mr Wordsworth has collected a great quantity of minute and curious information about the working of Cambridge institutions in the last century, with an occasional comparison of the corresponding state of things at Oxford.

... To a great extent it is purely a book of reference, and as such it will be of permanent value for the historical knowledge of English education and learning."—Saturday Review.

HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE OF ST JOHN THE EVANGELIST, by THOMAS BAKER, B.D., Ejected Fellow. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A. Two Vols. Demy 8vo. 24s.

HISTORY OF NEPĀL, translated by MUNSHĪ SHEW SHUNKER SINGH and PANDIT SHRĪ GUNĀNAND; edited with an Introductory Sketch of the Country and People by Dr D. WRIGHT, late Residency Surgeon at Kāthmāndū, and with facsimiles of native drawings, and portraits of Sir JUNG BAHADUR, the KING OF NEPĀL, &c. Super-royal 8vo. 10s. 6d.

A JOURNEY OF LITERARY AND ARCHÆOLOGICAL RESEARCH IN NEPĀL AND NORTHERN INDIA, during the Winter of 1884-5. By CECIL BENDALL, M.A., Professor of Sanskrit in University College, London. Demy 8vo. 10s.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY. By J. E. C. MUNRO, LL.M., Professor of Law and Political Economy at Victoria University, Manchester. Demy 8vo. 10s.

CAMBRIDGE HISTORICAL ESSAYS.

POLITICAL PARTIES IN ATHENS DURING THE PELOPONNESIAN WAR, by L. WHIBLEY, M.A., Formerly Beatson Scholar of Pembroke College, Cambridge. (Prince Consort Dissertation, 1888.) Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

POPE GREGORY THE GREAT AND HIS RELATIONS WITH GAUL, by F. W. KELLETT, M.A., Sidney Sussex College. (Prince Consort Dissertation, 1888.) Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LITERARY REMAINS OF ALBRECHT DÜRER, by W. M. CONWAY. With Transcripts from the British Museum MSS., and Notes by LINA ECKENSTEIN. Royal 8vo. [Nearly ready].

A LATIN-ENGLISH DICTIONARY. Printed from the (Incomplete) MS. of the late T. H. KEY, M.A., F.R.S. Cr. 4to. 31s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

- THE COLLECTED PAPERS OF HENRY BRADSHAW, including his Memoranda and Communications read before the Cambridge Antiquarian Society. With upwards of Ten fac-similes. Edited by F. J. H. JENKINSON, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. [Nearly ready.]
- THE LATIN HEPTATEUCH. Published piecemeal by the French printer WILLIAM MOREL (1560) and the French Benedictines E. MARTÈNE (1733) and J. B. PITRA (1852-88). Critically reviewed by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Professor of Latin in the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.
- A CATALOGUE OF ANCIENT MARBLES IN GREAT BRITAIN, by Prof. ADOLF MICHAELIS. Translated by C. A. M. FENNELL, Litt. D. Royal 8vo. Roxburgh (Morocco back), £2. 2s. "The book is beautifully executed, and with its few handsome plates, and excellent indexes, does much credit to the Cambridge Press. All lovers of true art and of good work should be grateful to the Syndics of the University Press for the liberal facilities afforded by them towards the production of this important volume by Professor Michaelis."—Saturday Review.
- RHODES IN ANCIENT TIMES. By CECIL TORR, M.A. With six plates. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.
- RHODES IN MODERN TIMES. By the same Author. With three plates. Demy 8vo. 8s.
- THE WOODCUTTERS OF THE NETHERLANDS during the last quarter of the Fifteenth Century. In 3 parts. I. History of the Woodcutters. II. Catalogue of their Woodcuts. III. List of Books containing Woodcuts. By W. M. CONWAY. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.
- THE LITERATURE OF THE FRENCH RENAISSANCE. An Introductory Essay. By A. A. TILLEY, M.A. Cr. 8vo. 6s.
- FROM SHAKESPEARE TO POPE: an Inquiry into the causes and phenomena of the rise of Classical Poetry in England. By EDMUND GOSSE, M.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.
- A GRAMMAR OF THE IRISH LANGUAGE. By Prof. WINDISCH. Translated by Dr NORMAN MOORE. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
- LECTURES ON TEACHING, delivered in the University of Cambridge in the Lent Term, 1880. By J. G. FITCH, M.A., LL.D. Her Majesty's Inspector of Training Colleges. Cr. 8vo. New Edit. 5s. "Mr Fitch's book covers so wide a field and touches on so many burning questions that we must be content to recommend it as the best existing vade mecum for the teacher."—Pall Mall Gazette.
- OCCASIONAL ADDRESSES ON EDUCATIONAL SUBJECTS. By S. S. LAURIE, M.A., LL.D. Crown 8vo. 5s.
- AN ATLAS OF COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY. Intended as a Companion to Dr MILL'S "Elementary Commercial Geography." By J. G. BARTHOLOMEW, F.R.G.S. With an Introduction by Dr H. R. MILL. [Preparing.]
- A MANUAL OF CURSIVE SHORTHAND. By H. L. CALLENDAR, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College. Ex. Fcap. 8vo. 2s.
- A SYSTEM OF PHONETIC SPELLING ADAPTED TO ENGLISH. By H. L. CALLENDAR, M.A. Ex. Fcap. 8vo. 6d.
- A PRIMER OF CURSIVE SHORTHAND. By H. L. CALLENDAR, M.A. Ex. Fcap. 8vo. 6d. [Nearly ready.]
- CHAPTERS ON ENGLISH METRE. By Rev. JOSEPH B. MAYOR, M.A. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

For other books on Education, see Pitt Press Series, p. 35.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE TEXTUAL CRITICISM OF THE DIVINA COMEDIA. Including the complete collation throughout the Inferno of all the MSS. at Oxford and Cambridge. By the Rev. EDWARD MOORE, D.D. Demy 8vo. 21s.

STUDIES IN THE LITERARY RELATIONS OF ENGLAND WITH GERMANY IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY. By C. H. HERFORD, M.A. Crown 8vo. 9s.

ADMISSIONS TO GONVILLE AND CAIUS COLLEGE in the University of Cambridge March 1558—9 to Jan. 1678—9 Edited by J. VENN, Sc.D., and S. C. VENN. Demy 8vo. 10s.

EPISTVLÆ ORTELIANÆ. ABRAHAM ORTELI (Geographi Antverpiensis) et virorum eruditum ad eundem et ad JACOBVM COLIVM ORTELIVM Epistolæ. Cum aliquot aliis epistulis et tractatibus quibusdam ab utroque collectis (1524—1628). Ex autographis mandante Ecclesia Londino-batava edidit JOANNES HENRICVS HESSELS. Demy 4to. £3. 10s. Net.

CATALOGUE OF THE HEBREW MANUSCRIPTS preserved in the University Library, Cambridge. By Dr S. M. SCHILLER-SZINESSY. Volume I. containing Section 1. The Holy Scriptures; Section II. Commentaries on the Bible. Demy 8vo. 9s.

A CATALOGUE OF THE MANUSCRIPTS preserved in the Library of the University of Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 5 Vols. 10s. each. INDEX TO THE CATALOGUE. Demy 8vo. 10s.

A CATALOGUE OF ADVERSARIA and printed books preserved in the Library of the University of Cambridge. 3s. 6d.

THE ILLUMINATED MANUSCRIPTS IN THE LIBRARY of the Fitzwilliam Museum, Catalogued with Descriptions, and an Introduction, by W. G. SEARLE, M.A. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

A CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF THE GRACES, Documents, and other Papers in the University Registry which concern the University Library. Demy 8vo. 2s. 6d.

CATALOGUS BIBLIOTHECÆ BURCKHARDTIANÆ. Demy 4to. 5s.

GRADUATI CANTABRIGIENSES: SIVE CATALOGUS exhibens nomina eorum quos gradu quocunque ornavit Academia Cantabrigiensis (1800—1884). Cura H. R. LUARD S. T. P. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

STATUTES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE and for the Colleges therein, made, published and approved (1878—1882) under the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1877. With an Appendix. Demy 8vo. 16s.

STATUTES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE. With Acts of Parliament relating to the University. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

ORDINANCES OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE. Demy 8vo., cloth. 7s. 6d.

TRUSTS, STATUTES AND DIRECTIONS affecting (1) The Professorships of the University. (2) The Scholarships and Prizes. (3) Other Gifts and Endowments. Demy 8vo. 5s.

COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSITY REGULATIONS. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges.

GENERAL EDITOR: THE VERY REVEREND J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D., DEAN OF PETERBOROUGH.

"It is difficult to commend too highly this excellent series."—Guardian.

"The modesty of the general title of this series has, we believe, led many to misunderstand its character and underrate its value. The books are well suited for study in the upper forms of our best schools, but not the less are they adapted to the wants of all Bible students who are not specialists. We doubt, indeed, whether any of the numerous popular commentaries recently issued in this country will be found more serviceable for general use."—Academy.

"One of the most popular and useful literary enterprises of the nineteenth century."—Baptist Magazine.

"Of great value. The whole series of comments for schools is highly esteemed by students capable of forming a judgment. The books are scholarly without being pretentious; information is so given as to be easily understood."—Sword and Trowel.

The Very Reverend J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D., Dean of Peterborough, has undertaken the general editorial supervision of the work, assisted by a staff of eminent coadjutors. Some of the books have been already edited or undertaken by the following gentlemen:

Rev. A. CARR, M.A., late Assistant Master at Wellington College.

Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D., late Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford.

Rev. S. COX, Nottingham.

Rev. A. B. DAVIDSON, D.D., Professor of Hebrew, Edinburgh.

The Ven. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Archdeacon of Westminster.

Rev. C. D. GINSBURG, LL.D.

Rev. A. E. HUMPHREYS, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Rev. A. F. KIRKPATRICK, B.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Regius Professor of Hebrew.

Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A., late Professor at St David's College, Lampeter.

Rev. J. R. LUMBY, D.D., Norritian Professor of Divinity.

Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D., Warden of St Augustine's College, Canterbury.

Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge.

Rev. E. H. PEROWNE, D.D., Master of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The Ven. T. T. PEROWNE, B.D., Archdeacon of Norwich.

Rev. A. PLUMMER, M.A., D.D., Master of University College, Durham.

The Very Rev. E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D., Dean of Wells.

Rev. H. E. RYLE, M.A., Hulsean Professor of Divinity.

W. ROBERTSON SMITH, M.A., Professor of Arabic and Fellow of Christ's College.

The Very Rev. H. D. M. SPENCE, M.A., Dean of Gloucester.

Rev. A. W. STREANE, M.A., Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE CAMBRIDGE BIBLE FOR SCHOOLS & COLLEGES. Cont.Now Ready. Cloth, Extra Fcap. 8vo.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA. By the Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D.
With 2 Maps. 2s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES. By the Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A.
With Map. 3s. 6d.

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL. By the Rev. Professor KIRKPATRICK, B.D. With Map. 3s. 6d.

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL. By the Rev. Professor KIRKPATRICK, B.D. With 2 Maps. 3s. 6d.

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS. By Rev. Prof. LUMBY, D.D. 3s. 6d.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS. By the same Editor. 3s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF JOB. By the Rev. A. B. DAVIDSON, D.D. 5s.

THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES. By the Very Rev. E. H.
PLUMPTRE, D.D. 5s.

THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH. By the Rev. A. W. STREANE,
M.A. With Map. 4s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF HOSEA. By Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D. 3s.

THE BOOKS OF OBADIAH AND JONAH. By Archdeacon PEROWNE. 2s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF MICAH. By Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, D.D. 1s. 6d.

THE BOOKS OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH. By Archdeacon PEROWNE. 3s.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MATTHEW. By the Rev. A. CARR, M.A. With 2 Maps. 2s. 6d.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MARK. By the Rev.
G. F. MACLEAR, D.D. With 4 Maps. 2s. 6d.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST LUKE. By Archdeacon
F. W. FARRAR. With 4 Maps. 4s. 6d.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN. By the Rev.
A. PLUMMER, M.A., D.D. With 4 Maps. 4s. 6d.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. By the Rev. Professor LUMBY, D.D. With 4 Maps. 4s. 6d.

THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS. By the Rev. H. C. G.
MOULE, M.A. 3s. 6d.

THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS. By the Rev.
J. J. LIAS, M.A. With a Map and Plan. 2s.

THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS. By the Rev. J. J. LIAS, M.A. 2s.

THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS. By the Rev. H. C. G.
MOULE, M.A. 2s. 6d.

THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS. By the Rev. H. C. G.
MOULE, M.A. 2s. 6d.

THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS. By Arch. FARRAR. 3s. 6d.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF ST JAMES. By the Very Rev.
E. H. PLUMPTRE, D.D. 1s. 6d.

THE EPISTLES OF ST PETER AND ST JUDE. By the same Editor. 2s. 6d.

THE EPISTLES OF ST JOHN. By the Rev. A. PLUMMER,
M.A., D.D. 3s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE CAMBRIDGE BIBLE FOR SCHOOLS & COLLEGES. Cont.Preparing.

THE BOOK OF GENESIS. By the Very Rev. the DEAN OF PETERBOROUGH.

THE BOOKS OF EXODUS, NUMBERS AND DEUTERONOMY. By the Rev. C. D. GINSBURG, LL.D.

THE BOOKS OF EZRA AND NEHEMIAH. By the Rev.
Prof. RYLE, M.A.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS. By the Rev. Prof. KIRKPATRICK, B.D.

THE BOOK OF ISAIAH. By W. ROBERTSON SMITH, M.A.

THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL. By the Rev. A. B. DAVIDSON, D.D.

THE EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS. By the Rev. E. H.
PEROWNE, D.D.

THE EPISTLES TO THE COLOSSIANS AND PHILEMON.
By the Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, M.A.

THE EPISTLES TO TIMOTHY AND TITUS. By the Rev.
A. E. HUMPHREYS, M.A.

THE CAMBRIDGE GREEK TESTAMENT

FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES, with a Revised Text, based on the most recent critical authorities, and English Notes, prepared under the direction of the General Editor,

THE VERY REVEREND J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D.

Now Ready.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MATTHEW. By the Rev. A. CARR, M.A. With 4 Maps. 4s. 6d.

"Copious illustrations, gathered from a great variety of sources, make his notes a very valuable aid to the student. They are indeed remarkably interesting, while all explanations on meanings, applications, and the like are distinguished by their lucidity and good sense."—Pall Mall Gazette

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MARK. By the Rev.
G. F. MACLEAR, D.D. With 3 Maps. 4s. 6d.

"The Cambridge Greek Testament, of which Dr Maclear's edition of the Gospel according to St Mark is a volume, certainly supplies a want. Without pretending to compete with the leading commentaries, or to embody very much original research, it forms a most satisfactory introduction to the study of the New Testament in the original. . . . Dr Maclear's introduction contains all that is known of St Mark's life, an account of the circumstances in which the Gospel was composed, an excellent sketch of the special characteristics of this Gospel; an analysis, and a chapter on the text of the New Testament generally. . . . The work is completed by three good maps."—Saturday Review

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST LUKE. By Archdeacon FARRAR. With 4 Maps. 6s.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN. By the Rev. A.
PLUMMER, M.A., D.D. With 4 Maps. 6s.

"A valuable addition has also been made to 'The Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools,' Dr Plummer's notes on 'the Gospel according to St John' are scholarly, concise, and instructive, and embody the results of much thought and wide reading."—Expositor

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. By the Rev. Prof. LUMBY, D.D., with 4 Maps. 6s.

THE FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS. By the Rev. J. I. LIAS, M.A. 3s.

THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS. By the Rev. J. I. LIAS, M.A. [Preparing.]

THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS. By Arch. FARRAR. 3s. 6d.

THE EPISTLES OF ST JOHN. By the Rev. A. PLUMMER,
M.A., D.D. 4s.

London: C. F. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

THE PITT PRESS SERIES.

[Copies of the Pitt Press Series may generally be obtained bound in two parts for Class use, the text and notes in separate volumes.]

I. GREEK.

ARISTOPHANES—AVES. With English Notes and Introduction by W. C. GREEN, M.A., late Assistant Master at Rugby School. New Edition. 3s. 6d.

ARISTOPHANES—PLUTUS. By the same Editor. 3s. 6d.

ARISTOPHANES—RANAE. By the same Editor. 3s. 6d.

EURIPIDES. HERACLEIDÆ. With Introduction and Explanatory Notes by E. A. BECK, M.A., Fellow of Trinity Hall. 3s. 6d.

EURIPIDES. HERCULES FURENS. With Introductions, Notes and Analysis. By A. GRAY, M.A., Fellow of Jesus College, and J. T. HUTCHINSON, M.A., Christ's College. New Edition. 2s.

EURIPIDES. HIPPOLYTUS. By W. S. HADLEY, M.A. Fellow of Pembroke College. 2s.

EURIPIDES. IPHIGENEIA IN AULIS. By C. E. S. HEADLAM, B.A. Fellow of Trinity Hall. [In the Press.]

HERODOTUS, BOOK VI. Edited with Notes, Introduction and Maps by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College. 4s.

HERODOTUS, BOOK VIII., CHAPS. 1—90. By the same Editor. 3s. 6d.

"We could not wish for a better introduction to Herodotus."—Journal of Education.

HERODOTUS, BOOK IX., CHAPS. 1—89. By the same Editor. 3s. 6d.

HOMER—ODYSSEY, BOOK IX. With Introduction, Notes and Appendices. By G. M. EDWARDS, M.A., Fellow and Classical Lecturer of Sidney Sussex College. 2s. 6d.

HOMER—ODYSSEY, BOOK X. By the same Editor. 2s. 6d.

LUCIANI SOMNIUM CHARON PISCATOR ET DE LUCTU, with English Notes by W. E. HEITLAND, M.A., Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge. New Edition, with Appendix. 3s. 6d.

PLATONIS APOLOGIA SOCRATIS. With Introduction, Notes and Appendices by J. ADAM, M.A., Fellow and Classical Lecturer of Emmanuel College. 3s. 6d.

"A worthy representative of English Scholarship."—Classical Review.

— CRITO. With Introduction, Notes and Appendix. By the same Editor. 2s. 6d.

"Mr Adam, already known as the author of a careful and scholarly edition of the Apology of Plato, will, we think, add to his reputation by his work upon the Crito."—Academy.

"A scholarly edition of a dialogue which has never been really well edited in English."—Guardian.

— EUTHYPHRO. By the same Editor. [In the Press.]

PLUTARCH. LIVES OF THE GRACCHI. With Introduction, Notes and Lexicon by Rev. HUBERT A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 6s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

PLUTARCH. LIFE OF NICIAS. With Introduction and Notes. By Rev. HUBERT A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 5s.
 "This edition is as careful and thorough as Dr Holden's work always is."—Spectator.

PLUTARCH. LIFE OF SULLA. With Introduction, Notes, and Lexicon. By the Rev. HUBERT A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 6s.

PLUTARCH. LIFE OF TIMOLEON. With Introduction, Notes and Lexicon. By Rev. HUBERT A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D.
 [Nearly ready.]

SOPHOCLES.—OEDIPUS TYRANNUS. School Edition, with Introduction and Commentary, by R. C. JENN, Litt. D., LL.D., Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. 4s. 6d.

THUCYDIDES. BOOK VII. With Notes and Introduction By H. R. TOTTENHAM, M.A., Fellow of St John's College. [In the Press.]

XENOPHON.—AGESILAUS. The Text revised with Critical and Explanatory Notes, Introduction, Analysis, and Indices. By H. HAILSTONE, M.A., late Scholar of Peterhouse. 2s. 6d.

XENOPHON.—ANABASIS, BOOKS I. III. IV. and V. With a Map and English Notes by ALFRED PRETOR, M.A., Fellow of St Catharine's College, Cambridge. 7s. each.

"Mr Pretor's 'Anabasis of Xenophon, Book IV,' displays a union of accurate Cambridge scholarship, with experience of what is required by learners gained in examining middle-class schools. The text is large and clearly printed, and the notes explain all difficulties. . . . Mr Pretor's notes seem to be all that could be wished as regards grammar, geography, and other matters."—The Academy.

— BOOKS II. VI. and VII. By the same. 2s. 6d. each.
 "Had we to introduce a young Greek scholar to Xenophon, we should esteem ourselves fortunate in having Pretor's text-book as our chart and guide."—Contemporary Review.

XENOPHON.—ANABASIS. By A. PRETOR, M.A., Text and Notes, complete in two Volumes. 7s. 6d.

XENOPHON.—CYROPAEDEIA. BOOKS I. II. With Introduction, Notes and Map. By Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D. 2 vols. Vol. I. Text. Vol. II. Notes. 6s.

"The work is worthy of the editor's well-earned reputation for scholarship and industry."—Athenæum.

— BOOKS III., IV., V. By the same Editor. 5s.

"Dr Holden's Commentary is equally good in history and in scholarship."—Saturday Review.

II. LATIN.

BEDA'S ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, BOOKS III., IV., the Text from the very ancient MS. in the Cambridge University Library, collated with six other MSS. Edited, with a life from the German of EBERT, and with Notes, &c. by J. E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Professor of Latin, and J. R. LUMBY, D.D., Norrisian Professor of Divinity. Revised edition. 7s. 6d.

BOOKS I. and II. In the Press.

"In Bede's works Englishmen can go back to origines of their history, unequalled for form and matter by any modern European nation. Prof. Mayor has done good service in rendering a part of Bede's greatest work accessible to those who can read Latin with ease. He has adorned this edition of the third and fourth books of the 'Ecclesiastical History' with that amazing erudition for which he is unrivalled among Englishmen and rarely equalled by Germans. And however interesting and valuable the text may be, we can certainly apply to his notes the expression, La science vaut mieux que le poisson. They are literally crammed with interesting information about early English life. For though ecclesiastical in name, Bede's history treats of all parts of the national life, since the Church had points of contact with all."—Examiner.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

CAESAR. DE BELLO GALLICO COMMENT. I. With Maps and English Notes by A. G. PESKETT, M.A., Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.

CAESAR. DE BELLO GALLICO COMMENT. II. III. By the same Editor. 2s.

CAESAR. DE BELLO GALLICO COMMENT. I. II. III. by the same Editor. 3s.

CAESAR. DE BELLO GALLICO COMMENT. IV. AND V. and COMMENT. VII. by the same Editor. 2s. each.

CAESAR. DE BELLO GALLICO COMMENT. VI. AND COMMENT. VIII. by the same Editor. 1s. 6d. each.

CICERO. ACTIO PRIMA IN C. VERREM. With Introduction and Notes. By H. COWIE, M.A., Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.

CICERO. DE AMICITIA. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D., Fellow and Tutor of Gonville and Caius College. New Edition, with Additions. 3s. 6d.

"Mr Reid has decidedly attained his aim, namely, 'a thorough examination of the Latinity of the dialogue.' . . . The revision of the text is most valuable, and comprehends sundry acute corrections. . . . This volume, like Mr Reid's other editions, is a solid gain to the scholarship of the country."—Athenaeum.

"A more distinct gain to scholarship is Mr Reid's able and thorough edition of the De Amicitia of Cicero, a work of which, whether we regard the exhaustive introduction or the instructive and most suggestive commentary, it would be difficult to speak too highly. . . . When we come to the commentary, we are only amazed by its fulness in proportion to its bulk. Nothing is overlooked which can tend to enlarge the learner's general knowledge of Ciceronian Latin or to elucidate the text."—Saturday Review.

CICERO. DE SENECTUTE. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D. Revised Edition. 3s. 6d.

"The notes are excellent and scholarlike, adapted for the upper forms of public schools, and likely to be useful even to more advanced students."—Guardian.

CICERO. DIVINATIO IN Q. CAECILIUM ET ACTIO PRIMA IN C. VERREM. With Introduction and Notes by W. E. HEITLAND, M.A., and HERBERT COWIE, M.A., Fellows of St John's College, Cambridge. 3s.

CICERO. PHILIPPICA SECUNDA. With Introduction and Notes by A. G. PESKETT, M.A., Fellow of Magdalene College. 3s. 6d.

CICERO. PRO ARCHIA POETA. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D. Revised Edition. 2s.

"It is an admirable specimen of careful editing. An Introduction tells us everything we could wish to know about Archias, about Cicero's connexion with him, about the merits of the trial, and the genuineness of the speech. The text is well and carefully printed. The notes are clear and scholar-like. . . . No boy can master this little volume without feeling that he has advanced a long step to scholarship."—The Academy.

CICERO. PRO BALBO. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D. 1s. 6d.

"We are bound to recognize the pains devoted in the annotation of these two orations to the minute and thorough study of their Latinity, both in the ordinary notes and in the textual appendices."—Saturday Review.

CICERO. PRO MILONE, with a Translation of Asconius' Introduction, Marginal Analysis and English Notes. Edited by the Rev. JOHN SMYTH PURTON, B.D., late President and Tutor of St Catharine's College. 2s. 6d.

"The editorial work is excellently done."—The Academy.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

CICERO. PRO MURENA. With English Introduction and Notes. By W. E. HEITLAND, M.A., Fellow and Classical Lecturer of St John's College, Cambridge. Second Edition, carefully revised. 3s.

"Those students are to be deemed fortunate who have to read Cicero's lively and brilliant oration for L. Murena with Mr Heitland's handy edition, which may be pronounced 'four-square' in point of equipment, and which has, not without good reason, attained the honours of a second edition."—Saturday Review.

CICERO. PRO PLANCIO. Edited by H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D., Examiner in Greek to the University of London. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.

CICERO. PRO SULLA. Edited by J. S. REID, Litt.D. 3s. 6d.

"Mr Reid is so well known to scholars as a commentator on Cicero that a new work from him scarcely needs any commendation of ours. His edition of the speech Pro Sulla is fully equal in merit to the volumes which he has already published. . . . It would be difficult to speak too highly of the notes. There could be no better way of gaining an insight into the characteristics of Cicero's style and the Latinity of his period than by making a careful study of this speech with the aid of Mr Reid's commentary. . . . Mr Reid's intimate knowledge of the minutest details of scholarship enables him to detect and explain the slightest points of distinction between the usages of different authors and different periods. . . . The notes are followed by a valuable appendix on the text, and another on points of orthography; an excellent index brings the work to a close."—Saturday Review.

CICERO. SOMNIUM SCIPIONIS. With Introduction and Notes. By W. D. PEARMAN, M.A., Head Master of Potsdam School, Jamaica. 2s.

HORACE. EPISTLES, BOOK I. With Notes and Introduction by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College 2s. 6d.

LIVY. BOOK XXI. With Notes, Introduction and Maps. By M. S. DIMSDALE, M.A., Fellow of King's College. 2s. 6d.

LIVY. BOOK XXII. By the same Editor. 2s. 6d.

LUCAN. PHARSALIA LIBER PRIMUS. Edited with English Introduction and Notes by W. E. HEITLAND, M.A. and C. E. HASKINS, M.A., Fellows and Lecturers of St John's College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.

"A careful and scholarlike production."—Times.

"In nice parallels of Lucan from Latin poets and from Shakspeare, Mr Haskins and Mr Heitland deserve praise."—Saturday Review.

LUCRETIUS. BOOK V. With Notes and Introduction by J. D. DUFF, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College. 2s.

OVID. FASTI. LIBER VI. With a Plan of Rome and Notes by A. SIDGWICK, M.A., Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. 1s. 6d.

"Mr Sidgwick's editing of the Sixth Book of Ovid's Fasti furnishes a careful and serviceable volume for average students. It eschews 'construes' which supersede the use of the dictionary, but gives full explanation of grammatical usages and historical and mythical allusions, besides illustrating peculiarities of style, true and false derivations, and the more remarkable variations of the text."—Saturday Review.

QUINTUS CURTIUS. A Portion of the History. (ALEXANDER IN INDIA.) By W. E. HEITLAND, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of St John's College, Cambridge, and T. E. RAVEN, B.A., Assistant Master in Sherborne School. 3s. 6d.

"Equally commendable as a genuine addition to the existing stock of school-books is Alexander in India, a compilation from the eighth and ninth books of Q. Curtius, edited for the Pitt Press by Messrs Heitland and Raven. . . . The work of Curtius has merits of its own, which, in former generations, made it a favourite with English scholars, and which still make it a popular text book in Continental schools. . . . The reputation of Mr Heitland is a sufficient guarantee for the scholarship of the notes, which are ample without being excessive, and the book is well furnished with all that is needful in the nature of maps, indices, and appendices."—Academy.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

VERGIL. AENEID. LIBRI I., II., III., IV., V., VI., VII., VIII., IX., X., XI., XII. Edited with Notes by A. SIDGWICK, M.A., Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. 15. 6d. each.

"Mr Sidgwick's Vergil is.....we believe, the best school edition of the poet."—Guardian.

"Mr Arthur Sidgwick's 'Vergil, Aeneid, Book XII' is worthy of his reputation, and is distinguished by the same acuteness and accuracy of knowledge, appreciation of a boy's difficulties and ingenuity and resource in meeting them, which we have on other occasions had reason praise in these pages."—The Academy.

"As masterly in its clearly divided preface and appendices as in the sound and independent character of its annotations. . . . There is a great deal more in the notes than mere compilation and suggestion. . . . No difficulty is left unnoticed or unhandled."—Saturday Review.

VERGIL. AENEID. LIBRI IX. X. in one volume. 3s.

VERGIL. AENEID. LIBRI X., XI., XII. in one volume. 3s. 6d.

VERGIL. BUCOLICS. With Introduction and Notes, by the same Editor. 15. 6d.

VERGIL. GEORGICS. LIBRI I. II. By the same Editor. 2s.

VERGIL. GEORGICS. LIBRI III. IV. By the same Editor. 2s.

"This volume, which completes the Pitt Press edition of Virgil's Georgics, is distinguished by the same admirable judgment and first-rate scholarship as are conspicuous in the former volume and in the 'Aeneid' by the same talented editor."—Athenæum.

III. FRENCH.

CORNEILLE. LA SUITE DU MENTEUR. A Comedy in Five Acts. Edited with Fontenelle's Memoir of the Author, Voltaire's Critical Remarks, and Notes Philological and Historical. By the late GUSTAVE MASSON. 2s.

DE BONNECHOSE. LAZARE HOCHÉ. With Four Maps, Introduction and Commentary, by C. COLBECK, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Revised Edition. 2s.

D'HARLEVILLE. LE VIEUX CÉLIBATAIRE. A Comedy. With a Biographical Memoir, and Grammatical, Literary and Historical Notes. By GUSTAVE MASSON. 2s.

DE LAMARTINE. JEANNE D'ARC. With a Map and Notes Historical and Philological and a Vocabulary by Rev. A. C. CLAPIN, M.A., St John's College, Cambridge, and Bachelier-ès-Lettres of the University of France. Enlarged Edition. 2s.

DE VIGNY. LA CANNE DE JONC. Edited with Notes by Rev. H. A. BULL, M.A. 2s.

ERCKMANN-CHATRIAN. LA GUERRE. With Map, Introduction and Commentary by the Rev. A. C. CLAPIN, M.A. 3s.

LA BARONNE DE STAËL-HOLSTEIN. LE DIRECTOIRE. (Considérations sur la Révolution Française. Troisième et quatrième parties.) With a Critical Notice of the Author, a Chronological Table, and Notes Historical and Philological, by G. MASSON, B.A., and G. W. PROTHERO, M.A. Revised and enlarged Edition. 2s.

"Prussia under Frederick the Great, and France under the Directory, bring us face to face respectively with periods of history which it is right should be known thoroughly, and which are well treated in the Pitt Press volumes. The latter in particular, an extract from the world-known work of Madame de Staël on the French Revolution, is beyond all praise for the excellence both of its style and of its matter."—Times.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

LA BARONNE DE STAËL-HOLSTEIN. DIX AN-

NÉES D'EXIL. LIVRE II. CHAPITRES 1—8. With a Biographical Sketch of the Author, a Selection of Poetical Fragments by Madame de Staël's Contemporaries, and Notes Historical and Philological. By GUSTAVE MASSON and G. W. PROTHERO, M.A. Revised and enlarged edition. 2s.

LEMERCIER. FRÉDÉGONDE ET BRUNEHAUT. A

Tragedy in Five Acts. Edited with Notes, Genealogical and Chronological Tables, a Critical Introduction and a Biographical Notice. By GUSTAVE MASSON. 2s.

MOLIÈRE. LE BOURGEOIS GENTILHOMME, Comédie-Ballet en Cinq Actes. (1670.) With a life of Moliere and Grammatical and Philological Notes. By Rev. A. C. CLAPIN. Revised Edition. 1s. 6d.

MOLIÈRE. L'ÉCOLE DES FEMMES. Edited with Inroduction and Notes by GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A. 2s. 6d.

"Mr Saintsbury's clear and scholarly notes are rich in illustration of the valuable kind that vivifies textual comment and criticism."—Saturday Review.

PIRON. LA METROMANIE, A Comedy, with a Biographical Memoir, and Grammatical, Literary and Historical Notes. By G. MASSON. 2s.

SAINTE-BEUVE. M. DARU (Causeries du Lundi, Vol. IX.).

With Biographical Sketch of the Author, and Notes Philological and Historical. By GUSTAVE MASSON. 2s.

SAINTINE. LA PICCIOLA. The Text, with Introduction, Notes and Map, by Rev. A. C. CLAPIN. 2s.

SCRIBE AND LEGOUVÉ. BATAILLE DE DAMES.

Edited by Rev. H. A. BULL, M.A. 2s.

SCRIBE. LE VERRE D'EAU. With a Biographical

Memoir, and Grammatical, Literary and Historical Notes. By C. COLBECK, M.A. 2s.

"It may be national prejudice, but we consider this edition far superior to any of the series which hitherto have been edited exclusively by foreigners. Mr Colbeck seems better to understand the wants and difficulties of an English boy. The etymological notes especially are admirable. . . . The historical notes and introduction are a piece of thorough honest work."—Journal of Education.

SÉDAINE. LE PHILOSOPHE SANS LE SAVOIR.

Edited with Notes by Rev. H. A. BULL, M.A., late Master at Wellington College. 2s.

THIERRY. LETTRES SUR L'HISTOIRE DE FRANCE

(XIII.—XXIV.). By GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A. and G. W. PROTHERO, M.A. With Map. 2s. 6d.

THIERRY. RÉCITS DES TEMPS MÉROVINGIENS

I—III. Edited by GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A. Univ. Gallic., and A. R. ROPES, M.A. With Map. 3s.

VILLEMAIN. LASCARIS, ou LES GRECS DU XV^E.

SIÈCLE, Nouvelle Historique, with a Biographical Sketch of the Author, a Selection of Poems on Greece, and Notes Historical and Philological. By GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A. 2s.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

VOLTAIRE. HISTOIRE DU SIÈCLE DE LOUIS XIV.

Part I. Chaps. I.—XIII. Edited with Notes Philological and Historical, Biographical and Geographical Indices, etc. by G. MASSON, B.A. Univ. Gallie., and G. W. PROTHERO, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

— Part II. Chaps. XIV.—XXIV. With Three Maps of the Period. By the same Editors. 2s. 6d.

— Part III. Chap. XXV. to the end. By the same Editors. 2s. 6d.

XAVIER DE MAISTRE. LA JEUNE SIBÉRIENNE.

LE LÉPREUX DE LA CITÉ D'AOSTE. With Biographical Notice, Critical Appreciations, and Notes. By G. MASSON, B.A. 2s.

IV. GERMAN.BALLADS ON GERMAN HISTORY. Arranged and

Annotated by W. WAGNER, Ph.D., late Professor at the Johanneum, Hamburg. 2s.

"It carries the reader rapidly through some of the most important incidents connected with the German race and name, from the invasion of Italy by the Visigoths under their King Alaric, down to the Franco-German War and the installation of the present Emperor. The notes supply very well the connecting links between the successive periods, and exhibit in its various phases of growth and progress, or the reverse, the vast unwieldy mass which constitutes modern Germany." — Times.

BENEDIX. DOCTOR WESPE. Lustspiel in fünf Aufzügen. Edited with Notes by KARL HERMANN BREUL, M.A. 3s.

FREYTAG. DER STAAT FRIEDRICHS DES GROSSEN. With Notes. By WILHELM WAGNER, Ph.D. 2s.

GERMAN DACTYLIC POETRY. Arranged and Annotated by the same Editor. 3s.

Goethe's Knabenjahre. (1749—1759.) GOETHE'S BOYHOOD: being the First Three Books of his Autobiography. Arranged and Annotated by the same Editor. 2s.

GOETHE'S HERMANN AND DOROTHEA. With an Introduction and Notes. By the same Editor. Revised edition by J. W. CARTMELL, M.A. 3s. 6d.

"The notes are among the best that we know, with the reservation that they are often too abundant." — Academy.

GUTZKOW. ZOPF UND SCHWERT. Lustspiel in fünf Aufzügen von. With a Biographical and Historical Introduction, English Notes, and an Index. By H. J. WOLSTENHOLME, B.A. (Lond.). 3s. 6d.

"We are glad to be able to notice a careful edition of K. Gutzkow's amusing comedy 'Zopf und Schwert' by Mr H. J. Wolstenholme. . . . These notes are abundant and contain references to standard grammatical works." — Academy.

HAUFF. DAS BILD DES KAISERS. Edited by KARL HERMANN BREUL, M.A., Ph.D. 3s.

HAUFF. DAS WIRTHSHAUS IM SPESSART. Edited by A. SCHLOTTMANN, Ph.D., late Assistant Master at Uppingham School. 3s. 6d.

HAUFF. DIE KARAVANE. Edited with Notes by A. SCHLOTTMANN, Ph.D. 3s. 6d.

IMMERMANN. DER OBERHOF. A Tale of Westphalian Life. With a Life of Immermann and English Notes, by WILHELM WAGNER, Ph.D., late Professor at the Johanneum, Hamburg. 3s.

KOHLRAUSCH. Das Jahr 1813 (THE YEAR 1813). With English Notes. By W. WAGNER. 2s.

LESSING AND GELLERT. SELECTED FABLES. Edited with Notes by KARL HERMANN BREUHL, M.A., Lecturer in German at the University of Cambridge. 3s.

MENDELSSOHN'S LETTERS. Selections from. Edited by JAMES SIMS, M.A. 3s.

RAUMER. Der erste Kreuzzug (THE FIRST CRUSADE). Condensed from the Author's 'History of the Hohenstaufen', with a life of RAUMER, two Plans and English Notes. By W. WAGNER. 2s.

"Certainly no more interesting book could be made the subject of examinations. The story of the First Crusade has an undying interest. The notes are, on the whole, good."—Educational Times.

RIEHL. CULTURGESCHICHTLICHE NOVELLEN. With Grammatical, Philological, and Historical Notes, and a Complete Index, by H. J. WOLSTENHOLME, B.A. (Lond.). 4s. 6d.

UHLAND. ERNST, HERZOG VON SCHWABEN. With Introduction and Notes. By H. J. WOLSTENHOLME, B.A. (Lond.), Lecturer in German at Newnham College, Cambridge. 3s. 6d.

V. ENGLISH.

ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY. A SKETCH OF, FROM THALES TO CICERO, by JOSEPH B. MAYOR, M.A. 3s. 6d.

"Professor Mayor contributes to the Pitt Press Series A Sketch of Ancient Philosophy in which he has endeavoured to give a general view of the philosophical systems illustrated by the genius of the masters of metaphysical and ethical science from Thales to Cicero. In the course of his sketch he takes occasion to give concise analyses of Plato's Republic, and of the Ethics and Politics of Aristotle; and these abstracts will be to some readers not the least useful portions of the book."—The Guardian.

ARISTOTLE. OUTLINES OF THE PHILOSOPHY OF.

Compiled by EDWIN WALLACE, M.A., LL.D. (St Andrews), late Fellow of Worcester College, Oxford. Third Edition Enlarged. 4s. 6d.

"A judicious selection of characteristic passages, arranged in paragraphs, each of which is preceded by a masterly and perspicuous English analysis."—Scotsman.

"Gives in a comparatively small compass a very good sketch of Aristotle's teaching."—Sat. Review.

BACON'S HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF KING HENRY VII. With Notes by the Rev. J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D. 3s.

COWLEY'S ESSAYS. With Introduction and Notes. By the Rev. J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D., Norrisian Professor of Divinity; Fellow of St Catharine's College. 4s.

GEOGRAPHY, ELEMENTARY COMMERCIAL. A Sketch of the Commodities and the Countries of the World. By H. R. MILL, Sc.D., F.R.S.E., Lecturer on Commercial Geography in the Heriot-Watt College, Edinburgh. 1s.

MORE'S HISTORY OF KING RICHARD III. Edited with Notes, Glossary and Index of Names. By J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D. to which is added the conclusion of the History of King Richard III. as given in the continuation of Hardyng's Chronicle, London, 1543. 3s. 6d.

London: C. F. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

MORE'S UTOPIA. With Notes by the Rev. J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D. 3s. 6d.

"It was originally written in Latin and does not find a place on ordinary bookshelves. A very great boon has therefore been conferred on the general English reader by the managers of the Pitt Press Series, in the issue of a convenient little volume of More's Utopia not in the original Latin, but in the quaint English Translation thereof made by Raphe Robynson, which adds a linguistic interest to the intrinsic merit of the work. . . . All this has been edited in a most complete and scholarly fashion by Dr J. R. Lumby, the Norrisian Professor of Divinity, whose name alone is a sufficient warrant for its accuracy. It is a real addition to the modern stock of classical English literature."—Guardian.

THE TWO NOBLE KINSMEN, edited with Introduction and Notes by the Rev. Professor SKEAT, Litt.D., formerly Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. 3s. 6d.

"This edition of a play that is well worth study, for more reasons than one, by so careful a scholar as Mr Skeat, deserves a hearty welcome."—Athenæum.

"Mr Skeat is a conscientious editor, and has left no difficulty unexplained."—Times.

VI. EDUCATIONAL SCIENCE.

COMENIUS. JOHN AMOS, Bishop of the Moravians. His Life and Educational Works, by S. S. LAURIE, M.A., F.R.S.E., Professor of the Institutes and History of Education in the University of Edinburgh. New Edition, revised. 3s. 6d.

EDUCATION. THREE LECTURES ON THE PRACTICE OF. I. On Marking, by H. W. EVE, M.A. II. On Stimulus, by A. SIDGWICK, M.A. III. On the Teaching of Latin Verse Composition, by E. A. ABBOTT, D.D. 2s.

LOCKE ON EDUCATION. With Introduction and Notes by the Rev. R. H. QUICK, M.A. 3s. 6d.

"The work before us leaves nothing to be desired. It is of convenient form and reasonable price, accurately printed, and accompanied by notes which are admirable. There is no teacher too young to find this book interesting; there is no teacher too old to find it profitable."—The School Bulletin, New York.

MILTON'S TRACTATE ON EDUCATION. A facsimile reprint from the Edition of 1673. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. 2s.

"A separate reprint of Milton's famous letter to Master Samuel Hartlib was a desideratum, and we are grateful to Mr Browning for his elegant and scholarly edition, to which is prefixed the careful résumé of the work given in his 'History of Educational Theories'."—Journal of Education.

MODERN LANGUAGES. LECTURES ON THE TEACHING OF, delivered in the University of Cambridge in the Lent Term, 1887. By C. COLBECK, M.A., Assistant Master of Harrow School. 2s.

ON STIMULUS. A Lecture delivered for the Teachers' Training Syndicate at Cambridge, May 1882, by A. SIDGWICK, M.A. 1s.

TEACHER. GENERAL AIMS OF THE, AND FORM MANAGEMENT. Two Lectures delivered in the University of Cambridge in the Lent Term, 1883, by Archdeacon FARRAR, D.D., and R. B. POOLE, B.D. Head Master of Bedford Modern School. 1s. 6d.

TEACHING. THEORY AND PRACTICE OF. By the Rev. EDWARD THIRING, M.A., late Head Master of Uppingham School and Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. New Edition. 4s. 6d.

"Any attempt to summarize the contents of the volume would fail to give our readers a taste of the pleasure that its perusal has given us."—Journal of Education.

[Other Volumes are in preparation.]

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria Lane.

University of Cambridge.

LOCAL EXAMINATIONS.

Examination Papers, for various years, with the Regulations for the Examination. Demy 8vo. 2s. each, or by Post 2s. 2d.

Class Lists, for various years, Boys 1s., Girls 6d.

Annual Reports of the Syndicate, with Supplementary Tables showing the success and failure of the Candidates. 2s. each, by Post 2s. 3d.

HIGHER LOCAL EXAMINATIONS.

Examination Papers for various years, to which are added the Regulations for the Examination. Demy 8vo. 2s. each, by Post 2s. 2d.

Class Lists, for various years. 1s. each. By Post 1s. 2d.

Reports of the Syndicate. Demy 8vo. 1s., by Post 1s. 2d.

LOCAL LECTURES SYNDICATE.

Calendar for the years 1875—80. Fcap. 8vo. cloth. 2s.; for 1880—81. 1s.

TEACHERS' TRAINING SYNDICATE.

Examination Papers for various years, to which are added the Regulations for the Examination. Demy 8vo. 6d., by Post 7d.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY REPORTER.

Published by Authority.

Containing all the Official Notices of the University, Reports of Discussions in the Schools, and Proceedings of the Cambridge Philosophical, Antiquarian and Philological Societies. 3d. weekly.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY EXAMINATION PAPERS.

These Papers are published in occasional numbers every Term, and in volumes for the Academical year.

VOL. XVI. Parts	44 to 65.	PAPERS for the Year	1886—87, 15s. cloth.
VOL. XVII. "	65 to 86.	" "	1887—88, 15s. cloth.
VOL. XVIII. "	87 to 107.	" "	1888—89, 15s. cloth.

Oxford and Cambridge Schools Examinations.

Papers set in the Examination for Certificates, July, 1888. 2s. 6d.

List of Candidates who obtained Certificates at the Examination held in 1888; and Supplementary Tables. 6d.

Regulations of the Board for 1889. 9d.

Regulations for the Commercial Certificate, 1889. 3d.

Report of the Board for the year ending Oct. 31, 1888. 1s.

Studies from the Morphological Laboratory in the University of Cambridge. Edited by ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. Vol. II. Part I. Royal 8vo. 10s. Vol. II. Part II. 7s. 6d. Vol. III. Part I. 7s. 6d. Vol. III. Part II. 7s. 6d. Vol. IV. Part I. 12s. 6d. Vol. IV. Part II. 10s. Vol. IV. Part III. 5s.

London: C. J. CLAY AND SONS,

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,
AVE MARIA LANE.

GLASGOW: 263, ARGYLE STREET.

PA 6231
32 1332

"Cicero, Marcus Tullius
pro L. Rubrio

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

